Heart disease in children explodes after covid vaccine

THE greatest crime ever committed by an Irish government - and there have been many - will not be concealed from the Irish people for much longer. As hard as the HSE tries to cover up the horrifying impact of the covid vaccine on Irish children, there is no containing the staggering toll of sudden deaths in young people.

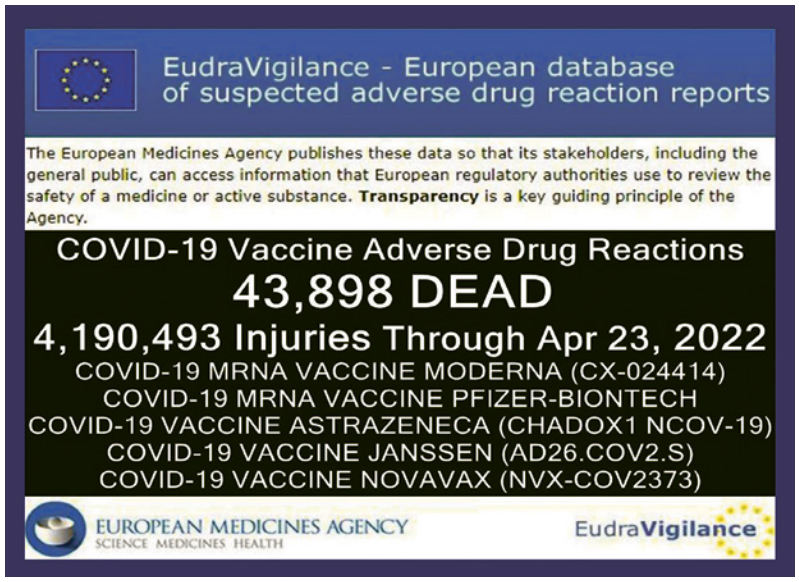

Almost daily, the faces of sporty teenagers and newborn infants appear on the pages of RIP.ie: perfectly healthy children struck down by a fatal heart attack, stroke or sudden unexplained death.

Every time, the pharma-funded mainstream media conspire to cover up the obvious cause with their sickening tributes and platitudes attacking those with the humanity to ask why.

Why are so many healthy children dying? What has changed in their lives to cause it? We all know the answer but many still do not have the courage to say it out loud because they know they too may meet the same fate.

American cardiologist Dr Peter McCullough spoke recently about the astonishing lack of concern and outrage expressed by family members when young people die after the vaccine. He put it down to the mass psychosis that has gripped our nation since the advent of covid, explaining that these people are in a zombie-like state where they are emotionally inert to the death of a loved one because it has been caused by a hypodermic needle.

It's a classic case of cognitive dissonance and denial often witnessed in parents whose perfectly healthy toddler becomes violently autistic in the aftermath of the MMR vaccine. They know what changed their child overnight but cannot state it publicly because they are the ones responsible.

And so it is with the covid vaccine: how many children whose lives have been wiped out were urged to take it by their reckless parents? They will have to live with that for the rest of their lives. If only they knew the peace and strength they would feel if they could find the courage to speak out and save other young lives. At least their child's death would not have been in vain.

But soon the dam of silence will burst because the injury levels are too alarming to ignore.

In the US, the number of injuries and deaths recorded in the government database of Vaccine Adverse Events Reporting System (VAERS) following covid vaccines has soared above 1.2 million cases.

This represents an increase of 3008%.

In the world of sport, there has been at least 930 post-vaccine heart attacks and more than 620 deaths.

As of March 24, 2022, VAERS had received 2,323 reports of heart inflammation among people ages 30 years and younger who received the vaccine.

Youngsters involved in the GAA - which took a draconian approach to vaccination - have been dying at a terrifying rate.

RTE and the rest of the mainstream media, which could not exist without Big Pharma/HSE funding, should be interrogating the sporting organisation as to why so many of its young members are dropping dead. But instead they close ranks refusing to even acknowledge the sheer numbers who are dying and try to normalise sudden death, heart disease and strokes in children or cynically imply that the child committed suicide.

It is a crime which will seal their demise when the public finally learn the truth about how they were duped into taking this lethal experimental drug.

Even the manufacturers admit in the small print that their vaccines have side effects.

Pfizer released a document listing over 9 pages of over 1200 adverse events of special interest.

Instead of penalising them for their dangerous products, the government have granted them legal immunity to protect themselves against future action by injured parties. This in itself should be enough to raise alarm bells. Most parents wouldn't buy a child's bike without a guarantee yet so many are willing to put a syringe into their arms which has multiple side effects including death and has full immunity from legal recourse.

Official data published from the US Center for Disease Control has revealed that 106 children have died following vaccination. The deaths have been reported among 12,548 serious adverse events among children ranging from hospitalisation to permanent disability.

As of April 22nd 2022, there have been 48,033 adverse reactions to the Covid-19 injections among children, of which 12,548 were considered serious resulting in hospitalisation, permanent disability or death. Sadly, 106 children have lost their lives.

This does not however paint the full picture, because the CDC estimated just 1 to 10% of adverse reactions are actually reported to VAERS. Therefore, it's possible that over 10,600 children have sadly lost their lives due to Covid-19 vaccination.

There has been a 86% rise in deaths among male children compared to the same period in 2020 with one week seeing an increase as high as 600%.

The British Office for National Statistics has revealed that children are up to 52 times more likely to die following the vaccine than those who have not had it.

The body in Ireland charged with protecting the public from untested drugs - the Health Products Regulatory Authority (HPRA) headed by Dr Lorraine Nolan has recklessly allowed the vaccine to be given to children despite being fully aware of its dangers.

Its website openly admits that myocarditis and pericarditis are potential side effects, especially among young males, yet they continue to promote it.

Myocarditis is inflammation of the heart muscle, whereas pericarditis is inflammation of the protective sacs surrounding the heart. Both are extremely serious conditions due to the vital role the heart plays in keeping a person alive, and the fact that the heart muscle cannot regenerate. Serious myocarditis can lead to cardiac arrest and knock years off a person's life.

The fact that myocarditis is a confirmed side effect of the Covid-19 vaccines; especially among younger males, and there is a significant increase in the number of male children dying since they were offered the Covid-19 vaccine is clearly a direct consequence of administering this experimental gene therapy to children.

The data is there for all to see.

Justice is coming for the criminal politicians, Pharma, doctors, nurses, journalists and others involved in this genocide. It may take time but when the masses eventually come to their senses and realise what has happened, there will be no escaping their wrath.

The healthiest people in the world are dropping dead

Update on athlete fatalities

IN March, Australian world number one tennis player Ash Barty retired at age 25. Previously, she withdrew from two US tournaments due to health concerns.

World number two golfer and 2020 Olympic gold medalist, Nelly Korda (23), announced that she was diagnosed with blood clots and was recovering at her home in Florida.

In February, 17-year-old Danish golf prodigy Viggo Sorensen, winner of the Emirates Golf Federation Order of Merit, suffered a sudden cardiac arrest and died.

In late March, Danish handball player Mikkel Hansen (34), one of the best handball players in the world, suffered phlebitis (vein inflammation) and pulmonary embolism, ending his season.

In February, French number one tennis player Gael Monfils (35, ATP #22) suffered an adverse reaction to his booster vaccination and had to withdraw from the Davis Cup.

French tennis player Jeremy Chardy (34, former top 30) had to suspend his season after a vaccine reaction in the summer of 2021. Chardy returned to practice in January, saying he "regretted getting vaccinated".

In mid-April, 27-year-old Italian professional swimmer, Mariasofia Paparo, suffered a cardiac arrest or a heart attack and died. The Italian "Super Green Pass" required proof of vaccination.

Former Manchester City and FC Barcelona striker Sergio Aguero (33) suffered a vaccine heart injury in 2021. In February 2022, he revealed that he had to end his career: "If I try to run, I lose breath. I just feel like my heart doesn't work properly."

In late March, Newcastle United goalkeeper Martin Dubravka (33) was forced to withdraw from Slovakia's international team after being diagnosed with a heart condition.

Since late 2021, several German soccer players, including Bayern Munich's Alphonso Davies (21), suffered heart inflammation and had to rest for several weeks or months.

In March, Belgian cyclist Cedric Baekeland (28) died of a heart attack during a training camp in Mallorca; Scottish cyclist John Paul (also 28) also died of a heart attack; Italian top cyclist Sonny Colbrelli (31) suffered a cardiac arrest after crossing the finish line during the Volta a Catalunya cycling race. In February, Belgian cyclist Tim Declercq (32), called "the tractor", suffered post-vaccination pericarditis.

In Switzerland, marathon champion Fabienne Schlumpf (31) suffered myocarditis after her booster vaccination; Olympic sprinter Sarah Atcho (26) suffered pericarditis after her booster; and soccer player Michael Perrier suffered a cardiac arrest and had to end his career.

In mid-March, West Indies' cricket player Shamilia Connell (29) collapsed during a World Cup game. Also in mid-March, European Rugby League administrator Tiziano Franchini (44) died from a suspected heart attack. Former wrestling world champion "Triple H" (52) was vaccinated in April 2021 and suffered heart failure in September, but it was reported that this was due to either a "genetic heart issue" or "viral pneumonia"; in March 2022, he announced his retirement.

In late March, a total of 15 tennis players had to retire from the Miami Open, including tournament favorites Paula Badosa and Jannik Skinner. Some of these players reported breathing or performance problems. In mid-March, only 59 of 154 cyclists finished the Paris-Nice cycling race. While this had various causes, it was reported that "the state of health of the peloton is not good".

Mask microplastic found deep in lungs

MICROPLASTIC fibres used in masks have been found deep in the lower lungs of living human beings in almost every person sampled in a recent study by scientists at Hull York Medical School in the UK.

The study discovered microplastic particles – present in many Covid masks – in the lung tissue of 11 out of 13 patients undergoing surgery.

Polypropylene ("PP") and polyethylene terephthalate ("PET") were the most prevalent substances present in the lungs.

Some of the microscopic plastic fragments and fibres discovered – in patients undergoing surgery whose lung tissue they sampled – were two millimetres long.

The research used samples of healthy lung tissue from next to the lung region targeted for surgery. It analysed particles as small as 0.003mm in size and used spectroscopy to identify plastic types. It also used control samples to account for the level of background contamination.

The plastic dust and microscopic debris comprise the same plastics used to manufacture the ubiquitous surgical masks worn by hundreds of millions of people around the world as mandated by governments to halt the Covid "pandemic."

The material most commonly used to make these masks is PP. PP fabric is made from a 'thermoplastic' polymer, meaning that it's easy to work with and shape at high temperatures.

Blue surgical masks can also be made of polystyrene, polycarbonate, polyethylene, or polyester, all of which are types of fabrics derived from thermoplastic polymers.

Disposable blue masks continue to litter every street in Ireland as terrified people continue to wear them.

Microplastics were also detected in human blood in March 2022, showing the particles can travel around the human body and may become embedded in organs. The impact on health is still to be determined.

"Our study is the first indication that we have polymer particles in our blood – it's a breakthrough result," said Prof Dick Vethaak, an ecotoxicologist at Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam in the Netherlands. "We also know in general that babies and young children are more vulnerable to chemical and particle exposure," he said. "That worries me a lot."

A study from 2020 also found that wearing masks poses microplastic inhalation risk and reusing them increases the danger.

The truth will set us free

'THE past was erased, the erasure forgotten, the lie became the truth.' - George Orwell 1984.

What a dystopian world we are bequeathing our children - lies have become the accepted truth while the truth is censored, vilified, excoriated, mocked and above all, feared by the masses.

The Light paper will always endeavour to bring readers a full and broad picture of what is going on today - outside of the captured corporate media unimessage which many can see is a well-honed propaganda machine, capable of inducing mass hypnosis and false beliefs in great swathes of the population, as we have all seen in the last two years.

Those who are still hopelessly naive to both the rulers control over nearly every aspect of their lives, and the implanted thoughts they have been trained to regurgitate any time the subject of being controlled comes up, would do well to read and research our articles, and ask themselves when the rulers and their puppet politicians ever actually made things better for their families.

Everything that happens is by design - especially the rapidly rising cost of living; the banks, the corporations and the main political parties are not your friend, and never have been. Their plan is simple, and a factual conspiracy: to rule the world with everyone as slaves, incapable of making any important decisions in their own lives including where they live, how they work, how much energy they use, what they eat and where they can go.

This is what the UN's 'sustainable development goals', set out in the Agenda 2030 documents, and their smart cities/internet of everything/ digital society really mean - total control.

You don't need to take our word for it. All of the information is still available, if unlisted on major search engines and deleted from major platforms now, for anyone to research for themselves and use their own common sense to discern the verity of.

Once seen, the next question is: what can we do about it? The answer remains for the time being, quite a lot - but we are racing an ever-shrinking gap of light before the cell door firmly shuts and there is no way out for future generations: once everything goes digital, especially including currency, the game is over and freedom will be lost for ever. This is not hyperbole nor Chicken Little paranoia - the rulers' stated goal are to reduce and enslave the world's population, because they believe we are incapable of running our own lives, and living in harmony with each other - they have delgeated themselves the responsibility to manage us all.

Until it's over, there is still time to turn the tide. First, we can raise the alarm, which is exactly the raison d'etre of this newspaper, and many have been using it many different ways to help 'wake people up'. The information war should not be underestimated: once enough people know what's going on and can easily see the lies and deceptions being aimed at the public through the mass media without question, whatever action they are asked to take will be refused. Tyrants can give out all the orders they want, if no one obeys, their power is nullified.

Second, we can continue to build new ex-corporate and government structures, systems and networks which offer a cheaper, more direct and better service or product to people, to give people the choice between ever-decreasing quality and rising prices, and local, independent, trusted and far better value goods and servies which people actually need without being marketed to a hundred times a day.

Words and language and thoughts and knowledge are vital, and a variety of different opposing views is essential if we are to continue to have any kind of free and prosperous world.

Farmers being bribed to give it up

IT is hard to fathom the UK government's recent lump-sum-exit-scheme that effectively bribes farmers to retire and turn over their land to woodland, whilst a potential Global Food Crisis looms [IMF| Breitbart].

According to the United Kingdom Food Security Report 2021: Theme 2, just under half of the actual food on our plates is produced in the UK. Instead of encouraging growth, the government is doing the opposite! How will we now make up the deficit? In Spain and Greece supermarkets are already rationing food.

by CLARA WEISS

Even as Biden and Trudeau announce food shortages, farmers are being paid to stop farming. Chickens are now designated illegal animals, due to bird flu (diagnosed by fraudulent PCR test), also justifying millions being culled in the UK (with no plans to restock). The EU is culling livestock as they run out of animal feed and in the UK cows are being exterminated due to a lack of farmworkers because of Covid-19 - and the Netherlands is seriously considering a meat tax.

Bill Gates has invested in major vegan meat companies to produce synthetic burgers and bratwurst from GMO soy and plant-based GMO 'chicken' tacos. Gates has also quietly made himself the largest owner of farmland in the United States. For a man obsessed with monopoly control, the opportunity to also dominate food production to instate GMOs must seem irresistible.

Swathes of fertile land are being replanted with Solar Panels.

This is all part of a wider plan, long in the making, to 'rewild' and save the world from climate change. The rhetoric is compelling:

- Rewilding Britain - "can help reverse species extinction, tackle climate change and improve our overall health and wellbeing."
- Wildlands Project - "Mission to reconnect, restore and rewild North America so that life – in all its diversity – can thrive."
- Rewilding Europe - "Making Europe a Wilder Place."

Meanwhile, livestock will become extinct, heralding the end of meat production. Vast expanses of farmland and human habitat will disappear. Preserving our existing natural habitat, conservation and greening our deserts is clearly a priority for our survival – and can surely be achieved without the senseless slaughtering of hundreds of millions of livestock or the corralling of human beings into tightly packed smart cities of multi high-rise tenements, where sunlight, greenery and quality of life are in dire deficit.

Dozens of food plants destroyed by mysterious fires

FOOD shortages have been exacerbated by a string of fires, plane crashes and explosions at nearly two dozen food processing facilities across Canada and the US.

This year so far, at least 22 plants in America have burnt down. But the bizarre fires have also struck other parts of the world.

In April, in the Dutch town of Heusden, 43,000 chickens died in a massive fire that destroyed four chicken houses on a farm.

A massive blaze near Bessbrook in Northern Ireland farm killed hundreds of pigs in November 2021.

In October 2021, a large fire at a Fermanagh poultry farm in Northern Ireland killed 16,000 birds.

Last September, the Offaly yoghurt plant Glenisk suffered a devastating fire in which "basically everything" was lost.

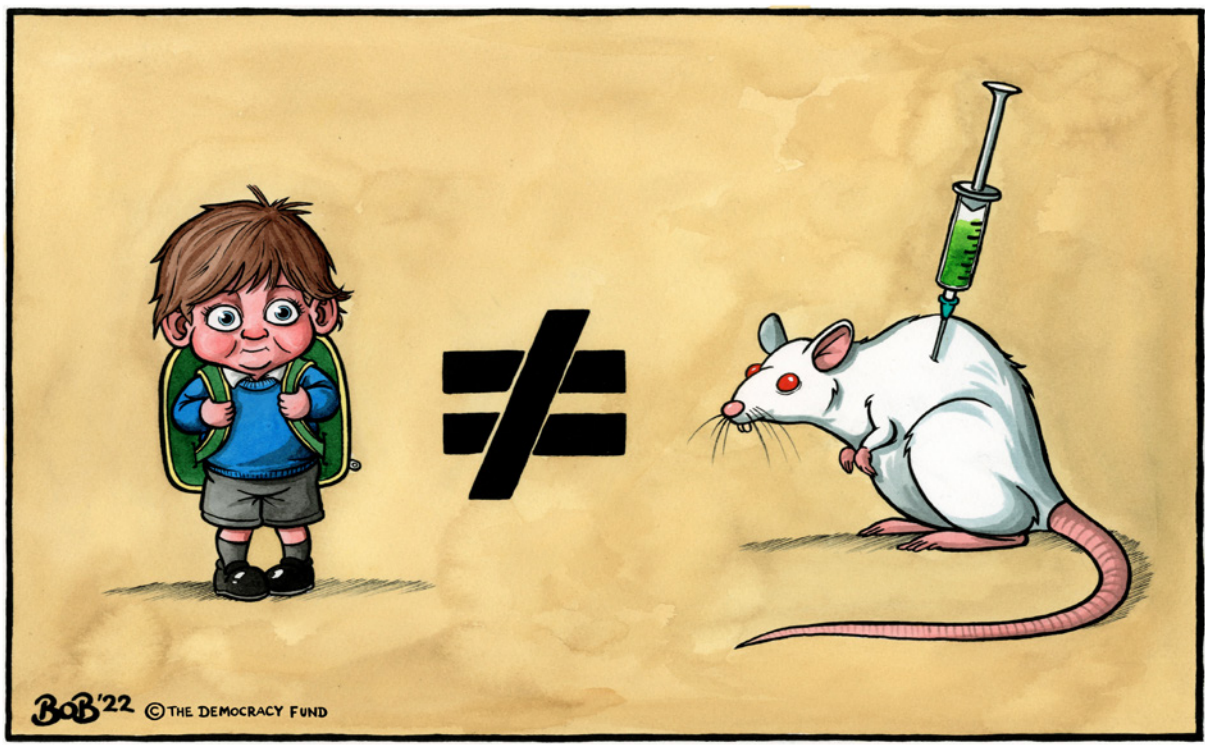

In March, a fire at a poultry farm in India killed 3,500 chickens, destroying the entire farm.

Another poultry farm in India was also hit by fire in March killing 8,500 chicks.

In July 2021, a deadly fire at a Bangladesh food processing factory kills at least 52 people.

Another fire at a poultry house in East Yorkshire, England in July 2021 killed 50,000 chickens.

In April 2021, over 55,000 pigs were killed after a fire broke out at a German pig farm.

Is geoengineering causing warming?

Look up... Whats that in our skies?

LIFE on Earth exists in a complex and fragile state of mutually-dependent dynamic equilibrium between and among biota and the physical environment. Any perturbation of that equilibrium is apt to upset this delicate balance with potentially devastating consequences for numerous species, including humans.

Since the beginning of the industrial age, humans have inadvertently and materially altered our planet. Early on the effects were localized, as exemplified by the sooty and later smog conditions in cities worldwide, and by regional deforestations around the globe. As we progressed technologically our capability for environmental destruction kept growing [1]. In many cities the air is now unsafe to breathe, plastic wastes choke our oceans, airliners pollute the atmosphere with combustion products from jet fuel and its additives, land surfaces are increasingly paved over, forests continue to be eliminated, and massive fossil fuel burning produces unnatural heat and exhaust gases.

This list is not exhaustive. Collectively, we humans have not yet learned to live in harmony with our world. In addition to these unintended assaults on our environment, there is an intentional one, referred to as geoengineering, which is potentially more harmful than all other assaults.

Geoengineering may be defined as "the deliberate large-scale manipulation of the environment including weather and climate manipulation." The basis for geoengineering stems from cloud seeding experiments in 1946-47. It was discovered that adding dry ice (frozen CO2) or silver iodide to clouds could aid in the nucleation of rain or snow. Development of the technology to control weather for use as a weapon of war began with that discovery [2,3] and has proceeded in secret ever since.

From 1967 to 1972 Operation Popeye involved cloud seeding with the intention of extending the monsoon season over the Ho Chi Minh Trail to impede transport of troops and supplies during the Vietnam War [3,4]. But causing clouds to dump rain or snow more-or-less at will was just the first step. The military wanted to fully control the weather as a weapon of war, as was later described in the 1996 U.S. Air Force document: "Weather as a Force Multiplier: Owning the Weather in 2025 [5]". In retrospect that document should have been cause for alarm. Since the end of World War II, the U.S. military has been single-minded in its scientific pursuits with no sense of responsibility for the wellbeing of either civilian populations or the environment. For example, in pursuit of its nuclear warfare technology, atmospheric detonations of more than one hundred nuclear devices were generally undertaken without regard for the health of unsuspecting residents downwind [6]; without regard for the environment, as evidenced by exploding a fission bomb in the Van Allen belt; and, on a more personal scale by telling pregnant women they were receiving vitamins when instead they were being given radioactive iron; or by injecting newborn infants with radioactive iodine-131 [6-9].

After learning how to make clouds produce rain or snow more-or-less on demand, the next technological step was to learn how to inhibit rainfall to bring drought and starvation to a perceived enemy nation. For at least thirty years experiments were conducted in the lower atmosphere (troposphere) that involved jets spraying undisclosed substances which left particulate trails across the sky [10] that were witnessed by millions (Fig. 1). These trails at first superficially resemble contrails, which are ice crystals formed from aircraft exhaust. Contrails are formed, however, only in very humid environments, with temperatures low enough to sustain the saturation vapour pressure with respect to ice, and with sufficient moisture content in the exhaust gases [11,12]. Contrails rapidly become invisible by evaporation whereas particulate trails spread out to sometimes briefly form artificial cirrus-like clouds before further spreading to form a white haze in the sky.

For at least fifteen years covert weather/climate modification activities have been taking place with ever-increasing scale and frequency that involve spraying pollutant particles into the troposphere. The scientific community has been grossly remiss in ignoring the now near-daily, near-universal spraying of particulate-pollution matter into the troposphere, which evidence indicates is coal fly ash, a substance containing toxins injurious to virtually all biota, including humans.

Not only does the spraying contaminate the environment, but the aerial placement of this particulate-pollution causes warming and alters weather patterns which can cause damage or injury to human health

For at least 15 years, covert weather modification activities have been taking place with ever-increasing scale and frequency and even loss of life, disrupt food production, and create a pestilent-ridden, unhealthy environment on a worldwide scale.

Yet the consequences of this weather/climate modification geoengineering activity have not been taken into account by any of the climate change models evaluated by the United Nations' Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), a fact that calls into question not only the findings of that organization, but its moral authority as well.

I hold that scientists, because of their abilities and training, have the responsibility to benefit mankind and advance civilization [21]. I therefore chose to apply scientific methods to ascertain the nature of the main substance being sprayed into the troposphere [13,22,23] and discovered three independent lines of evidence that the tropospheric geoengineering particulate-pollution consists mainly of coal combustion fly ash. When coal is burned by electric-power utilities, the heavy ash settles and the "fly ash" goes up the smokestacks where in Western nations it is electrostatically trapped and sequestered as this ash-portion contains most of the toxic heavy metals that were incorporated in the coal.

When sprayed into the troposphere, coal fly ash inhibits rain/snow fall, absorbs atmospheric moisture, enhances the electrical conductivity of atmospheric moisture, warms the atmosphere, and blocks radiation from the surface into space.

When the coal fly ash, with its typically dark gray colour settles to Earth, it absorbs sunlight and changes the albedo of snow and ice which aids in its melting. In other words, in addition to causing drought, when sprayed into the troposphere on a near-global, near-daily basis as at present, the aerosolized coal fly ash warms the Earth, causing deliberate 'anthropogenic global warming' of a different type than that allegedly caused by greenhouse gases.

Jet aircraft that spray coal fly ash into the troposphere are part of a covert program and operate from undisclosed airbases. On or about February 14, 2016, an aircraft presumably operating out of Selfridge Air National Guard Base in Michigan (USA) momentarily released a small portion of its payload which reportedly fell on residential properties in Harrison Township, Michigan (USA).

The material was sampled and analysed by officials from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. The results of those analyses provide evidence of a deliberate operation to melt ice and snow, which is consistent with the hypothesis that aerosolised coal fly ash is being used to enhance global warming.

Interestingly, one component of the airdrop material, inferred here from analytical results, is coal fly ash. Scientists who study glaciers should be mindful of the evidence presented here, and should look for instances where such matter, referred to as synthetic cryoconite, or proto-cryoconite, might have been dropped.

The coal fly ash component of the airdrop material further pollutes the environment with toxic heavy metals. Considerable time, effort and expense was required to develop the air-drop material, that I refer to as synthetic cryoconite, or protocryoconite, and to develop and test the technology to disperse that material from the air in a systematic and effective manner; consequently, it seems unlikely that this was simply a local operation. If so, this investigation reinforces the presumed intent of daily aerosol particulate spraying in the troposphere, observed worldwide, which has the consequence of causing global warming.

Scientists worldwide should call for, and indeed demand, a full and open investigation into these covert geoengineering activities whose potential impacts on Earth's climate system, the integrity of Earth's biota, and on human health may prove to be extremely hazardous.

ESG - unelected corporations making the rules

ESG uses economic force to drive a political agenda through corporate America. As Larry Fink, CEO of BlackRock, the largest investment manager in the world, so succinctly stated, "You have to force behaviors, and at BlackRock, we're forcing behaviors."

ESG: Environmental, Social and (corporate) Governance

by MARCUS BLACKETT & RICHARD HOUSE

BlackRock manages $10 trillion of other people's money. Other investment managers have trillions more. Unelected by anyone, they are using the might of other people's capital to drive a far-left agenda. Arguably, no one outside the Federal Government has more power, and few people outside the industry know what's going on.

As a state treasurer, I operate at the intersection of politics and capital markets, squarely where ESG resides. Many are afraid to speak out about it, but people need to understand the threat that it poses to our American system, one based on free-market capitalism and constitutional principles.

There's a small tech company in my state of Utah that employs fewer than 75 people. A Silicon Valley tech titan was a client. Call it Twoogle. Last year, Twoogle explained to the company that if they wanted to continue to do business with Twoogle, they would need to implement a whole range of policies.

For example, the Utah company would have to provide six months of full pay and benefits for maternity and paternity leave. The company responded that Utah's fertility rates are higher than other states, and offering the benefit to all employees would imperil the company financially. Since fewer than five employees served the Twoogle account, they asked if they could implement the policy for just those employees.

Twoogle said no, they must implement the benefit regardless of the financial impact.

That every employee knew what benefits the company offered before they agreed to work there was beside the point. The tech company was forced to drop Twoogle as a client, a serious blow.

And what about Twoogle? Presumably, they engaged the company because they had the best product at the best price. They, too, will pay a price for their policies when they move to the next-best provider. How is this good for Twoogle's shareholders

This is just one small example of how ESG plays out across our economy. Multiply it by a million.

ESG is a political scoring system for investors, with companies like S&P Global issuing ESG scores on corporations. It sounds great, right? In reality, ESG is dictatorship in capitalist clothing. Our banks, investment managers and corporations are all promoting ESG, cleverly lending ESG the veneer of free-market capitalism. But it is not capitalism.

Capitalism is freedom in an economic context. ESG is a system of force. ESG substitutes our pluralistic institutions for conformity to centralized power, one that makes up the rules as it goes. If you don't believe me, think about the indeterminate nature of ESG. There are two layers of subjectivity: the determination of the ESG factors themselves and the answers to those factors. If you ask people what the factors should be, you will get different answers depending on their shade of leftist politics.

Even if people agree on the factors, the answers as to what constitutes a "good" or a "bad" score for a particular factor also depends on whom you ask. Is British Petroleum "bad" because it sells oil or "good" because of its focus on developing alternatives?

This is an inherently political exercise, and ESG cedes power to the entities determining those two central questions. Government bureaucrats appear to be colluding with investment behemoths like BlackRock to make the agenda, and they use the threat of regulation and the power of our investment money to bully corporate America into carrying it out.

What would prevent new factors from being used as a weapon against the other side? For example, what if the government under different party control suddenly decided to use capital to favor donations to pro-life groups? I would oppose this on the same grounds. We need to keep our capital markets and businesses politically neutral.

Pension allocators, most of whom are government employees, are also in on the game. As one insider put it, they are "effectively creating law and enforcing it without voter input, debate, or even knowledge. Given their size, their standards flow downstream, changing everything."

Why, you may ask, is any of this a problem for the average person? Well, why are gas prices so high?

In the past, capital would have flowed to traditional energy companies to fund profitable projects. With oil prices so high, there are plenty of projects to choose from. But these projects find themselves on the wrong side of this administration's regulators and the ESG mob, so they don't get funded. The result is less supply and higher prices.

The misallocation of capital leads to vital industries dying on the vine. This is not merely inflationary, but also a national security threat. We see this playing out in Europe right now, their own early version of ESG having largely banished much-needed fossil fuels. When Russia invaded Ukraine, their moral assessment of fossil fuels and firearms flipped. There's no consistency with ESG.

When power is centralised, society suffers. Pluralistic institutions like free capital markets protect us from the tyranny of elite power.

On the other side of the ledger, ESG leads to asset bubbles in favored industries. The resulting bursts harm us all, as we saw in 2008 when the federal government forced banks to provide mortgages to high-risk borrowers in the name of social justice. The resulting defaults nearly brought down our economy.

ESG also leads to just plain bad investing, where high ESG scores trump mundane concerns like balance sheets and income statements. Solyndra, anyone?

If you're in a large pension plan, these mistakes are being made right now in your portfolio. You will see it in the form of lower returns, which we are witnessing in ESG funds this year. When entire industries—fossil fuels, tobacco, defense, etc.—are excluded from your portfolio, returns will naturally suffer.

A City of London fun manager told The Light anonymously that: "The ESG scores are created by the Index providers, and MSCI is the most dominant in this space. Index Funds (run by the likes of Blackrock, Vanguard, etc) are all transitioning away from typical passively managed funds to semi-passive funds utilising the ESG scoring system. They also use the Carbon Intensity score (CI) so that firms with high carbon emissions are omitted from the process. Generally speaking, asset managers utilize a quantitative approach whereby they will maximize the ESG score and minimize the CI score.

This has ramifications because it means that firms are no longer looking to maximize returns for investors, but rather invest in companies that are politically correct. As the article eloquently puts it, "the political weaponization of the corporate world". There is no real transparency how the scores are created and given that Asset Managers tend to rely on these scores rather than their own in-house research, it is essentially ceding central control of a large part of the investment decision making process to MSCI. Who (and how) at MSCI are they deeming whether a corporation is "good" or "bad"? Anyone with an ounce of common sense would realize that this is highly subjective and open to bias and/or monetary bias ("I'll give you a backhander if you give me a better score").

The performance of these ESG funds have underperformed the broader index (e.g. FTSE All-Share). Given that ESG funds command higher fees (around 0.1%) compared to a typical passively manged fund (0.02%) then everyone is laughing except for the people who are actually invested in the funds.

Every single person who owns financial investments (actively or passively manged funds) needs to contact their manager and demand that they are not invested in ESG products. This is especially important for people who own pension funds because a large portion of their pension will now be allocated to these type of funds (the pension fund manager would have rubber stamped it with the investment manager without your consent). It is also important to note that that ESG is expanding into the Fixed Income space (Corporate Bonds) and not just confined to equities.

If enough people put pressure on their investment / pension managers, then maybe we have a chance of ending this.

5G still being rolled out despite safety concerns

No one can say 5G is safe and yet local councils are rolling out 5G throughout the UK and without public consultation or consent.

by EILEEN O'CONNOR

THE UK Government recently launched the £1 billion shared rural network deal to build 5G throughout the countryside.

Relaxing planning laws for existing masts to upgrade to 5G and to allow the increase in height of masts up to 25 metres, with new masts to be built to a maximum of 30 metres, along with a host of smaller masts up to six metres in height above buildings. Councils are also encouraged to allow curb side infrastructure, such as antenna attached to lamp posts and bus shelters and all without prior approval to accelerate network upgrades with an aim to provide 5G coverage for the majority of the UK population by 2030.

The first study on the health effects of 5G by Professor Lennart Hardell and Mona Nilsson was published by the Swedish Radiation Protection Foundation on 22 February 2022. The study recorded a massive increase in radiation exposure levels resulting in immediate microwave sickness symptoms for residents living below the antenna. Symptoms included fatigue, difficulty sleeping, nosebleeds, tinnitus, dizziness, skin problems, concentration problems, irritability, impaired short-term memory, confusion, depression, and heart palpitations.

The first Cease and Desist order was issued in April 2022 by the Board of Health Pittsfield MA against Verizon Cell Tower. Residents surrounding the tower suffered ill health shortly after the tower was activated in 2020.

Here in the UK, a landmark legal ruling in November 2021 took place at the Planning Court, Queen's Bench Division, High Court of Justice, London with campaigners successfully claiming against Brighton and Hove Council with Hutchison 3G as the interested party. The Honourable Mr Justice Holgate overturned the local authority approval for the 5G mast to be sited close to a primary school. The ruling found that the Council "failed to address the health impacts" of the mast. The Council was ordered to pay the claimants costs to the agreed sum of £13,340. This finding has significant implications for all councils dealing with 5G applications, it means there is a legal responsibility to investigate effects on health.

Thousands of antennas and phone masts are still being deployed in heavily populated areas to advance the internet of things, allowing thousands of devices to connect to the network with a drive towards smart city applications. The only safety compliance necessary according to the UK Government is a statement that self-certifies that the ICNIRP guidelines are met.

The UK ICNIRP guidelines are based on the same principle as the US standards and only protect against short-term, heating effects of radiation and not the long-term biological effects. On Friday 13th August 2021 in the USA Robert F. Kennedy's Children's Health Defense (CHD) and the Environmental Health Trust successfully sued the FCC in a historic lawsuit against the FCC for ignoring 11,000 pages of scientific and medical evidence showing biological effects below the current guidelines, so we can no longer rely on industry assurances of safety.

Bioeffects have clearly been established to occur with very low exposure (non-thermal levels) to electromagnetic fields and radiofrequency radiation according to many doctors and scientists. The BioInitiative Working Group reviewed thousands of peer reviewed scientific papers. This group of experts calls for the precautionary approach and urgent action due to chronic EMF-related diseases that are a potential risk for everyone. These diseases include adverse effects on the central nervous system, cancer, both initiating and promoting effects, impairments of certain brain functions, loss of memory and cognitive function, infertility, and immune dysfunction.

Radiofrequency signals were classified as a possible human carcinogen in 2011 by the World Health Organization International Agency for Research on Cancer. Evidence of increased cancer risks has since been strengthened by further human studies, as well as toxicology studies in animals, which demonstrated clear evidence of tumours from the US National Toxicology Program and the Italian Ramazzini Institute study.

The Science and Technology Options Assessment Committee (STOA) of the European Parliament published a review in June 2021 "Health impact of 5G. Current state of knowledge of 5G-related carcinogenic and reproductive/ developmental hazards as they emerge from epidemiological studies and in vivo experimental studies." The review of research calls for a halt to the expansion of 5G and should be a clear warning for policy makers to put the brakes on. No adequate studies are available on 5G in the higher frequency range (24 to 100 Ghz). Therefore, the review describes 5G as an experiment on the population.

It's worth noting that the $21 billion reinsurance company Swiss Re Group, which is one of the world's leading reinsurance providers, rated 5G as a "high impact" liability risk, citing concerns about its biological effects, and potential claims for health impairments. Despite this, the Government is racing ahead with 5G rollout and the involuntary irradiation of the whole UK population

Local councillors may not be aware that they could potentially be held liable for any harms caused by the policies they enact according to a UK lawyer and should therefore check the council's public liability insurance provides cover for adverse health effects caused by 5G.

Blowing apart the climate agenda

by VICTORIA PROSSER

IN recent times the public consciousness has been flooded with myriad climate crisis information and a vague sense of impending doom from "rising CO2 levels".

Controlled opposition groups such as Extinction Rebellion and JustStopOil continue to engage in divisive actions in order to sour public opinion and ripen them up to support more draconian laws, a strategy employed by the government in order to generate public consensus for their tightening of rules should a real uprising occur.

It can be hard for the majority of us to make sense of what is really going on in regards to climate change. At the base of it all is the government's drive for 'net zero' amid reports of CO2 damaging the climate, rising sea levels and alarming weather events' and there are attempts around the world to curtail us and make us poorer to pay for the measures. Not many readers will trust anything the government reports nowadays, so who better to ask for some scientific insight than a highly qualified meteorologist, physicist and seasoned campaigner, Piers Corbyn.

When I meet with Piers he had just recently been thrown out of the Bloomberg Sustainability Business Summit in London despite being a registered delegate. They accused him of having covid 19 without any proof and forcibly ejected him before Sadiq Khan took to the stage. Piers informs me he is used to attempts to silence him but that this time was particularly aggressive. I tend to be of the opinion that if authorities are using that much effort to shut you down, there must be some truth in what you are saying.

What are the lies of the climate crisis? Piers elaborates "In a nutshell the CO2 "Climate-Emergency" story says that the trace gas CO2 (0.04% of air) is the main "control knob" of weather extremes and climate, and that man's CO2 – 4% of 0.04% of the atmosphere – is a major dangerous factor in this. Therefore, the story concludes, you must be taxed and controlled. Very convenient! The measures suggested will do nothing for the environment, in fact things that will help nature such as not cutting down trees are not even considered. The cost of everything is being pushed onto individuals, as well as an unnecessary guilt."

Here's Piers with a science lesson for usl "For the CO2 narrative to be true requires man's (4%) CO2 to control the rest of (96%) CO2 and for CO2 to be the main controller of temperature and climate. Both claims fail against science". What about all the scientists who agree with climate change theory? "Well it is said to be 97% of scientists, but this was actually a survey of how many papers mentioned CO2, and when this figure was analysed by Dr Legates*, it was found that only 0.3% actually supported the theory that is being used to make vast changes to our lives now.

CO2 in the atmosphere, is an effect, and not a cause of temperatures and lags behind the climate by about 500-800 years

In the long run CO2 levels are an effect not a cause of changes in climate/temperatures. Sea temperatures rule CO2 as the oceans hold 50 times more CO2 than the atmosphere. If the sea warms, CO2 is released (like warming a glass of fizzy drink) and if it cools it absorbs CO2 from the air. This happens on a daily/weekly/monthly/yearly basis and on average CO2 in the whole atmosphere stays around for a few years before going back into the upper levels of the ocean or into the soil; CO2 levels in these relatively small changes lag behind temperature changes. On longer time scales extra CO2 emitted from the sea surface gets swallowed up into the cold deep ocean by currents and emerges 500-800 years later in the air over the Pacific after a long deep sea trek. So, the amount of CO2 in the atmosphere, over the long run, is an effect, and not a cause of temperatures and lags behind the climate by about 500-800 years."

Interesting points that are more than worthy of further research and rumination. Many will ask why exactly this dramatic scientific storyline is taking place. "Corrupt scientists and fake data are being used. Power is being sought through control mechanisms. The World Economic Forum has been building up to this for a long time. There are 4 legs and a tail to the New World Order. The pandemic; the climate con which becomes almost religious and so can justify almost anything. The 3rd and 4th legs are physical attacks, being the jabbing and the 5G. The tail is the digital identification and system. We must break each one of these legs by resisting, for example to resist digital id we must keep cash."

Noone wants to feel powerless in the face of such might being used to mislead us and avail us of freedoms. So Piers explains "We are all local leaders. We must build our own leaders up rather than rely on existing politicians or structures. We cannot continue to propagate the idea of main political parties having a monopoly of power in the state. The state will resist, but in the process of this conflict new things will emerge from action on the ground. We are not like-minded people joining together, we are like-purposed people seeking to stop this agenda. Never forget that mass understanding of the big picture is how we will defeat the New World Order".

BBC: Ministry of truth

BRAINWASHING BRITAIN COMPLETELY

by PAUL MERRICK

OVER the past 40 years, the BBC has transformed itself from the most trusted news source in the world into the British Brainwashing Corporation. It has a clear left-wing agenda which it pushes remorselessly whilst still proudly proclaiming its lack of bias.

Its coverage of Brexit was a disgrace: a report, entitled 'Brussels Broadcasting Corporation?' published by think-tank Civitas in conjunction with News-watch, monitored thousands of hours of television and radio shows including the flagship Radio 4 programme "Today". Of 4,275 guests on "Today" who discussed the EU between 2005 and 2015, only 132, or 3.2% were Brexiteers. The BBC had become the propaganda arm of the EU.

In 2019 the BBC spearheaded the creation of the Trusted News Initiative (TNI), together with news and media organisations including Google, Facebook, Twitter, the FT and the New York Times. The TNI was ostensibly established to protect audiences from "disinformation which threatens human life or disrupts democracy during elections." The participants would make interventions "to address misinformation across the media landscape". On the face of it these were noble intentions, but since the coronavirus pandemic these interventions have mutated from exposure of fake news to repression of free speech. The truth has become whatever the BBC says it is and this has allowed it to censor information it finds unpalatable whilst at the same time continuing to proclaim its lack of bias.

There is now total censorship of all information that deviates from the agenda of the public health agencies. For example, Anthony Fauci, chief medical adviser to the US President, concluded that there was no evidence to support the claim that Ivermectin was effective against Covid-19 But, as documented on ivmmeta.com, there are over 70 studies pointing to Ivermectin's efficacy at reducing mortality and hospitalisation. These include 31 Randomised Controlled Trials (RCT), 7 meta-analyses, 32 Observational Controlled Trials (OCT), multiple country case studies, expert opinion and patient testimony all in favour of the medication. The BBC ignores this and has campaigned to undermine the use of Ivermectin saying that there is 'insufficient evidence' to recommend it.

The TNI's official line is that "the project would not prevent "legitimate concerns" about vaccines being aired, but would attempt to stop "harmful disinformation myths". However, in practice the legitimate concerns of respected doctors, scientists and researchers are not permitted to be aired. When the founder of the mRNA technology, Dr Robert Malone, is censored and his videos removed, the TNI organisations are doing exactly what they said they would not do. What distinguishes the BBC from the other TNI organisations is that I and all other licence payers are forced to finance its deceit under threat of a criminal record.

So what's to be done? I have taken to complaining to the BBC whenever I notice prejudice in its reporting, either in what it says or what it omits. For example, in the Summer of 2021 I participated in one of many Freedom marches through central London together with tens, possibly hundreds of thousands of others. There was not a mention of this in that evening's BBC television news which did, however, cover a much smaller pro-Palestinian rally on the same day (a cause the BBC favours). In responding to my complaint about this the BBC's defence was that it did not have time in its bulletins to report on all news stories of the day. I pointed out that in the early evening bulletin that day it had found time to report that Tom Cruise had donated one of his jumpers to a charitable cause. In response to this they could only repeat their 'lack of time' excuse.

I do not fool myself that my complaints will achieve anything apart from vent my frustration and anger at an organisation I used to admire. And, of course, the BBC will not admit it is wrong. But if, instead of one complaint every lie, distortion and blatant omission generates a thousand then, at the very least, this will cause the BBC some inconvenience. They aim to respond to complaints within a fortnight so it would force them to hire additional staff to deal with the volume of complaints, which would also appear in the official figures on customer dissatisfaction.

So come on, fellow truth-lovers, log on to https://www.bbc.co.uk/contact/complaints/make-a-complaint.

Psychological manipulation of NHS staff by 'charity'

AS part of research that the UK Column did, we were very interested in training within our National Health Service by this charity, selecting future leaders, called Common Purpose.

by BRIAN GERRISH

We saw manipulation of people and their values by this particular organisation and it morphed into a specific sector of the NHS called 'NHS Leaders'. These supposedly were fast-tracked people who were going to lead the NHS into even better healthcare.

As these leaders with their newly acquired values were unleashed, the management style in the NHS became increasingly domineering and bullying. The ideas became less and less about the care and treatment of people who were ill or injured, and it became much more about the importance of profits and money within the NHS.

It was apparent that the psychology of people was being manipulated.

We have upon the UK Column website an article which is entitled Towards a Million Change Agents. That was the title of a paper written by an NHS Common Purpose trained individual who said that the NHS, in order to reach a future utopia, was going to need a million change agents.

They mean people who are going to disrupt the performance of the NHS in order to get it to transition, to transform into what was supposedly to be a world class health provision.

An example of applied psychology in the NHS during the covid crisis, is that mantras were introduced. Nurses and doctors started to follow mantras instead of medical decisions. A highly qualified doctor told us that when an unvaccinated covid patient came in, the mantra was: "Covid unvaccinated death pathway, covid unvaccinated death pathway."

If a person was labelled as having covid, and they were unvaccinated, the only result of their healthcare treatment was the death pathway.

These mantras have been driven through the NHS to the extent where doctors told us: "They cannot discuss genuine government figures on vaccine adverse reactions, because the person simply turns away or refuses to talk to them or becomes very aggressive." They are witnessing cognitive dissonance in individuals, which is the result of their mental values being rebranded.

We are certainly seeing the application of psychology in many areas in the NHS, and its overall effect is a degradation of healthcare treatment to the extent that people are being killed, when they could have survived quite happily had they been given the right treatment.

As these leaders with their newly acquired values were unleashed, the management style in the NHS became increasingly domineering and bullying

That we have have propaganda and political manipulation of a type within Nazi Germany can be seen in many ways: the synchronous cheering, the banners, the lights, the rhetoric, the posters.

But what we've got unleashed on us now is a subliminal attack on our minds. And until we bring the full light to this, it's going to be very, very difficult for us to take the lid off what these people are doing through their covid and vaccination attack on people.

Each of the pharmaceutical companies has access to this psychological weapon. Each of the legal companies.

Everywhere we see charities, industry, public bodies working with the British government, we know that the use of the psychology is spread between them..

A well-qualified psychologist said to me, "People who are intelligent and have highly questioning minds can be more susceptible to the use of hypnosis, reframing, and applied psychology than somebody who is less intelligent and has less of an enquiring mind." It is very wrong if anybody thinks, "Well, I'm a bright person, I'm intelligent, I'm highly qualified. This wouldn't affect me." On the contrary, you may be more vulnerable. There are NHS professionals that I'm speaking to that are completely confused. They're having a cascade of information every single day. Things are changing. They don't know.

I am seeing NHS professionals doing things that would be completely alien to them. "I'm giving respiratory depressants to respiratory patients." It's just alien to what we have been taught. So, people are frightened. What we are seeing is a political system integrated with global commercial companies, pharmaceutical companies unleashing an agenda which has been to test vaccines on a population without any care for the damage and the dying.

People who have been subjected to this form of reframing or mind manipulation are victims and therefore they need to be treated in a very gentle and reassuring way.

Because if we come at them in a very blunt way to try and make them see the truth, the result is that either they become very hostile – with cognitive dissonance – or possibly they're going to become mentally unwell as a result of the immense assault on their value system.

It is very significant that in all the documentation about the British government's use of applied psychology to get its political agenda enacted, there is absolutely no assessment as to what the adverse effects of such psychology may be on people who perhaps have underlying mental health issues, anxiety, or depression. And indeed, where people have got undiagnosed mental health conditions - so they're not even aware that they've got a problem - when somebody is using this psychology on them, you can do immense damage. And I believe it is no coincidence that the official statistics in UK now show that the lockdown policy has caused a huge surge in suicides and mental illness, particularly tragically, amongst young people.

But again, we can demonstrate that the UK government is hiding or manipulating the data sets that show this, or they're using applied psychology in the way they present those data sets to the public in order to further mislead the public.

Constantly pestered to take vaccines

"History isn't on science's side" – Josh Johnson, stand-up comedian

by RICHARD HOUSE

A FRIEND recently texted me in some distress; she and her husband were being pestered and harassed by the NHS over vaccines. She has a pile of NHS appointment letters, ranging from covid booster reminders for her husband to scheduling flu vaccinations for her children, and her youngest's pre-school booster.

Her phone pings almost daily with NHS alerts and reminders. "We are reasonable people, but we feel pursued in a way that has damaged our confidence in the credibility of medical services", she told me.

She also recounts how some friends have been similarly pestered, writing of her disgust at the use of the so-called "family services" to act as the policing system for pharmaceutical and State interests – with health visitors routinely alerting the NHS about children not being "up to date" with their vaccinations.

Are these happenings straws in the wind of a wider change in society, with Big Pharma and the State having drastically over-reached themselves with the experimental gene-therapy injection masquerading as a "vaccine"? With more families now being healthily sceptical about the efficacy of vaccines more generally, we can expect such panicked NHS bullying tactics to escalate.

An enormous literature exists that comprehensively deconstructs the junk, zombie science underpinning vaccine-centred public-health discourse. In a recent interview, one of these writers, Neil Z. Miller, said the following: "[in our research] we discovered that children who'd received vaccines were anywhere from four to over twelve times more likely to develop various negative or adverse health outcomes…. So the unvaccinated children are healthier in these respects, in comparison with these children receiving these multiple vaccines." (Full interview at https://tinyurl.com/3wffz22x.) On our website, we list the six peer-reviewed studies evidencing what Miller is saying here; they can be accessed at https://independentviewpoints.net/vaccination/.

No wonder Robert Kennedy Jr said the following in a recent interview with journalist Tucker Carlson: incredibly, "None of the 72 vaccines that are currently mandated for our [U.S.] children has been safety tested against a placebo in pre-clinical trials". Certainly, anyone who has read Bobby Kennedy's spellbinding book The Real Anthony Fauci must end up with the view that genuine scientific truth just doesn't matter any more, as an all-powerful Big Pharma, along with its Big Tech side-kicks, has completely captured modern culture, science and politics.

Photo: Cottonbro

None of the 72 vaccines that are currently mandated for our [U.S.] children has been safety tested against a placebo in pre-clinical trials

There are signs that public opinion is indeed shifting on the vaccines question. In Iowa, for example, a recent poll found that Iowans' support for non-covid vaccine requirements in schools is eroding, with only 34 per cent of Iowan adults now saying all children should be required to receive standard shots unless they have a doctor-signed medical exemption. That figure is down from 59 per cent supporting such a requirement in 2015. And even more tellingly, 28 per cent of adults now think Iowa should have no law on childhood vaccinations – up from just 16 per cent in 2015.

If these are indeed straws in the wind presaging a major cultural shift in vaccine confidence-levels across the globe, it's looking as if the covid-jab may well prove to have been a massive own goal for Big Pharma – and a nightmare for the World Economic Forum and Bill Gates, determined as they are to vaxx the world's population.

Perhaps, for once, Gates recently spouted some sense, when he said in November 2021 in a Bloomberg Forum, speaking of the covid jab: "Statistically we didn't do as well as I would have expected.... [You could almost say that] the politicization of taking vaccines... has been a step backwards. I hope vaccine acceptance for other diseases like measles is not reduced by this" – with the "fringe minority" of "anti-vaxxers" that existed before the covid "vaccine" having been transformed into what Gates himself now terms a "meaningful minority".

For Del Bigtree speaking on 24 March, "They have failed in the greatest possible way: they took what was apparently about a 90 per cent vaccine confidence in the USA and have reduced it to below 50 per cent". For example, despite the CDC's official recommendation for all Americans to get the 3rd booster jab, only 28 per cent of eligible Americans have taken it, as of March 2022. So Gates' "meaningful minority" has become a clear majority – at least in the USA. Keep up the great work, Mr Gates.

As the mass-vaxx junk-science ideology continues to unravel and disintegrate, just watch the NHS vaxxer bullying and harassment escalate. Those who embrace natural immunity and bodily autonomy, and who eschew a fear-saturated approach to nature, must and will stand strong against it.

A cashless world imagined...

DEREK worked in the city and a high tech office environment. He had all the latest gadgets at home as well.

Between work and home, Derek also enjoyed a pint, and would frequently stop off at a pub near the office. This place was an ancient coaching inn and part of the history of the city. Ye Olde Inn represented a sharp contrast to his technological lifestyle, which he rather appreciated, and his choice of beverage was the traditional style that goes with it .. proper beer .. naturally alive in the barrel. But when it came to payment, Derek preferred to "tap" (or snap) and scoffed at those "still using cash". He even suggested to the landlord that cash was no longer needed, adding a list of practical benefits.

Derek didn't mind when the ATMs slowly disappeared. He didn't care less when all cash was withdrawn soon thereafter. Then one day after work, he went for his usual pint. As he approached the bar he was sorry to see a sign over the hand pumps .. "VERY SORRY - NO MORE REAL ALE"

He was disappointed, and read it again .. "no more .."

"you mean you can't get it .. inquired a shocked Derek ..?

"that's correct sir, new law" replies the barmaid.

"rushed through yesterday with effect from midnight tonight" .. adds a young man at the bar.

Derek looks at his smart watch .. "we've got six hours then"

"yes but that chap over there had the last .."

"damn" .. says Derek interrupting .. "I'm off then, maybe something on at .. but he is stopped in his tracks. Two chaps who just came in to join the group were shaking their heads.

"we just come from there" .. "all sold out"

The barmaid joins in .. "well they say all beer should be pasteurised to avoid infection"

"bullshit" said Derek.

A few weeks later, Derek joins CAMRA (the campaign for real ale) which had fought and won a battle for good beer before, but this was different. Derek paid his subscription on his phone, and it was immediately logged at the Home Security Office.

Derek had joined an organisation known to be at odds with government policy! He was now a citizen with a mark against his name.

There were small operations brewing illegally, but it only took one "tap" payment to alert the authorities, and many were shut down. A few micro breweries survived, but did so by taking payment in kind or alternative (real) currency like gold or silver coins. Derek eventually found a way to smuggle beer into his home, without collecting any more marks against his digital character. As a dissident member of an outlawed organisation, he ran the risk of getting caught, which carried the risk of having his connection to finance "switched off".

The pubs of course suffered from massive loss of trade and some became fast food outlets. Cooking from fresh became prohibitory expensive. You needed a chef with a certificate in advanced hygiene and they were few and far between. Anyway, some people liked microwaved GMO soy protein and bug burgers.

The potential reality behind this story is .. The truth is ..

Our elected dictators could do this to FOOD. Imagine going to the supermarket and finding a stick of broccoli costs £10 or £20 with "fresh food tax". But the Bug Burger with GMO corn chips, only £3.99 .. ponder on that. Maybe you have to be in a certain position to buy or eat real food anyway. Farming and food production could be come totally under state control, and 99% could be lifespan reducing non food. Maybe there would be a high security organic farm on the Isle of Wight complete with customers heli-pad.

There is a ruling elite that so despise diverse humanity that they conspire to first, reduce our numbers, and second reduce the useful people to slavery.

Biometric control awaits if we don't stop it now. The digital (cashless) society, the fake pandemic and the NATO attack on Russia are all part of the globalist agenda (WEF) to control everything .. your freedom, your food, your money, your mind.

Your body, your beer

Cheers

One of the Malcolms.

Robbing Paddy to house Petruso

John Waters on why we must resist the regime's plans to remove our right to private property.

THE government's latest attack on the God-given freedoms of the Irish people involves a threat to seize their private property rights, the ultimate objective of Communism.

Spearheaded by the contrived Ukraine 'refugee crisis,' they seek to justify this theft using the mysterious 'housing emergency' that has persisted in Ireland for a decade and has been caused by the massive levels of immigration orchestrated surreptitiously by the State.

In all that time, four successive governments have implacably ignored the plight of thousands of Irish citizens unable to acquire homes of their own.

On the one hand, the utterly corrupt FF/FG/Green Regime, which exists purely to carry out the instructions of the external New World Order combine who seek to dispossess the earth's population of freedoms, belongings and way of life, has said that it plans to hold a referendum later this year on the right to private property.

On the other, it's sending out its shills to loudly claim that the existing constitutional position allows it to seize people's homes, houses and other property by force, as per the statement of the Minister for 'Justice,' Helen McEntee shortly after Easter.

But, if they are already permitted to do this why is there any need for a referendum?

The public should be in no doubt that, like the referendums of 2012, 2015 and 2018, this one will be an outright mockery of the democratic process, accompanied by grotesque abuses of the electoral process and the rules concerning balance and fairness in media coverage.

The half-million unaccounted-for votes that were found to be on the electoral register in early 2016 have still not been investigated, and nor has any more recent accounting provided a more reassuring picture. Indeed, it is likely that the register has since been augmented with possibly hundreds of thousands of illegally declared new 'citizens' — recently arrived migrants — with no legitimate claim to a say in the running of Irish affairs. These abuses will inevitably be aided by the usual torrents of propaganda and abuse of process by the bought-and-paid-for media, in the manner of the Covid deception of the past two years.

Overwhelmingly, for obvious reasons, it is the native population of Ireland who are the owners of property and resources, and most of those who have arrived here in the past two decades are not, which means that these additional numbers of illegitimate voters will be able to vote to restrict the property rights of the indigenous population.

While it is true that the Constitution permits the State to expropriate or confiscate private property in certain circumstances, (the 'common good' and 'social justice' are indeed the main qualifiers on such rights as things stand), the idea that the influx of Ukrainian refugees self-evidently fulfils the required criteria is a puerile interpretation based on propaganda. There are many disquieting aspects of what is happening in this context, notwithstanding the continuing corrupt coverage of these maters by the mainstream media. It has already emerged via alternative media that many of those arriving, allegedly from Ukraine, come from multiple other locations. In other words, their claims to refugee status are fraudulent. There is no evidence of any vetting process to offset these abuses. Nor is there any attempt to screen arrivals on the basis that the fighting in Ukraine is overwhelmingly in the east of that country, or to ask why many of these alleged refugees could not be accommodated in the conflict-free western parts. It is furthermore disquieting that most new arrivals are, as per usual, males of military age.

Moreover, the decision of the Irish Government to accept unlimited numbers of such 'refugees' was taken without reference to the Irish people who stand to be profoundly affected by it. By the end of April, Ireland had already taken in 25,000 'refugees' under this heading, whereas the UK, a significantly larger country and economy, had accepted just 1,200.

The idea that the State already has the power to seize private property in all circumstances is entirely bogus. While the corrupt political establishment of the moment is well capable of theft and fraud, there is no precedent in any of the key legal textbooks for anything remotely like what is being proposed. The premier constitutional guide, J.M. Kelly's The Irish Constitution, records no cases of dispute concerning domestic situations — for example, family homes or second homes. Some such properties will undoubtedly have been implicated in CPO (Compulsory Purchase Order) disputes, but the indicators are that these were resolved under the heading of compensation and so did not end up in court. Most of the cases which have arisen under this heading were concerned with planning or business disputes, or technical aspects of related questions: land valuation, rent controls, taxation, vehicle seizure, pension rights of convicted persons, competition issues, and so forth. Many cases, it is true, related to CPOs sought by State authorities for some planning-related purpose said to be in the pubic interest, but these did not relate to the dwelling places of citizens, and generally speaking tended to be upheld by the courts. What we face at the present moment is of an entirely more disturbing character.

The typical line coming across in the media is that the Government can do what it pleases, since the Oireachtas has the power, under Article 43, to 'delimit' property rights according to the 'exigencies of the common good' and the imperatives of 'social justice.'

This has never been tested in circumstances such as we now face, where manifestly rank injustice is threatened against the native population — robbing Paddy to house Petruso, or enabling impecunious outsiders to arrive in Ireland and vote to dispossess the natives to enrich themselves.

Leaving aside what terms like 'the common good' and 'social justice' might mean in law (this never appears to have been definitively dealt with or stated by a court) it is clear that there is a difference between 'personal' property rights and the generic, business-related kind with which the courts tended to deal — cases involving, CPOs, taxation issues, etc. So, while Article 43, as stated, appears to be heavily qualified by social considerations, a primary reference in the personal rights section of Article 40 refers specifically to property rights and requires the State 'by its laws' to protect them 'as best it may from unjust attack and, in the case of injustice done, to vindicate.'

This is the reason the Government is pursuing the precautionary measure of a referendum: It knows that the ground under its feet is not as solid as it tries to suggest.

The legal shills coming out to bat for the Government have unsurprisingly not been going into these complexities or possibilities. The usual spin is that, after a brief period of pro-property thinking in the 1980s/1990s, the courts fell into a more 'common good'-oriented perspective, emphasising the qualifiers in Article 43, which in various cases over the decades resulted in individuals trying to fight CPOs getting short shrift from the courts. These shills do not mention Article 40, and there is no suggestion in anything they say of any degree of differentiation with regard to categories of property rights attracting stronger protection by virtue of this provision.

The above reading of the situation ought certainly offer some reassurance to people who are at present terrified by interventions such as the recent threat by the Minister for 'Justice' that there still exists within the Constitution protection for such as an old person whose home might be adjudged by State agencies to be too large for that person's sole use, and thereby subject to a CPO, with the individual in question carted off to a nursing home. It is conceivable also that such a protection might be extended to a family with a second home which they use intermittently through the year, rendering both properties immune from any expropriation in the claimed interest of 'social justice.'

This window of possible fairness is what the Government will be targeting in its corrupt referendum. The tactics will be to try to browbeat and bamboozle the electorate with moral blackmail and pseudo-legalisms, while at the same time implying that the referendum is a mere technicality that will make no difference, and that Ireland's reputation as 'a compassionate country' is at stake.

These tactics need to be resisted in the most precise, unyielding and comprehensive terms, because the alternative is not simply that the Irish will soon become a minority in their own land (now virtually certain within little more than a decade) but that they will be the actual sole and least regarded dispossessed minority in a country that will belong to everyone but its indigenous population.

Snake venom in the water? Just more fear porn nonsense

THE Watch The Water documentary that went viral recently is a 50-minute interview with retired chiropractor Dr Bryan Ardis, who details his theory that "Covid" is caused by chemicals extracted from snake venom being added to the water supply.

Further, Dr Ardis claims that the same venom-based chemicals are in the vaccines and the drug Remdesivir and that researching the venom connection has already got one scientist killed.

Some notable names in the alternate media are giving it some air time, even Dr Reiner Fuellmich has said he will look into it.

He shouldn't. It is pure nonsense.

A ridiculous theory that flies in the face of observed reality, supported only by anecdotal evidence, biblical metaphors and clips from an episode of The Blacklist.

But good news, if there is snake venom in the water Dr Ardis can cure you – just spend 120 bucks on his antidote through his website.

That'll drive the venom right out of you.

They are literally selling snake oil.

The blurb alone tells you this is manipulation:

The plandemic continues, but its origins are still a nefarious mystery. How did the world get sick, how did Covid really spread, and did the Satanic elite tell the world about this bioweapon ahead of time?

Reality check – "The world" DIDN'T "get sick". "Covid" was NOT a "bioweapon". It DIDN'T "spread".

The Powers That Be (PTB) just want you to think all this is true, and these guys are, knowingly or not, helping that along.

The whole thing looks very much like the latest attempt at introducing mainstream COVID fear porn through an "alternative" back door.

The superficial narrative in these cases may vary, but the underlying message is always the same – "Be afraid of COVID, because it is a real thing"

The PTB don't really care if you're afraid of a virus, a MANMADE virus, 5G…or snake venom in the water. Just so long as you believe COVID is real, new and deadly

The only really inadmissible thing has always been the truth – COVID is a scam. A pea-and-thimble game on a massive scale. Because you can't govern through fear if no one is afraid.

Is someone dumping "snake venom" in the water?

Maybe. Who knows. The world is insane.

But it has ZERO to do with the "COVID pandemic" because the covid pandemic was made up.

Freedom of speech - jailed for old Facebook comments

'IT is a poor service to the memory of the victims of the holocaust to adopt a central doctrine of their murderers' Noam Chomsky

by ORLANDO CLARKSON

Freedom of speech has been fought for over many generations. A right that it isn't always popular to defend but a right which must be defended at all costs. As Voltaire said: 'I do not agree with what you say, but I'll defend to the death your right to say it'. Throughout european history the people have had to fight for free speech especially whenever governments fear the people's criticism. One such case highlights its importance. From 1672 to 1676 king Charles II attempted to ban coffeehouses in the realm:

Whereas it is most apparent, that the Multitude of Coffee-Houses of late years set up and kept within this Kingdom . . . have produced very evil and dangerous effects...for that in such Houses, and by occasion of the meetings of such persons therein, diverse False, Malitious and Scandalous Reports are devised and spread abroad, to the Defamation of His Majesties Government

(Proclamation for the Suppression of Coffee-Houses 1676 published in The London Gazzette)

After less than 2 weeks the king was forced to retract the proclamation due to the public outcry at this blatant attempt by the government to take away the right of freedom of speech. Free and unfettered speech is always a danger to governments who infringe on the rights of the people as it is known that open rebellion is never far away when the people become aware of their mistreatment.

As many are aware we are facing a crisis of freedom of speech today all acoss the world. As well as the social media bans, the hounding of alternative voices from the legacy and failing mainstream media, the lost jobs from those who say the wrong thing, the liberticidal legislation being pushed through parliaments worldwide, we are now seeing worrying examples of people being imprisoned due to so called 'hate speech'.

On Friday 14th January 2022 Tahra Ahmed was convicted of 'incitement to stir up racial hatred' at the Old Bailey in London. Dominic Kennedy writing for The Times newspaper brought to light 2 facebook comments from 2017 that Tahra made. On the basis of said comments the campaign against antisemitism brought the charge to the court. This being the first case of its kind in the court, which is normally concerned with the crimes of murder and rape, it was assumed by many that the case would be thrown out. Indeed, two doctors letters had been sent to the judge explaining that Tahra was not fit to stand trial as she was suffering from post traumatic stress disorder on account of the tortuous actions she had faced from the metropolitan police during her 6 day long unlawful detention. Due to the pain of her ribcage being crushed when police had held up her handcuffed hands behind her back she had blacked out and awoken to the smell of her own vomit and with policemen and women laughing at her predicament. Yet these letters were ignored by the judge and the sham trial went ahead. On 11th February 2022 she recieved concurrent custodial sentences of 11 months and 6 months.

At the time of writing (7.4.22) Tahra is currently confined at HMP Downview, having served over 6 weeks of her sentence at another site: HMP Bronefield. Tahra has been surprised to find that one inmate convicted of selling drugs is serving a smaller sentence with a strong chance of early release; something Tahra is not elligible for as she is considered a 'danger to the public....? Such is the state of justice in Great Britain in 2022.

The precedent which has been set should be of concern to all that live in the UK. How many comedians could potentially be brought to court over thought crimes such as this one? This is not the first time the campaign against antisemitism have caused a stir. It was this very same group who made efforts to bring down Jeremy Corbyn and many of his socialist allies in the labour party in 2017/18. Despite the inconvenient fact that many of the prominent labour voices had made no anti semitic statements the mainstream media plastered their columns for months with opinion pieces claiming Corbyn and his allies were anti semitic racists and the damage was done. Could this be due to Corbyn's interest in the rights of the Palestinians? This is an issue that Tahra Ahmed also feels strongly about. It is an issue that will never be given the attenton it deserves.

Is there a future for freedom of speech in the UK? It seems that many politicians, journalists and commentators have not understood the difference between agreeing with what someone says and defending their right to say it. The removal of freedom of speech is one of the first steps which has always marked the beginning of historical authoritarian regimes. Now more than ever, it is incumbent upon and informed citizenry to speak out against this encroaching authoritarianism.

But what about anti semitism? Having experienced this myself (I am in fact a London born jew) anti semitism is indeed nasty and difficult to face. But how will we deal with it? Suppress it and push it underground? Or face it head on? The beauty of freedom of speech is that it incorrect ideas to be challenged. If it were somehow to be 'the jews' who were behind the Great Reset scam, why then are the Israeli population one of the most vaccinated, sick and oppressed nations today? Points such as this are what will begin to help those with prejudiced minds to re consider their viewpoint.

Whatever your thoughts on the concept of freedom of speech, the evidence that this is a political stitch up is compelling. In 2020 and 2021 Tahra confronted senior police constables and explained that she would hold any policeman or woman personally liable in a court of law for any unlawful behaviour against freedom protestors. She also spent time educating and empowering people on their sovereign rights. It seems this is the real reason for the moves against her. Why else would a national newspaper dig up something from 5 years ago that no jew had seen or commented on?

If you are interested in seeing justice done and want to help clear the name of one of the great freedom fighters of our time. Please consider donating some money to her appeal fund here: https://donorbox.org/supporting-tahra-and-all-our-freedom-of-speech

Transcending the covid and climate deceptions

The word sustainable was hijacked decades ago, it is now deceptively used to advance the agendas of the globalists

by MARK KEENAN

IN March 2020, as the entire world ground to a halt for the first time in recorded history in the face of the covid-19 scare, most people had no idea of the deep significance of the events taking place.

We know that the covid-19 hoax was pre-planned; that the PCR test, methods for recording case numbers, the CDC's covid-19 genome etc, are all fraudulent; it is proved that the so-called virus was never isolated anywhere; doctor's such as Dr Stefan Lanka have exposed the virus misconception; the so-called covid-19 'variants' are due to the vaccinated becoming ill and spreading variants, not the un-vaccinated; and covid-19 and manmade climate change are psy-ops intended to propel the world into the Davos Group WEF technocratic 'reset' and the aligned UN Agenda 2030 plan. Additional orchestrated pandemics, crises and intentional 'wars' are likely 'in the pipeline' to further these plans. Many doctors and scientists that have explained this are censored on internet platforms.

In our own lifetime we have lived under a political hierarchy, which though pertaining to be made of individual and autonomous nation states, is actually a one world government controlled by the world private banking cartel via its controlling ownership of the mega-corporate world structure and via its institutional vassals, including the unelected unaccountable UN (where I worked as a scientist), WEF and WHO. In the book "Transcending the Covid-19 Deception" I detail evidence for the above and a 100-year timeline of key events, who and what is behind the curtain of these lies, and the bigger picture of what it all means.

I worked as a scientist at the UK Government Dept. of Energy and Climate Change, and at the United Nations Environment Division in Geneva, and I resigned from both roles. It was evident that the distortion of data had long been used by these unaccountable international institutions to promote false ideology and deceptive agenda rather than fact. These agendas stem from the top echelons of the international finance, political, and mega-corporate system, and those private central bankers who control the system by owning the source of debt-money creation.

The UN is clever marketing tool and unelected unaccountable political mechanism for implementing and maintaining a corrupt worldwide system, under the clever guise of 'fixing the problems of the world'. It is so big most people have no idea what the UN really is or what it is designed for, and who are the globalist robber barons that control it from the top down. Luciferianism is the underlying globalist cult religion, and is the only ideological institution adopted by the UN, via the UN's relationship with Lucis Trust. Lucis Trust was originally called Lucifer Publishing Company, and still has a private library within the UN building today.

The word sustainable was hijacked decades ago, it is now deceptively used to advance the agendas of the globalists who couldn't care less about the environment. The UN Agenda 2030 plan and the Paris Agreement goal to reduce CO2 emissions by 7% per annum until 2030 is in effect a plan that will disable the resource mechanisms of the industrial economy for the food, energy and goods that enable human life and survival. This is being done before humanity has transitioned away from the flawed polluting trans-national industrial economy toward self-sufficient local economies. Whether you believe the 'plug is being pulled' intentionally or not, this inevitably amounts to a de-population outcome. The dependency of humanity on a globalised system was purposely created for decades by an international political corporate hierarchy rampantly implementing flawed trans-national systems for agriculture, energy and goods, aligned with a usury economy in which wealth continuously flowed to the private bankers. These globalised oil-dependent systems become useless as peak oil manifests.

Furthermore, the current green energy/renewable technologies being promoted by the UN and WEF, these technologies are not a viable solution for the world's energy supply. The Energy Returned on Energy Invested is much too low - in essence the entire process is mathematically flawed. The funding of entire world economy is now based on a life-killing net-zero GHG strategy. The world's central bankers are behind this decision and are fully funding the worldwide climate change 'project'. The Bank for International Settlements created the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosure, which represents the world's mega-banks and $118 trillion of assets globally.

The creation of an independent economic backbone for our movement will involve sharing the knowledge and expertise that exists within it... as well as mentoring the many young people who have been denied a stable, long-term career

The WEF reset/UN Agenda 2030 moves the elites beyond control of the money system, to control of the people system, via new rules, track and trace, bio-metrics, vaccine passports, digital IDs, facial recognition, smart cities and blockchain power dynamics. That is not smart for you, it is smart for them. It is all presented in clever marketing language because if people understood it nobody would want it. Humanity urgently needs to take back control of the money creation process, or, at least, function outside of the privately-owned worldwide banking, credit creation and corporate system.

People's access to energy and resources is being intentionally reduced via rapid inflation, bogus climate change policies, ongoing geo-political theatre and intentionally instigated war, in which both 'sides' are pawns of the punch and judy show globalists.

The covid and climate change hoaxes could not have been orchestrated without a single controlling world influence over the media, banking, and the corporate/political structure. Let's take the example of Blackrock, one of the world's largest asset management companies, which manages funds of over $27 trillion ($27,000,000,000,000) and in effect owns most of the U.S. and large parts of the world.

One corporate 'super-entity' of interlocking ownership literally owns and dominates the world economy, resources, and media. The private banking cartel owns and controls the corporate super-entity. A small number of mega-banks are among the top ten stock holders of virtually every Fortune 500 corporation. This is why less than 0.001 % of the world's population, i.e., a small number of banking family elites and their corporate networks, own the majority of the world's assets and wealth. It is no coincidence that the founder of the WEF Davos group (a marketing and implementation group for the world's ultra-rich) is Klaus Schwab, a son of the Marianne Schwab (nee Rothschild) of the banking dynasty.

Note that, the decades old economic Ponzi scheme and debt-money slavery of the globalists had reached its mathematical end-phase by 2019, forcing another paradigm shift. A new system of world control was needed and the elites had known this for a long time. Most people still have no idea that in March 2020 the world central bankers launched a pre-planned world economic reset and transferred trillions of dollars to Blackrock. This was all aligned with the deceptive UN Agenda 2030/WEF reset marketing plans, and took place under cover of the simultaneous pre-planned Covid world lockdown.

We don't need these international money-masters and their 'paid-for' bureaucrats. We don't need to be slaves to their systems of medical fascism, fraudulent banking, and international political and corporate totalitarianism. We are in real physical and spiritual war for truth and freedom.

The old system is based entirely on debt-slavery of money created from nothing by private bankers, and the new system is based on technocratic control created from nothing except their narcissism and our consent. We need a better paradigm, but obviously not the technocratic 'new normal' paradigm the elites have planned for us to keep us under tabs. Local systems for food, energy, water, currency and services are an essential part of escaping the coming technocratic system that is being cleverly wrapped around us. Start creating local self-sufficient systems.

As sovereign free peoples, we urgently need to start planning, connecting with each other and creating much more self-sufficient local communities, towns, and regions free of the globalist controlled monetary system. If people are not dependent on the system they cannot be controlled by the system. How many people will accept a 'well-marketed system of technocratic control' and how many will maintain their own freedom and create their own local systems? You are part of the answer.

Get ahead of shortages and continuing inflation

by LAURENCE BOYLE

I HAVE spent over thirty years working in or studying the logistics industry and all I can really say is that we do live in interesting times.

As you might have noticed there is appears to be a concentrated effort to disrupt the global supply chain in all areas of commerce.

Though the price of fuel in the UK is at record levels the real shocks are still to come. Talking to a local arable farmer the other evening he casually mentioned that his main tractor used to cost just under £600 to fill two months ago, it is now over a £1000. That increase in costs is going to be passed onto the consumer. He is confidently predicting a £5 loaf of bread by the end of the summer.

Russia has deemed the UK a hostile nation so do you think we are going to be first in the queue for anything. Russia supplies a third of the UK daily diesel usage. In retaliation we are stopping the export of luxury cars to Russia. That will get Putin's tanks back in the shed.

I don't need to remind the reader that Russia and the Ukraine are responsible for 25 % of the worlds grain exports. Currently there are no cargo ships collecting anything from the Black Sea ports. Russia is also a major producer of fertiliser products and one its major customers is Brazil, another major exporter of grain-based products.

In just the last week the main Taiwan food distribution hub caught fire as did a major hub for Walmart in the USA.

We all know there is shortage of semiconductors on the global market, well Ukraine is a major global supplier of the gases that used in the manufacture of those chips.

Closer to home the Spanish truck drivers' strike is growing in intensity and has been in effect for a week (Sunday 20/3/22) This is closing down horticulture, fishing and industry across Spain. In France the Gillet Jeune are blockading targeted fuel depots. Then to cap an interesting week in European Logistics P&O Ferries sacked 800 workers and stopped sailing to Europe and Ireland. UK based ferries and the Channel Tunnel do not have the spare capacity to take up this extra work unless additional ships are found. Poland is restricting diesel sales to hauliers. A UK haulier had to send trucks back to Germany to fuel due to the lack of diesel in Poland.

So, in just one week the UK supply chain for all products from Europe is compromised and fresh food is especially compromised. As Ian Fleming once wrote 'once is unfortunate, twice is a coincidence, three times is enemy action...'

So, what can be done? A return to common sense and everything calms down but after two years of the Corona Craziness that is extremely unlikely to happen.

We take off our tinfoil hats and think 'oh bothers we were right' and wish we had all been wrong and go back to moaning on social media and sending witty memes to each other.

However, I am going to make a little assumption that most of the readers of this fine publication after the past two years may be getting a little untrustworthy of our leaders. But only a tad and have a few incidentals to guide them over the speed bumps that are being built with alarming speed by our leaders.

Now the American version of this is essentially band aids, beans and bullets. While the British version now seems to be beer, sausage rolls and toilet rolls

Once you have that what else. How do you plan for a complete breakdown of the existing supply chain? Is it possible you can make a plan for such a series of events?

Well just maybe some parts of it that help lessen the impact.

In all problems observe

Look at Supply Chain Blogs, free Logistics newsletters and see where real problems are. See what the industry is complaining about Use maritime trackers to see which ports are congested. Use aircraft trackers to see where the actual no fly zones are and how air freight is being disrupted.

All this information is freely available on the internet and in real time. Once you have this data apply it in your local area. Whats missing in the supermarket, how much stock is on the shelves, how long until that item could be replenished, who is complaining about local shortages of raw materials, why is that factory not producing x, y, or z.

In a local discount store this week which had been very well stocked throughout the Corona Carry-On, now has gardening items on the food shelves, slug pellets and lawn feed. Just one of those things that make you go hmmm.

Then analyse

Do I have enough of X to ensure Y. Quite simply think of items other than food and water

Can I service my car/van next year/ are the tyres better than minimum/ do I have a spare inner tube for my push bike, do I have spare wheel for it when it buckles? A lot of the components for bicycles are manufactured in China. Do not rely on next day availability from the internet to keep yourself mobile or your home viable.

Do I have space to create a garden? If no space outside, a window ledge with leafy greens or a small indoor potato grow kit or similar.

One of the things I am helping promote locally is a version of Guerrilla Gardening where those with a spare garden space, usually due to age, can be put in touch with those with enthusiasm but no garden space and personal /local agreements arranged to create vegetable gardens which benefit both parties.

Find local suppliers to main supermarkets, major retailers and use these local suppliers as much as finances and practicality allow.

Is it possible to do jobs for next winter now? Obtain next winters fuel in at today's prices ?

Chop some wood if you are lucky enough to have a real fire or a log burner this Spring for next Winter.

Do you have some seeds that you could garden with in Spring 2023?

At the end of this summer plant some winter crops for winter 2022 – 23

Please remember before the internet we had books, find some how to guides now.

Subjects to study absolutely anything and everything that could potentially interest and keep you and your family viable.

What alternative energy can you use? Even if you live in a flat a camping solar panel can power a light or a phone.

Then Implement your plan

Doing something is positive, even half a plan is better than no plan.

Watching the world this week was quite soul destroying. So, I cleaned up some Brussel Sprouts and Turnips, par boiled them, cooled and put the freezer for soup next winter. Changed nothing in the world but my mood.

However, do expect Russia and China to create a new currency backed by their own and more importantly commodities and not a Fiat based system. Saudi Arabia is selling oil to China for Chinese Yuan and not using the American Dollar. Russia and China are already trading in oil gas and not using the American Dollar.

Russia has already concluded trade and defence deals with Saudi Arabia/ Nigeria/India. In my opinion the petrol-dollar has effectively finished as a reserve currency for the rest of the World.

In the last week India has announced it is looking at the finer details of the new Russia-China currency.

While getting rather busy now we have to watch and wait to see how the west and its bankers respond to an obvious destruction of the FIAT based Bretton Woods System of finance.

In closing you may have missed a statement from the World Bank last Monday 14/3/22 It urged people around the world not to hoard petroleum and food. It felt like that moment in an episode of the Simpsons when the news reader tells the citizens to Panic Now!

But of course, you are not going to panic you have a plan.

World Health Organisation plans worldwide power grab

BACK in December 2021, the World Health Assembly adopted a decision entitled "The World Together: Establishment of an intergovernmental negotiating body to strengthen pandemic prevention, preparedness and response".

According to the EU, the proposed "Pandemic Treaty" is a "legally-binding framework, aiming to ensure that the world can better respond to global health threats in the future." The World Health Assembly (WHA) is the main governing body of the WHO, comprising of 194 Member States including the UK & Ireland.

Lotte Knudsen, EU ambassador to the UN, claimed such a Treaty would allow countries to respond "collectively, effectively and immediately" to future pandemics and those words may send a chill through anyone who is aware of encroaching globalisation and potential impending loss of individual power. The adoption of a WHO worldwide treaty would be an unprecedented step towards a centralisation of authority, which would inevitably lead to authoritarian approaches with private 'interests' involved; damaging not only to health but also to our democratic freedoms and values. German MEP Christine Anderson has spoken out against the WHO Pandemic Treaty which she accurately sums up as "a direct attack on the rule of the people by the people".

The Pandemic Treaty would be tied into the WHO's QR Verification Code project, intent upon creating a global digital data bank of eight billion people and currently under design by T-Systems, a company previously tainted by involvement in a corruption scandal in 2011. This technocratic treaty will be put to the next World Health Assembly in Geneva in 2023 and voted on in 2024 - with the WHO themselves having stated that they "could accelerate this timescale if a new health emergency is declared". Countries such as Ireland & Germany have indicated they will sign up for this but in one example of a strike back, the sovereign people of Ireland have begun a popular online campaign for a referendum (you can visit Lawyers for Justice Ireland on Facebook for more information). Unsurprisingly, Russia and Brazil have been the only two countries to express "scepticism". Readers may be well advised to search or create pressure groups opposing this treaty as it is an attack on freedom of movement, bodily autonomy, sovereignty of our land, our digital and personal data and so much more. Essentially the threat will tie us all into the 'data self' of a digitally controlled world for which the infrastructure is already taking shape at speed and become open to having our rights stolen at the touch of a "covid" or other hyperbole-themed button. Personal rejection of our own digitalisation and refusal to download apps are continuing actions to take to slow the speed of global control systems.

We are living in a situation where the Director General of the WHO recently tweeted thanking Bill Gates for sending a copy of his new book and openly claimed that he fully agrees 'we must act on Covid-19's lessons so that we can deliver swift, equitable health solutions to prevent the next pandemic', while the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation is the second largest donator to the WHO and the largest private contributor, donating to the tune of $1 billion last year. It is no longer seen as a conspiracy theory to deduce that the New World Order is indeed working through the guise of the pandemic, with covid-19 as a tool to oppress freedom on every level. The WHO treaty will tie all nations to obeying whenever a pandemic is arbitrarily declared - meaning lockdowns, enforced vaccination (WHO states a target of a minimum 70% of all total population) and the censoring of information that can be declared as disinformation if it goes against the status quo.

With reference to England, Scotland & Wales, we all lived through the pain and economic hits when the false pandemic was declared and we watched as many succumbed to "following orders" as politicians assured them it was "to save lives", using behavioural psychology models to hypnotise a major section of the population. Covid 19 emergency legislation was implemented but as of the publication of this article, a Freedom of Information request on what remains on the legal books has not yet been answered. What is clear is that across the world, countries have operated in tandem. It is difficult not to argue the nation state is no longer in control and that almost all nations are following a protocol to usher in a world governmental rule (even when some seem to be playing as a rogue state). These synchronised hoaxes such as covid-19 and the Ukrainian war bring us closer to the end goal of total ownership of the people through digital and artificial means. Although individual countries such as Australia, New Zealand, Israel and of course China implemented even more draconian rules than the UK, we would surely be under an extremely rigid pressure from a legally binding international treaty as currently proposed by the WHA/WHO.

The WHO opened a public participation portal for feedback, but they, 'our government' and others around the world did nothing to publicise this. Their website was flooded with traffic despite the covert nature of the launch, and a Canadian journalist Keean Bexte tweeted that the site crashed due to volume of submissions by concerned people. The consultation quietly closed on 13th April, and it never asked the people if they wanted a treaty and instead simply enquired as to what they believed it should contain.

That's why it's so important right now to research further on this matter, and start spreading the word through all your usual channels. Whilst it would appear on the surface that the UK is not at this moment pursuing a covid agenda and has switched the focus and the minds of the masses to the Ukraine, immigration and Boris Johnson's Prime Ministerial tenure; in the background the wheels of totalitarianism are still turning. Do we want to give up further freedoms without a fight? When the world of full digital ID and the international control of individual countries by the nefarious WHO/WHA is looming, what will you tell your children if you don't oppose it? The planned Great Reset must become our Great Resist and for that we need a Great Awakening and mobilisation.

Ukrainian president causes uproar in Greece over Nazi fighter appearance

by PAUL BENNETT

Zelensky addresses Greek Parliament in the company of members from the Neo-Nazi Azov Battalion

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky recent address to the Greek Parliament was overshadowed and darkened by the presence of members from the controversial Azov regiment.

President Zelensky has been regularly addressing globalist leaders and global institutions virtually in seeking support for the complex situation in Ukraine. The leader of Ukraine has also bizarrely spoke via video link at the recent Grammy awards.

In a video address to the Greek Parliament, Zelensky allowed a video message from two ethnic-Greek Ukrainians who were members of the ultra-nationalist Azov Battalion.

Syriza leader Alexis Tsipras reacted on Facebook by stating; "The speech of members of the neo-Nazi Azov Battalion in the Greek Parliament is a provocation. The absolute responsibility lies with the Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis. He talked about a historic day, but it is a historic shame. The solidarity with the Ukrainian people is a given. But the Nazis cannot have a say in our Parliament."

Former Foreign Affairs Minister Nikos Kotzias was angered by seeing members of the Azov Battaltion and said: "The Greek government irresponsibly undermined the struggle of the Ukrainian people, by giving the floor to a Nazi. The responsibilities are heavy. The government should publish a detailed report of the preparation and contacts for the event."

Recently in March, Zelensky banned eleven main opposition political parties in Ukraine including the second -most popular party in Ukraine, the Opposition Platform for Life party (OPZZh). In the 2019 Ukrainian elections, the OPZZh won 13% of the national vote. In 2021, Zelensky signed decrees banning opposition media and TV outlets with pro-Russian stances.

Links to a questionable militia group and banning opposition political parties and media outlets is not the picture of a free and democratic country that Ukraine and global leaders like to continuously portray to the world.

HIGH Court in New Zealand rules against vaccine mandates for police and defence staff.

Police staff and defence forces in New Zealand have bravely stood up to a draconian government order requiring them to have two covid jabs by March 1St, or face losing their job.

3 courageous unvaccinated staff supported by 37 colleagues challenged the order and sought a judicial review based on the right to decline a medical procedure and the right to religious freedom. Written affidavits were submitted to the High Court.

The High Court rightfully overturned the discriminatory mandate and deemed it unlawful. Justice Francis Cooke said: "The order limits the right to be free to refuse medical treatment recognised by the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act (including because of its limitation on people's right to remain employed), and its limits the right to manifest religious beliefs for those who decline to be vaccinated because the vaccine has been tested on cells derived from a human foetus which is contrary to their religious beliefs."

The New Zealand Herald reported: "The lawyer for the police and Defence staff at the centre of the claim is now calling for the suspended workers to return to their jobs immediately, saying many have given decades of service to their community and are still committed to their jobs."

Like a lot of global leaders, New Zealand Prime Minister and World Economic Forum cheerleader Jacinda Ardern does not respect the will of the people and the law. The government in New Zealand have now filed an appeal against the High Court decision.

Ardern may have had a stranglehold on New Zealanders for a long time, but it is refreshing to see some Kiwis take back control from the dictatorship.

Scotland Loch Ness

Loch Ness monster considered an "anti-Scottish" imperialistic symbol according to new school curriculum

by PAUL BENNETT

WOKE Scottish educators are rolling out a bizarre social studies curriculum to 11–14-year-old secondary school students centred around the legendary and mystical Loch Ness monster.

The 17-page social studies lesson plan for secondary school teachers is to highlight the role British class structure and English dominance had on Scottish culture and in reinforcing negative Scottish stereotypes.

Lesson plans will include watching films about the Loch Ness monster including the 1996 family drama 'Loch Ness' starring Ted Dawson and Joely Richardson. The 'educational' document states: "The very idea of a prehistoric monster in a loch affirms the stereotypical idea Scotland is a rural wilderness, perhaps one bypassed by progress. This is a very British idea of Scotland, propagated previously by upper-class tourists in the 19th century."

The social studies class also aims to encourage pupils to "construct a view of wider contemporary topics relating to Scotland, such as the independence referendum."

According to Chris McGovern, chairman of the Campaign for Real Education: "It seeks to brainwash pupils into believing that Scotland is the victim of a wicked conspiracy to subvert and infantilise its identity. The nationalist cause must be in desperate trouble if it has to resort to such propaganda tactics with young people. My advice to teachers is to use the Nessie Plan itself as an example of how bias is used by educators."

Local tourism business owner Willie Cameron and also affectionately known as 'Mr Loch Ness' optimistically told the Inverness Courier newspaper: "There is no such thing as bad publicity as far as Loch Ness is concerned. If it raises people's heads and creates debate, so much the better. "He added, "I'm not overly impressed with some of the assertions within the lesson plan but so what."

The Scottish National Party (SNP) under the leadership of dour Nicola Sturgeon are clearly in election/referendum mode by using 'Nessie' as propaganda to conjure up nationalist sentiments in young people.

Desperate times calls for desperate measures!

MEPs roast Trudeau on visit to Brussels

by PAUL BENNETT

Two Members of the European Parliament (MEP) from Germany and Croatia brilliantly roasted arrogant Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau over his disgraceful and unforgivable handling of the freedom loving truckers protest in Ottawa.

In late March during a two-day trip to Belgium, Trudeau was at the European Union (EU) headquarters in Brussels speaking about the situation in Ukraine and the recent freedom convoy in Ottawa. Addressing the EU parliament, Trudeau labelled the truckers and protesters in Ottawa as "cynical populists".

Croatian independent MEP Mislav Kolakusic faced down Trudeau in the EU parliament with some well needed home truths by saying: "Dear colleagues, dear citizens, Prime Minister Trudeau. Freedom. The right to choose. The right to life. The right to health. The right to work. For many of us [these] are fundamental human rights for which millions of citizens of Europe and the world have laid down their lives. To defend our rights, and the rights of our children, which we have acquired over the centuries, many of us, including myself, are willing to risk our own freedom and our own lives."

"Unfortunately, today, there are those among us who trample on these fundamental values. Canada, once a symbol of the modern world, has become a symbol of civil rights violations under your quasi-liberal boot in recent months. We watched how you trample women with horses. How you block the bank accounts of single parents so they can't even pay for their children's education and medicine. So that they can't pay utilities or mortgages for their homes."

Kolakusic finished by stating; "To you, these may be liberal methods. But for many citizens of the world, it is a dictatorship of the worst kind. Rest assured that citizens of the world united can stop any regime that wants to destroy the freedom of citizens, either by bombs or harmful pharmaceutical products."

German MEP Christine Anderson from the AfD grouping in the Parliament also grilled Trudeau on his blatant hypocrisy: "Based on article 195, I would like to point out that it would have been appropriate for Mr Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada, to address this house, according to article 144.An article, which was specifically designed to debate the violations of human rights, democracy, and the rule of law which is clearly the case with Mr Trudeau."

"Then again, a Prime Minister, who openly admires the Chinese 'basic dictatorship', who tramples on fundamental rights by persecuting and criminalising his own citizens as terrorists, just because they dared to stand up to his perverted concept of democracy, should not be allowed to speak in this House at all."

Anderson concluded by saying, "Mr Trudeau, you are a disgrace for any democracy. Please spare us your presence. Thank you."

Both MEPs received a rapturous applause from some parliamentarians in the chamber after their take down of Trudeau. The days of smug Trudeau holding court on a world stage and getting a warm reception everywhere he goes are now thankfully long gone.

China builds cheap coal plants while West suffers energy crisis

CHINA was responsible for more than half of the new coal power station capacity being built across the world last year, with 176 gigawatts of new coal-fired power station projects commenced.

More coal than ever was burned last year, despite the COP26 agreement for nearly every country to scale back their coal use. As gas and oil become more expensive, it would seem Asian countries are giving themselves the economic advantage Western nations had in the 19th century, but have since been persuaded to drop in favour of wind turbines and solar panels which have no capability to provide sufficient constant power for modern socieities.

The number of coal power stations is actually growing in Asia as new constructions more than offset the closure of old plants. India, South Korea and Malaysia also increased their coal capacity in 2021 according to the GLobal Eenrgy Monitor.

Corporate media outlets such as Nww Scientist and The Guardian are only wringing their hands at the likelihood that all of this natural, cheap enegry production will raise the Earth's temperature beyond the 1.5 degree figure agreed at the COP26 summit. Proof that a vague and unproven ideology means more to these publications than the average person's general standard of living, which is clearly decling rapidly through political choice.

"It's a mixed story. Everywhere outside of China, plans for new coal-fired power plants have been scaled back dramatically," says one of the report's authors, Lauri Myllyvirta at the Centre for Research on Energy and Clean Air. "However, Chinese firms have continued to announce new coal-fired power stations and there is very clear government backing for that. That's a worrying sign."

The Light paper has been publishing articles on the energy crisis for over a year, as many industry experts have been warning about it, horrified at the deliberate political destruction of Britain's once world-leading energy infrastructure.

Those who still place the climate agenda above people's ability to feed and heat themselves have clearly been led to believe so by a decades-long campaign from the establishment to convince them the welfare of the Earth is of more importance than their own individual needs. When one is hungry, cold, sick or hopeless, how much attention will be paid to the health of the environment then?

Perhaps when the lights start to go out, or bills rise so massively that people can't afford to live in their own homes, then the penny will drop about what has been taking place, though of course it will be too late.

U.S. Army to test drone swarm in Utah desert

A SWARM of military drones will be launched over the Utah desert as part of an international field training exercise later this month, according to a report published by The War Zone. The swarm will comprise of 30 small drones for a dual air-assault mission.

"I think what you're going to see is an expansive use of electronic warfare and an expansive use of our interactive drone swarm," Maj. Gen. Walter Rugen, head of the Army's Future Vertical Lift Cross-Functional Team, told The War Zone.

"We feel like we're going to be flying the largest interactive drone swarm ever in partnership with DARPA and our science and technology experts out of Aviation and Missile Command," Rugen said.

The test will occur at the Army's 2022 Experimental Demonstration Gateway Exercise, which runs from April 25 to May 12 at Dugway Proving Ground near Salt Lake City, Utah. The service will use a combination of ALTIUS 600 and Coyote drones by Raytheon.

ALTIUS 600's range is about 276 miles and can operate for four hours. Depending on payloads, the drone weighs 20-27 pounds and can be outfitted with a warhead head for offensive missions. Meanwhile, Coyote drones provide reconnaissance.

by TYLER DURDEN

The drones will be launched from an assortment of aircraft and ground vehicles.

"We'll be launching them pretty much, you know, Monster Garage-style, anyway we can," Rugen said. "Which again shows, in my mind, just the flexibility of our air-launched effects initiatives because we can launch it from the air. We can launch it from the ground. We can launch from fixed-wing, rotary-wing, any type of ground vehicle."

The drones will form a swarm where surveillance ones with infrared sensors and electronic warfare payloads will detect and relay intelligence to human operators overseeing the operation. Humans will decide how to engage the enemy targets, whether through suicide drones or other firepower means.

Earlier this month, the Army's Combat Capabilities Development Command Aviation & Missile Center released a short animation of a similar drone swarm scenario.

Judging by the Biden administration's speed in transferring small high-tech drones to Ukraine, these new drone swarms could make their way to the war-torn country in the near term.

Look after your enzymes

by CLIVE DE CARLE

WHAT is the most overlooked part of the body and the most important as we age?

The answer is your enzyme system. This short article could add many healthy years to your life and if you are a conspiracy theorist you might wonder why you and most doctors know little or nothing about it.

Every disease has inflammation within it. Our enzyme system is the key to reduce inflammation. If we don't have enough enzymes we will have inflammation. Your body would never do anything against you, it's always working in your interests. For example, if your arteries are blocked there is a really good reason why it's happening as we will see.

Children spend most of the early part of their lives falling over and hurting themselves. How is it that a few minutes later they are back on their feet again and carry on as though nothing had happened? As we age, our ability to bounce back significantly decreases - probably from the age of 30 - and a fall for the elderly could be fatal. The answer is that children, like all of us, have wonderful self-repairing bodies, and when young they have full access to the nutrients and elements that make up our ability to repair. By the time we reach 30, the chances are that from that point on we will be in decline when it comes to making and utilising these resources. An example would be that men make less testosterone as they age and, in many cases, so do women.

When a doctor says that someone has an arterial blockage they see the blockage as the problem, discussing cholesterol for example, when in fact the real problem is inflammation and a buildup of scar tissue. The blockage is actually the body correcting serious arterial weaknesses which would've been caused by nutrient deficiencies and poisoned (farmed with chemicals) foods.

The most important factor in self repair is the body's ability to manufacture and utilise enzymes.

Enzymes do the work in the body. Vitamin C is technically a co-enzyme, it needs enzymes to allow it to work properly. Enzymes are part of the cleanup crew. A child grazes it's knee and will recover without a scar. It would be very different for the elderly. Let's face it, young kids bounce back really well. Toddlers fall flat on their faces all the time and so long as mum or dad doesn't go into a panic, they usually get right up again. Children generally have their full enzyme system working optimally, therefore rapidly repair.

There are many health professionals who believe that as we get older, the single most important element that we need are enzymes and, in this article, I'd like to explain why.

If I were to get a client who was very elderly that said to me, "do you know I just don't have the appetite to eat more than a sparrow's portion", the first thing I would propose would be that this person should take digestive enzymes at the beginning of each meal. This would mean that the little food that she is eating is utilised to the maximum. Many health professionals believe that from age 45 there is an increasing need for digestive enzymes. It seems pretty clear that enzymes can extend lifespan and keep us healthy.

Digestive enzymes are made from foods generally speaking. Ones you might know of would be bromelain from pineapple and papain from papaya. In a good digestive enzyme blend you should find elements to help digest each type of food, from carbohydrates, fats, proteins, dairy and so forth. Many people with digestive problems find digestive enzymes help people cope with foods that don't agree with them at that time. This can be useful when going out for a meal.

I would like to bring your attention now to proteolytic enzymes. These are enzymes that digest proteins. They can be used to help digest protein rich foods however a much more important use is to take it at least 2 hours after eating proteins, in which case it digests scar tissue (fibrosis) both internally and externally, which it sees as foreign protein. Proteolytic enzymes dissolve the scar tissue allowing the body to replace fibrosis with normal healthy tissue. The body can then recycle and reuse the component parts.

Irritation leads to inflammation which leads to scar tissue, if not corrected. These proteolytic enzymes, Prozymes for short, are anti-inflammatory and thus reduce pain in the body.

They dissolve arterial plaque and the fibrosis which is like a spider's web of scar tissue helping the arteries to stay strong. The body never goes wrong, it just adapts to whatever situation it's faced with and does the best it can, in this case to stop the arteries cracking and bursting. Prozymes can also help with respiratory issues and a host of other serious health problems.

So why have you not heard about this? Why is it not used in mainstream medicine? Well, it is in Germany and many other countries, where it's normal to give proteolytic enzymes before an operation and afterwards to aid avoiding the build-up of scar tissue, very sensible surely?

It's used to reduce miscarriages which are quite often caused by inflammation from the woman having taken in foreign protein, ie a man's sperm. While we're on the subject, women need to research the fact that if they're having miscarriages that they may be low on progesterone. Of course, one would want to find a natural hormone specialist who understands the non-pharmaceutical routes to health. Someone who is knowledgeable in the nutrient deficiencies and toxicity that can also cause miscarriages. Also, babies will be smarter if mum has been using enzymes. (Lugol's iodine of course along with selenium are the two other incredibly important minerals for smart brain function in a newborn.

If someone has been told by the doctor that they have a disease that ends in -itis or -osis then prozymes will help. Importantly in these times prozymes dissolve blood clots and therefore can help dramatically to prevent and hopefully help recover from strokes.

The only group of people who are precluded from supplementing with enzymes are haemophiliacs, everybody else seems to be fine according to the research of many decades.

The uses that the body has for these enzymes include breaking down toxins, cleaning the blood, supporting the immune system, converting protein into muscles, contracting muscles, helping chest and lung issues, inflammatory bowel issues, migraines and headaches, cardiovascular issues like angina, varicose veins, many ear nose and throat issues, nerve damage, and so much more. It's commonly used for animals including racehorses.

There really isn't enough room to go through every single health issue that could be helped. I recommended anybody interested in this kind of information considers joining my secrethealthclub.com where the truth is told when it comes to health. I've had to be circumspect in this article to make sure I don't tell you the whole truth because it doesn't suit the outfits that would like to treat you chemically as opposed to offering you a true remedy. The UK government has banned me from telling you what my supplement website is however as my name is very unusual it's probably not hard to guess.

EMF ignored in massive insect population decline

by SIMON BEST

SEVENTY-five percent of insects have been wiped out since 1989 (Hallman 2017) in tandem with the rise of wireless technologies, such as cell phones, cell towers and more recently WIFI and the Internet of Things.

All available data suggests impending extinction of all insect species (Cardosa 2020, Wyckhuys 2019). The main cause given for the decrease in insect populations is habitat loss due to intensive farming, followed by crop spray, which started in earnest after World War 2, forty four years before the surge of insect mortality. While climate change and invasive species are also posited to contribute to insect decline (El-Shafie 2021), electromagnetic pollution is largely ignored by mainstream science and environmental groups. However, radiation is a strong contender according to independent studies (Kumar and Sharma 2011, Sivani and Sudarsam 2012, Cucurachi 2013, Carpenter 1971). In one study comparing the impact on insects of agrochemicals to electromagnetic frequencies, the latter was found to be the most fatal, destroying three out of four hives. (Lupi 2021).

Birds and Insects are particularly vulnerable to electromagnetic fields which damage their reproductive capacity and disrupt their navigational acumen. (Warnke 2008, Wiltschko 2015, Southern 1975, Goldsworthy 2009. Magnetite, stored in the beaks of birds and in the abdomen of bees, help them to navigate. (Cucurachi 2013). 5G would be deadly to insects, since they absorb far more radiation at mm wavelengths than earlier lower frequencies from 2G, 3G and 4G (Thielens, Bell 2018). This was demonstrated after installation of a cell tower in Idaho in May, 2021 where an entire beehive population at the adjacent farm died within a month.

The earth's electromagnetic field is being sifted by ever increasing levels of wireless technology, filling the air, earth and presently the sea. Many organisms, including insects, are reliant on the earth's magnetic field for navigation and get disorientated by manmade frequencies, as explained by Warnke.

'All magnetic field sensitivity in living organisms, including elasmobranch fishes, is the result of a highly evolved, finely-tuned sensory system based on single-domain, ferro-magnetic crystals. Animals that depend on the natural electrical, magnetic, and electromagnetic fields for their orientation and navigation through earth's atmosphere are confused by the much stronger and constantly changing artificial fields created by technology and fail to navigate back to their home environments.' (Warnke 2007).

Of insects, this has particularly impacted bees (Theilens 2018; Warnke 2007; Kumar 2011), contributing to bee colony collapse disorder (Wellenstein 1973, Harst and Kuhn 2006, Sharma and Kumar 2010, Sahib 2011). One study showed it severely disturbed the bee colony and set off the swarming process (Favre 2011). There was increased aggression and reduced aversive learning in exposed bees (Shepherd 2019). Studies on fruit flies showed mobile phone radiation at 90Mhz decreases the reproductive capacity of insects up to 60% through DNA fragmentation and cell death. (Panagopoulos 2004, 2007). Similar results were also found with microwave radiation at other frequencies (Bolshakov 2002, Atli and Unlu 2006). Other studies evinced abnormal mutation in the mealworm beetle, causing severe deformities in irradiated insect pupae. (Carpenter 1971).

Low level RFR sizeably influences the insect circadian clock. In one study it slowed down the cockroach rhythm under dim ultraviolet lights according with results on the Drosophila circadian clock. "300x weaker RF fields also slowed down the cockroach clock in a near zero static magnetic field, demonstrating the internal clock of organism are sensitive to weak RF fields." (Bartos 2019). This confirms the findings of Leif Salford showing that weak electromagnetic fields are just as harmful.

In May 2020, a study was featured in the Times newspaper intriguingly entitled 'Insects fall prey to diet of junk foods'. Investigating why grasshopper populations fell by nearly 1/3 over 2 decades in the Konza Prairie, North Eastern Kansas, a study was carried out between 1996-2017 in undisturbed habitats and in 2002-2017 where bison grazed. (Welti et al 2020) The article reported that Kasper, leading the study, said "in many regions [of the world] the cause of decline was given to be insecticide use and habitat loss." Wireless radiation was not mentioned. As there was no case of habitat loss or insecticide use in the Konza Prairie, they looked at the plants, and found greenhouse gas the main ingredient in the sugars, starches and cellulose of plants, making them less nutritious. Kasper therefore posited that the cause for insect decline could be depleted nitrogen, phosphorous, sodium, zinc and other nutrients in the plants due to rising CO2. He suggested re-greening was redundant, as plants were so nutrient depleted. However, the study ignored the fact that the area is also subjected to solar radiation. Weather data is collected by a CR10 data logger accessed every 15 minutes via wireless internet, which monitors air temperature, relative humidity, solar radiation, wind speed and soil temperature.

On assessing the evidence, it is vital to look at the funding source of studies. Measures advocated by mainstream science to stem the tide of extinction do not address what may be the principal cause of insect decline. While a tiny fraction profit from wireless radiation, all pay for ignoring its impact on our fragile, finely tuned ecosystem. The cast of progress needs revision if it bequeaths erasure. The only real solution is the immediate withdrawal of 4-5G cell towers and mobile phones worldwide, as a matter of urgency.

The jab, the lies and the truth

Components of the establishment are still refusing to accept the evidence; rejecting their own statistics which show that the covid jabs have already proved to be not just a failure but a medical disaster

by Dr VERNON COLEMAN
MB ChB DSc

THE individuals who were foolish enough to accept the covid-19 jabs must now be able to see the consequences of their misplaced trust in the politicians, the media and the medical establishment.

Those who accepted one or more of the covid-19 jabs are now at risk from a variety of illnesses and are, paradoxically, even more likely to die of covid (the rebranded flu) than those who saw through the lies and rejected the call to be jabbed. The fully vaccinated make up nine out of ten covid-19 deaths in England.

When the jabs were first introduced (back in 2020) I warned that those who allowed themselves to be given one of the experimental injections would be immunologically compromised and vulnerable to a wide range of infections. That warning was well-founded.

While government scientists and media doctors on television were accusing the un-jabbed of endangering those around them I warned that it would be the other way around: the jabbed would endanger the unjabbed.

That's turned out to be true too.

Those who accepted the covid jab are now becoming symptomless carriers, before falling ill themselves. As predicted, they are almost certainly the cause of new variations of the flu and new infections. Moreover, there is early evidence that those who have been in close contact with the jabbed may be endangered. The nature and extent of the risk isn't clear yet – after all, we are in the early stages of the world's largest, most unethical and most unjustifiable experiment.

Frighteningly, the various components of the establishment are still refusing to accept the evidence; rejecting their own statistics which show that the covid jabs have already proved to be not just a failure but a medical disaster.

Before I was officially downgraded to conspiracy theorist I was, for 50 years considered an expert on iatrogenesis and drug side effects and I have steadfastly opposed this indecent jabbing programme.

Back in December 2020 I used evidence from the American Government to warn that the mRNA covid jabs could cause a huge number of serious adverse events – including myocarditis, heart attacks and strokes.

Back in 2020 I had mentioned my fear that the jabbed might suffer brain damage as a result of the covid-19 jab.

The big question was, can the lipid nanoparticles carry the mRNA jab across the blood brain barrier? The blood brain barrier is a semi permeable barrier of cells which prevent some substances in the blood from crossing into the protective fluid around the central nervous system.

After all, liquid nanoparticles are already used to deliver other drugs across the blood brain barrier. If the LNPs carry the mRNA jab into the brain then the neurons, the brain cells, might be marked as foreign by the body's immune system. And as more booster jabs are given the problem will get worse. Brain cells might be targeted and killed by cytotoxic T cells.

Predictably, the mRNA jab was found in heart, lung, liver, testicles – and brain.

How many of the brain cells will die is something only time will tell. Children, of course, will be more vulnerable because they are more delicate and because they are likely to live longer.

There is hope not least from the fact that the combined might of the mainstream media and the medical profession has been far less successful in 'selling' the covid jab than they might have hoped

Despite this, the dangerous and ineffective covid-19 jabs were rolled out to billions without doctors having the faintest idea what will happen.

In November 2021 a paper published in the medical journal Circulation concluded that the mRNA jabs dramatically increased inflammation on the endothelium and T cell infiltration of cardiac muscle. This linked the jabs to thrombosis, cardiomyopathy and other vascular events.

But the unethical jabbing continued.

Journalists ignored the fact that fit sports professionals were collapsing with heart trouble. The highest profile death was that of cricketer Shane Warne who had promoted the jabs and who died suddenly and mysteriously at the age of 52.

There were so many heart problems among children that defibrillators were put in schools.

But journalists and doctors found other, sometimes bizarre, explanations for this new epidemic of heart disease.

The Evening Standard in London said that up to 300,000 people were facing heart related illnesses due to something called Post Pandemic Stress Disorder. `Wales OnLine' reported that the huge increase in energy prices was responsible for the increase in heart attacks and strokes. The Daily Record said that paracetamol had increased heart attack risks and the risk of strokes. The Daily Express had this headline: `Heart attacks: Does skipping breakfast increase your risk?' The Daily Mirror in Sri Lanka says the Delta variant of covid can cause heart trouble in patients with no previous history of problems. And the Daily Mirror in the UK said there was now a new miracle jab to save 1000s of lives by preventing heart attacks. Make people ill with one jab and mend them with another. ABC7 in Los Angeles reported that doctors had warned that Super Bowl games might trigger heart attacks. The Mayo Clinic in the US said that stress and chaos can cause heart disease. (I first pointed that out in 1978 in a book called Stress Control. I was widely vilified for saying that. But now it seems stress is running amok.) The Sun newspaper reported that the weather can cause heart attacks. There were claims that the epidemic of heart attacks were caused by people eating too much good food. Vitamin D shortages were also blamed. Scientific American said that covid-19 can lead to heart damage among people with no symptoms at all. National Geographic warned that covid-19 could cause heart palpitations, chest pain and blood clots.

A drug company, argued that `long covid' increases heart trouble.

Ah,`Long Covid'!

In early 2022, the UK Government said that there were officially 1.3 million people in Britain suffering from `long covid' – and that the figure was rising fast. Two thirds of those individuals were reported to have been off work for a year or more.

Before I was officially downgraded to conspiracy theorist I was, for 50 years, considered an expert

Almost before the figure had been published it had been amended and the total was said to be approaching two million. A report from the US suggested that around 12 million Americans were alleged to be off work with `long covid'.

Covid believers claim that 12% of those who've had covid still have symptoms 12 weeks later.

The media ignored the fact that the biggest and most significant research into long covid, involving 26,000 individuals, concluded that long covid is largely a psychological problem.

People who had taken a year off work on full pay didn't want to go back to their offices.

The evidence shows that long covid is a combination of hypochondria and malingering.

It's the beginning of the universal basic income – a critical part of the Great Reset now being trialled in Wales and Ireland.

There was never a covid pandemic but now we have a global long covid pandemic.

So, why have they created this fake disease - `long covid'?

First, governments have welcomed the growth in the number of alleged covid sufferers because it helps make people afraid of the rebranded flu – and accept the jabs which are dishonestly promoted as preventing it.

Second, governments know that if a huge chunk of the workforce stays at home the disruption and the cost will severely damage the economy.

Third, and this is crucial, the false long covid disease is an excellent cover for the injuries caused by the covid-19 jabs.

A list of the commonest side effects associated with the covid-19 jabs just happens to be the same as the commonest symptoms associated with `long covid'.

Naturally, anyone who dares to look at the evidence – and question the long covid myth – is dismissed as a conspiracy theorist and banned from sharing their views.

However, there is hope not least from the fact that the combined might of the mainstream media and the medical profession has been far less successful in `selling' the covid jab than they might have hoped.

Back in the late summer of 2021, we were told that just a few million people had refused to be jabbed. The unjabbed were made to feel threatened and isolated. It seemed as though the lies and deceits of the politicians, advisors, doctors and journalists had worked.

But in April 2022, `The Expose' website used Government figures to show that at least 19.2 million people in England had not received a single covid-19 jab. Moreover, many of those who had received the first jab had refused to have a second or third jab.

The Government had lied about the number of people who had been jabbed. .

Now we have wait to see what will happen to the foolish millions who allowed themselves to be poisoned with the covid jabs.

Right at the start I warned that more people would be killed by the jabs than by covid-19.

I'm afraid I stand by that prediction.

Warped schools are wrecking children's minds

An Irish teacher describes what life is like in the classroom as the 'woke' Communist agenda permeates every aspect of school life

THE Irish education system is broken. Schools are no longer engaged in educating our children. They are little more than indoctrination camps. They have been weaponised and the woke agenda has its finger on the trigger. Critical-thinking, debating skills and diverse opinions were once prized skills in the classroom but that was then and this is now.

Our school corridors were once filled with colourful history, geography and science projects along with the ubiquitous Irish seanfhocail but they have been replaced by screaming, in-your-face murals, posters, flags and other paraphernalia of the UN transhumanist agenda.

Morning announcements used to proudly declare pupils' academic or sporting achievements only to be replaced by dystopian pronouncements about climate alarmism, the latest variant, vaccine appointments or a minute's silence for victims of toxic masculinity, racism, gender misplacement or Ukraine.

Diversity is de rigueur but only for certain ideologies. Diversity of opinion is frowned upon and the warped rainbow agenda has got its ugly, cross-curricular tentacles into every subject area. Language teachers struggle to keep up with the latest victim group: every exam with feature propaganda on feminism, LGBTQ, open borders, climate mania, white supremacy and every other conceivable type of intersectionality.

Junior Cycle C.S.P.E. is a hodgepodge of liberal nonsense where the 'civic, social and political' education is ideologically-driven and the state exam is a laughable, jumbled mish-mash of woke narratives that must be regurgitated to show how 'educated' you are.

Geography has become a politically-correct mess of climate emergency ('is it cooling or warming today?'), multiculturalism and open-border migration.

In science, well, the science only becomes settled when it satisfies the 'current thing'.

The globalist communist agenda permeates every subject at every level.

The teachers who push it, push hard. Others who are conscious of what's going on and try to push back are acutely aware of what's coming down the line in the final exam. Moreover, they don't want to be accused of not having prepared their students. It's a catch-22 situation: damned if they do; damned if they don't.

Staff-room conversations which once revolved around academic achievement, sporting prowess, pastoral care and promoting excellence are now centred around baking days for Ukraine, LGBTQ issues, mis-gendering students and Covid-19/ climate alarmism.

We used to ask questions like: 'What level is he or she more suited to?' but now it's not uncommon to hear: 'What are their pronouns?'

Teachers are manic about putting up flags and posters pushing 'the latest thing'.

Corridors and classrooms are replete with every type of queer flag, Covid-19/Climate/Ukraine/Racism murals adorn the walls. The students and staff are bombarded with a deluge of audio-visual messaging every minute of every day.

Teachers and students are shunned and marginalised if they don't subscribe. If you're not marvelling at murals or fawning over flags, you're considered to be aloof, an oddball.

The pressure to 'conform' is immense as nobody wants to be labelled a 'racist / transphobe / misogynist / conspiracy theorist' and viciously attacked by the '#BeKind' brigade or have their academic record sullied.

'Well-being' is the new mantra in all school settings. It sounds great and very student-centred. If schools are looking out for everybody's 'well-being', that can't be a bad thing, all wrapped up in touchy feely all-inclusive language. Except, wellbeing has become enmeshed with all the woke agendas. It's wellbeing as long as you subscribe to the current 'accepted' narrative.

Online schooling during the lockdowns was hugely problematic for a lot of our young people. The lack of human contact, the inability to meet up with friends and the incessant barrage of apocalyptic images and announcements on their social media apps and on the mainstream media caused them untold anxiety which will be felt in their lives for decades to come.

Their mental health and general wellbeing was at rock bottom. However, when schools reopened, the onslaught continued unabated.

The script was already written and every school in the land complied. so-called well-being went out the open windows, in the 'well-ventilated' rooms, and the our young people were subjected to an overwhelming assault on their mental health: terrifying pronouncements about variants, belligerent teachers shouting about social-distancing, snarling about mask-wearing and following the omnipresent arrows. Regular announcements about the all-encompassing panacea of the vaccine/ booster cocktail topped it all off.

Wellbeing was only allowed within the strict confines of the Globalist / WHO / HSE / Government / MSM narrative. Any teacher who dared to raise their head above the parapet, to question the totalitarian approach or advocate for students whose welfare and fundamental rights were being denied, was made to feel like a pariah. Students who questioned or went against the rules were treated like social outcasts. Schools became insufferable for a lot of students and staff.

Today, the blue and yellow HSE Covid-19 posters and arrows have been replaced by the blue and yellow Ukraine flags and other accoutrements. The propaganda being churned out is unceasing, yet again. The heart of the matter is not being addressed: the deteriorating mental health of our pupils in a vicious, pernicious circle of leftist indoctrination.

Schools should be centres of excellence where learning, debating, critical-thinking, evaluation, inquiry, scrutiny and dissection are encouraged - places where diversity of opinion is promoted and advanced, where freedom of thought and expression is protected and nurtured. Schools have become like Soviet-style camps where inculcation, brainwashing and propagandising are the order of the day.

Despite the onslaught against these innocent children, teachers stay silent and allow it to happen, much like the nurses and doctors who turn a blind eye to the slaughter of their patients from the vaccine. Parents know their children are being subjected to twisted ideas based in lies but they too are afraid to speak out. If only a handful did, it would be the beginning of the end, and we might be able to restore sanity to the classroom and produce solid, strong and moral adults rather than a generation of gender-confused deluded victims who have no way of coping in the real world.

SAY NO TO 5G

MILITARY GRADE 5G (FIFTH GENERATION) WIRELESS TECHNOLOGY IS BEING IMPOSED UPON THE IRISH PEOPLE WITHOUT THEIR PERMISSION AND WITH NO REGARD FOR THEIR HEALTH

THE IRISH GOVERNMENT IS PUSHING THIS DANGEROUS SPYWARE TO CREATE THE SO-CALLED 'SMART' SURVEILLANCE STATE OR 'INTERNET OF THINGS' WHERE EVERYTHING, INCLUDING HUMANS, WILL BE MICROCHIPPED, MONITORED AND CONTROLLED

5G IS NOT FOR YOUR BENEFIT. IT IS TO FACILITATE GOVERNMENT SURVEILLANCE OF EVERY CITIZEN 24/7 AS PART OF THE EU/UN 'GREAT RESET' DEPOPULATION AGENDA

ALL OVER IRELAND, WIRELESS MASTS ARE BEING INSTALLED BESIDE HOMES, SCHOOLS AND PLACES OF WORK EMITTING A CONSTANT STREAM OF RADIO-FREQUENCY MICROWAVE RADIATION

CUMULATIVE DAILY RADIATION POSES SERIOUS RISKS TO HEALTH INCLUDING HEADACHES, SLEEP DEPRIVATION, POOR MEMORY, CANCER, NEUROLOGICAL DISEASES AND INFERTILITY

THERE IS OVERWHELMING EVIDENCE THAT EXISTING RADIO FREQUENCY EXPOSURES ARE HARMFUL TO HEALTH. MORE THAN 10,000 STUDIES INDICATE THAT ELECTROMAGNETIC POLLUTION IS LINKED TO THE BIGGEST KILLERS OF MODERN TIMES INCLUDING HEART DISEASE, CANCER AND DIABETES

A STUDY COMPARING PEOPLE LIVING CLOSE TO AND FAR AWAY FROM CELL ANTENNAS FOUND A SIGNIFICANT IMPACT ON THOSE LIVING NEAR THEM. DAMAGE WAS FOUND IN THEIR BLOOD THAT PREDICTS CANCER DEVELOPMENT

IRISH PEOPLE AND COMMUNITIES ARE BEING STRIPPED OF THEIR RIGHT TO MAKE DECISIONS AND HAVE NOT BEEN CONSULTED IN ANY WAY ABOUT THE INSTALLATION OF THIS HAZARDOUS TECHNOLOGY

CHILDREN HAVE THINNER SKULLS, SMALLER HEADS AND HIGHER WATER CONTENT IN THEIR DEVELOPING TISSUES. AS A RESULT, RADIATION PENETRATES MORE DEEPLY AND MORE INTENSELY INTO A CHILD'S BRAIN COMPARED TO AN ADULT

5G PLANS THREATEN TO PROVOKE SERIOUS, IRREVERSIBLE EFFECTS ON HUMANS AND PERMANENT DAMAGE TO ALL OF THE EARTH'S ECO-SYSTEMS:
PETITION TO THE UN, WHO AND EU SIGNED BY 26,000 SCIENTISTS

IRELAND ALREADY HAS THE THIRD HIGHEST CANCER RATE IN THE WORLD

IRISH PEOPLE MUST TAKE ACTION TO END THE DEPLOYMENT OF 5G IN THEIR COMMUNITIES NOW
