Pfizer knew their vaccine would kill

Leaked data shows shocking number of fatalities and side effects now officially associated with covid shots

THE documents were leaked due to a cyber attack on the European Medicines Agency (EMA) website. More than 40 megabytes of classified information from the agency's review were published on the dark web, and several journalists including the BMJ were sent copies of the leak by anonymous senders.

The documents have proved to be shocking due to the sheer amount of side effects that are now officially associated with the 'vaccine'. Most alarmingly, there were at least 1,223 deaths reported in the first 28 days following the shot.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) had previously agreed to withhold the documents and their shocking revelations from the public for 75 years.

The HSE, media and the government continually state that the vaccines are 'safe and effective' and those that had reported vaccine-related injuries were often accused of making false correlations or imagining their symptoms.

However, the Pfizer documents paint a very different picture. They list thousands of side effects that occurred at an alarming rate which were as a direct result of taking the experimental genetic injection.

by JANINE GRIFFITHS

These side effects included non-fatal conditions such as eczema, blisters, asthma, low sperm counts and fertility problems.

Other more serious side effects included, but were not limited to: auto-immune disorders; blindness; diabetes; herpes; heart problems such as myocarditis; thyroid disorders; neurological conditions such as multiple sclerosis; seizures; epilepsy; narcolepsy and Guillain-Barre Syndrome. Also, inflammatory bowel disease, relapsing diseases, deafness and even tongue biting.

While it has been approved for use in pregnant women, it is also known to cause pregnancy complications, including many spontaneous abortions.

One of the many issues it causes is anaphylactoid syndrome of pregnancy or ASP for short. ASP is a fatal disease for mothers and is among the leading causes of maternal mortality.

Symptoms include anxiety, confusion, shortness of breath, severe bleeding and death. Therefore, there is a high risk for pregnant women taking the covid 'vaccine'.

The Pfizer document also lists various blood disorders, Crohn's disease, and liver failure as side-effects. Blood clotting was another issue reported from the 'vaccine' trials.

One of the most telling side effects of this covid-19 injection is... covid-19. Proponents often argue that despite the possible side effects associated with some of the covid shots, they at least prevent people from dying from covid-19.

The problem is that the 'vaccine' actually causes people to develop the disease. In other words, it is contributing to the number of cases. It also lists covid-19 associated pneumonia as a side effect.

Some may argue that all of these side-effects are only associated with the Pfizer shot.

However, death and serious injuries have been present and publicly acknowledged with all of the manufacturers' shots.

Research developed by Edinburgh University showed that almost 350 Brits have been struck down with a separate rare clotting disorder after getting the AstraZeneca vaccine.

These blood clots cause minor bruising around the body and can leave some with a purple-dotted rash.

The Moderna vaccine has been associated with heart problems such as myocarditis and pericarditis. The list of adverse reactions also includes inflammation, fainting and breathing difficulties.

Data from the UK Health Security Agency (UKHSA) listed on page 2 has also revealed that both covid-19 deaths and cases were worse in vaccinated people, particularly those over the age of 18

The data in the table is clear: the chances of developing covid-19 increases significantly following subsequent 'booster' jabs.

This is broadly in line with the information contained in the Pfizer document, which stated that vaccine side effects cause covid-19 and respiratory illnesses.

Coupled with the fact that ONS data recently revealed that covid deaths were much lower than previously thought, the risks of taking the vaccine seem to greatly outweigh the risks of not doing so.

The black joke of Irish solidarity

John Waters on the galling hypocrisy behind 'Stand with Ukraine'

MANY Irish people who decided to put on display their 'solidarity' and 'compassion' for 'Ukrainian refugees' were within a couple of weeks experiencing 'buyer's remorse.' The new arrivals had barely arrived, when their 'foster' families were depositing them back to the collection point, claiming they were 'unable to cope'.

We can but hope that this is a portent of what will occur in a few years when the native population as a whole tumbles to what has been happening at the macro level with the imposition of alien people on a tiny country with limited resources. It is entirely possible that the 'refugee crisis' arising from the war in Ukraine may be the unexpected factor that finally brings Irish people to their senses after decades of political gaslighting, NGO bullying and corrupt journalism.

In the Ukraine psy-op, people have been sucked into a fantasy of pseudo-reality, in which they participate not in a real life/real death situation but a kind of Hollywood movie of plucky, jolly people battling an evil foe, and Ireland called to exhibit a spirit of 'solidarity' concerning a conflict about which it is allowed to hear nothing but untruth.

This heroic saga soon turned into a black joke. Within a short time of the commencement of a massive campaign of bullying and moral blackmail, in which the Irish population were lectured about their 'responsibilities to Ukraine' and informed that they would have to prepare to make enormous sacrifices to fulfil these alleged responsibilities, it became clear that most of the refugees coming in under the Ukraine war rubric were not from Ukraine at all. Photographic memes of the 'refugees' arriving in various rural communities went viral, showing local worthies posing with their adopted 'Ukrainians,' most of whom looked about as Slavic as Joe Duffy. The Telegram vlogger Philip Dwyer made a video of himself interviewing 'arrivals from Ukraine' at Dublin Airport, most of whom appeared to be from Kashmir.

The Ukraine psy-op may in time emerge as an 'emblematic event' that encapsulates the entire journey of Irish would-be 'multiculturalism.' For much of the past two decades, Irish parents have been conveying their children to the various airports before waving goodbye to them as they departed for distant lands because the country they were born into has been unable to meet their basic needs for shelter and the means of feeding and clothing themselves due to the legacy of corrupt governments.

On their way to the departure lounge, many of these young Irish people would meet their replacements coming in the opposite direction, arriving to feed off the fat of the land at the invitation of Irish NGOs and politicians. Indeed the Irish state has made it clear, in a relentless message disseminated by the state-sponsored media, that young Irish people need have no expectation of ever owning their own houses in their native country, or of attaining a sufficient level of income to have any hope of overcoming that fatwah. Meanwhile, the Irish political class has assumed its right - under instructions from external forces intent upon the destruction of Ireland - to invite in the entire world, promising front door latchkeys, abundant social welfare payments, full citizenship for a song, and the protection of 'hate speech' laws lest any of the locals might seek to raise an objection.

Meanwhile, Irish people who had emigrated in the past - and the offspring of such people - have to jump through hoops should they seek to return to the Irish homeland, being required to sever all connection with the country they wish to return from, abandoning every facet and residue of their former life, including employment, dwelling-place and financial entanglements, and, in the unlikely event of being successful in their applications, being required to face a gauntlet of obstacles before they could be accepted as even residents of the country they were by birth entitled to call their home.

The message is clear: an Irish connection all but disqualifies; aliens only are enthusiastically welcomed.

Until now, the native population has been swallowing hard in acceptance of this utter travesty of justice and decency. If they object, they are daubed as 'racists' by agents provocateurs employed for precisely that purpose by the Irish state, and paid for out of the pockets of the very people whose noses are being rubbed in the ideological dirt, and who are threatened with fines and jail if they object or question.

It would, in the end, be ironic if it

The war in Ukraine may be the unexpected factor that finally brings Irish people to their senses after decades of political gaslighting, NGO bullying and corrupt journalism was the Ukraine 'crisis' that marked the beginning of a reawakening. In the first place, of course, the 'crisis' was engineered and timed by precisely the same agents and actors who had been instructing Irish politicians that they must absorb more migrants, 'refugees' and 'asylum seekers' — essentially the eurobullies who have saddled the Irish people with most of the 'community's' debts arising from the economic meltdown of 2008. These people think the Irish people a soft touch, because they have found that their representatives are soft in the head.

The 'war' in Ukraine resulted from several years of goading of Vladimir Putin by the United States, the EU and NATO, seeking to menace the Russian people by pushing their troops and nuclear warheads ever closer to their borders. This menacing escalated dramatically in early 2022, and had the inevitable result of provoking Putin to send troops to defend the independent peoples of the Donbass from an imminent attack by Ukrainian forces.

Ireland is (supposed to be) a neutral country. This means that Ireland is supposed to be 'non-aligned', which is to say that it is not supposed to have any prior commitment or allegiance to either side in any emerging conflict. But it was quite clear from the statements issuing from Irish politicians as the baiting of Russia escalated in February 2022 that they had no intention of abiding by this longtime policy of Irish governments. With the help of their bought-and-paid-for media, they gaslighted and bullied the public into accepting a partial and twisted version of the reasons for the conflict, concealing the true nature of Ukraine from a public that, despite being maltreated and abused by its political class for decades, remains naively willing to believe those in authority.

Ukraine has for a long time been a dark stain on the world, a cesspit of corruption, violence and criminality - especially so since the US-orchestrated coup of 2014. Long the base of the Khazarian mafia, which manifests in the form of actual existing Nazis, it has for the past eight years been the epicentre of every kind of fraud, malfeasance and skullduggery - money laundering, prostitution, human and child trafficking, drug peddling - much of it orchestrated from the dark wastelands of the US Deep State and the Cultural Marxist revolutionaries who seek to overthrow Western civilisation in its present form.

In time to come, when the true history of the 'Stand With Ukraine' endeavour is written, the names of Irish politicians like Martin, Coveney, Ryan and Varadkar - who pushed and defended this spurious narrative at great cost to their own people and the people of the Ukraine - will go down in infamy as the accomplices of Nazis and criminals.

Nevertheless, in the short term, unless they are stopped by the unambiguously expressed will of the Irish people, these political lowlifes, who publicly sneer at the idea of Irish sovereignty and have the brass neck to lecture the Irish people about their duty to stand with the Ukrainians to preserve their (non-existent) sovereignty and democracy, will indeed succeed in carrying out the wishes of their external puppet-masters. Unless the people finally awaken, the country these criminals have presided over, and whose protection was their sole and total responsibility, will have been destroyed, reduced to the same kind of cesspit as was Ukraine, a country once known as 'the bread basket of Europe,' but now merely a basket case.

Covid-19: The revelations will not be televised

Media turning blind eye as pandemic narrative crumbles

by DOMINIC HART

THE pandemic pantomime appears to be ending, but the show is far from over. Those once ostracised for their pursuit of truth are being vindicated by revelations seeping into the public domain, albeit mostly under the mainstream radar.

In the last few months, we have seen reports confirming that lockdowns failed to save any lives from covid - unsurprisingly, this was only picked up by a few news outlets. A recent inquiry also confirmed that Sweden's decision not to impose a lockdown was the right one, as those countries which did went on to experience worse outcomes (see page 17 of this issue of The Light).

For instance, most of the covid-labelled deaths in England and Ireland occurred during the lockdowns. The impact of the lockdowns led internationally renowned epidemiologist Jay Bhattacharya to declare them the 'single biggest public health mistake in history'. The collateral damage from these measures will be felt for years to come.

The government was able to impose these societal restrictions through control of the media and the use of 'hard-hitting emotional messaging' to exaggerate the threat of covid-19. A group of psychologists have since declared the methods used to scare the public into compliance as 'grossly unethical'.

Media outlets challenging the mainstream narrative have been censored and lambasted for spreading 'dangerous misinformation'. The recent furore regarding guests on Joe Rogan's popular podcast has amplified this issue, with guest Maajid Nawaz exposing the use of 'military-grade psy-ops' via the deployment of the British Army's 77th Brigade on social media.

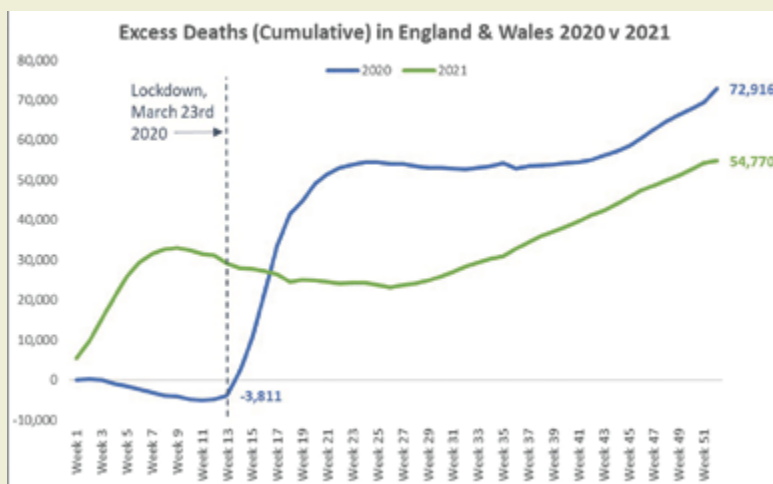

The highly controversial face coverings have come under the spotlight with a recent study showing they do 'little if anything' to prevent the spread of covid. The flawed PCR tests have also been questioned as they are unable to ascertain infectivity and mistake colds and flu for covid.

Since mid-June 2021, NHS England has been publishing data on the proportion of covid inpatients being treated primarily for the virus. During the height of 'omicron' this dropped to less than half. The ONS recently released data on the number of deaths from covid alone and the figures were barely ten per cent of the overall total of covid-related deaths.

170 Freedom of Information requests in 25 countries have failed to show proof of the existence of SARS-CoV-2 or that it causes covid

One may conclude that the threat from covid has been grossly exaggerated from the beginning. Though in the early government and HSE press conferences, we were told that covid was a 'mild disease'

Date source: ONS - Deaths registered weekly in England and Wales from which most would speedily recover. No wonder Downing Street had few qualms about hosting parties during the first lockdown - they just chose not to publicise this fact until 18 months later.

Some of the more alarming impacts of the covid response remain buried in government reports and anecdotes from whistleblowers. The recently published list of adverse vaccine events seems to have conveniently coincided with blanket media coverage of other world events deemed more newsworthy.

Clips of MP Christopher Chope discussing the scale of the 'vaccine nightmare' have since been removed by YouTube as 'medical misinformation'.

Despite this, the vaccine rollout continues with 5-11 year-olds next in line, even though it could take two million shots to prevent just one ICU admission in healthy children from this age group. Would people still rush to roll up their sleeves if they understood the difference between the publicised 95% relative risk reduction and the 1% absolute risk reduction from the Pfizer trial, the integrity of which has been brought into question by a whistleblower exposé in the British Medical Journal?

Claims that the vaccine has saved more than 100,000 lives seem wildly inaccurate given that more people died with covid during 2021 than in 2020.

Despite the media focus on the Wuhan lab-leak theory, one alternative explanation around the origins of the virus remains conspicuously absent from corporate reporting. Don't expect any mainstream media outlet to highlight the fact that over 170 Freedom of Information requests from health institutions in 25 countries have failed to show proof of the existence of SARS-CoV-2, or that it causes covid.

At the beginning of the pandemic, we were told that excess deaths are the true measure of its impact. However, most commentators failed to notice that we were observing negative excess deaths before the first lockdown commenced. It is perhaps no coincidence that following the discharge of 40,000 in-patients by the NHS, there were 40,000 excess out-of-hospital deaths during the first wave.

While the covid narrative has begun to eat itself, the media focus has rapidly shifted to the latest moral panic intended to consume the attention of the masses. Although we can expect little from the recently-announced covid inquiry, The Light paper will always endeavour to bring the under-reported and censored facts to the public.

Scotland issues very few covid jab exemptions

by RICHARD CLARK

FOLLOWING a refusal to grant a member of my family an exemption for the experimental covid 'vaccine' - I decided to find out exactly how many people in Scotland had been officially medically excluded from this massive medical experiment. The reason my interest was heightened is that the senior consultant to this family member initially agreed, in writing, that an exemption should be granted. He saw 'no pressing reason for a "vaccine" to be given'.

A formal exemption was requested and a period of weeks passed, so I grew suspicious. Sure enough when contact was made again, this consultant had changed his views and now recommended vaccination. No way were we going to follow his advice, but the trust was shattered.

I have also heard of people suffering a serious adverse reaction to a first or second dose, and despite this, the medical staff still recommended they get subsequent doses. This goes beyond any comprehension of 'first do no harm' and 'duty of care', as well as 'informed consent' and has destroyed my trust in the medical profession.

And when the government, media and legal profession are already totally untrustworthy, it completes the tearing up of our social contract.

When I made a Freedom of Information (FOI) request to all the Scottish health boards for details of the number of medical exemptions granted, there was an element of evasiveness from some of the boards as well as the Scottish Government, but we got there in the end.

The Scottish Government said it was nothing to do with them, some boards said it was the responsibility of the Scottish Government or the National Services Scotland agency; National Services Scotland said it was nothing to do with them, but in the end provided the figures.

Some requests I asked of National Services Scotland went unanswered such as: 'Please provide any written direction to medical departments regarding not issuing medical exemptions'. I wanted to see a name on a directive, as this issue needs accountability.

The figures from each health board and National Services Scotland are shown on the right. For a population of well over five million people, I find it shocking that for an experimental product with poor efficacy, terrible short-term data, and no long-term data, only 12 people initially, and a further 24 people, have officially been granted exemptions.

If data protection rules allowed us to go further and analyse the exact demographic these exemptions are in, we may perhaps find that the additional 24 are for medical staff, concerned about the possibility of mandates for their profession coming to Scotland, hence the sudden flurry of exemptions granted latterly.

I believe a day of reckoning is coming, and when the many pieces of the covid jigsaw come together, criminality with foreknowledge will be proven.

These FOI requests show intent on behalf of the medical establishment to do harm to members of the public, given that adverse effects and injuries from these novel and experimental injections have been known about since early 2021.

Taking on unlawful lockdown fines

Arrested and fined for offering help to the needy

THE unlawful fines that have been issued against the harmless, no-victim activities of free men and women in this country under the so-called coronavirus restrictions cannot be allowed to stand.

Just as Dr Reiner Fuellmich has set up a Grand Jury of the People to prosecute those responsible for the biggest crime against humanity in human history, we may well have to do the same for those who have been outrageously victimised by the state and its complicit legal system in their flagrant attack on our God-given rights and freedoms.

Since March 2020, we have had three periods of prolonged lockdown, a confusing tier system, mask mandates, 'bubbles' of six, so-called 'social distancing' (by which they meant 'spatial distancing' - but perhaps the term 'social' was very carefully chosen). Day after relentless day for approaching two years, mainstream TV, radio and newspaper news carried incessant shock-horror reports designed to terrorise people and keep them paralysed with fear.

The ubiquitous mainstream media narrative excluded any kind of debate about these grave issues, and it was very clear that the lockdowns, restrictions on freedoms, and a complete lack of any coherent rationale for these impositions made many feel worried, depressed, and even pathologically anxious.

World-renowned experts on the subject were being censored, silenced and viciously 'cancelled', and vapid celebrities with no medical expertise whatsoever were being pushed forward to sing the praises of the government and their one-size-fits-all, indiscriminate mass-vaccination policy.

A glittering phalanx of reputable

experts in their fields, such as Dr Peter McCullough, Robert O. Young, Dr Andrew Kaufman, Amanda Vollmer, Jim Humbles, Professor Luc Montagnier, Dr Tom Cowan and many others, were having their views and advice ignored, actively censored and even vilified.

Dr Joseph Mercola and Sayer Gi, on whom great numbers of people worldwide rely for natural, herbal and non-pharmaceutical treatments and cures for disease, were being vilified in the press and having their social media posts banned. An incredible 60,000 doctors and scientists had signed the Great Barrington Declaration of July 2020. Yet shamefully, none of this was being reported in the mainstream media.

A wealth of legal advice was also being systematically ignored. Government overreach was

What a nadir we have reached when free men voluntarily offering a community service in the midst of a national crisis are arrested and punitively fined generating legal challenges, yet, again, the press completely ignored these extraordinary developments. Lord Jonathan Sumption was arguing that the decision to run the risk of infection is the decision of the individual, and he was strongly against the continuation of lockdown on grounds of civil liberties. Legal challenges were also being prepared all over the world, with lawyers such as Robert F Kennedy, Reiner Fuellmich, Michael O'Bernicea and Judge Anna Von Reitz.

This, then, was the context of our local action. Having, between us, qualifications in counselling and psychotherapy and with one of us being a BPS Chartered Psychologist, we knew all too well what devastating effects draconian lockdown restrictions were having on people's mental health. In late 2020, we agreed that something needed to be done locally for the sake of everyone's mental health, not just the vulnerable.

It was on the basis of the testimony from all of the above-mentioned experts, along with our professional judgement as psychological therapists, that about half a dozen of us in Stroud (Gloucestershire) decided to start walking around the town wearing Citizens' Conversation sandwich-boards, inviting healing conversations with the public. We made such excursions on a regular basis around Stroud town centre starting in November 2020.

On Saturday, January 9, 2021, three of us were walking around

Stroud wearing our Citizens' Conversation boards, talking with anyone who engaged us, as our way of supporting the local community at a time of great crisis. We were duly arrested near the High Street by an aggressive police officer 'for breaking coronavirus regulations' by holding an alleged 'gathering'. With grotesque irony, when we were arrested, Richard House was talking with a healthcare worker who was clearly upset at what was happening under lockdown, and desperately needed someone to speak to.

Our core concern with this legal case is the attack on civil liberties and common law rights that this illegitimate arrest represents, and through this legal case we are determined to help draw a clear line in the sand on these grave issues so that, in future, the police are not able to overreach their powers and encroach any further into our already fragile civil liberties. We are determined to have this case heard by a jury - and by a specially convened People's Jury, if necessary.

The UK Office for National Statistics has reported a near doubling of rates of depression since the pandemic began, and with the recently published Harvard University meta-analysis report, the evidence is now clear that the lockdown restrictions we were challenging were doing far more harm than good - which is exactly what we were saying at the time.

What a nadir we have reached when free men voluntarily offering a community service in the midst of a national crisis are arrested and punitively fined. To date, we have been fined well over £1,000 between us for the above 'transgressions', and we are now seeking to appeal this overreach outrage by the state and its judicial system. We currently need to raise £4,000 to bring this legal challenge. Victory against this iniquity would set a vital legal precedent for future comparable situations, and we would welcome readers' support.

How the world was conned

Review of the film
The Viral Delusion

by NIALL McCRAE

WATCHING this documentary, I wondered if the true story of covid-19 will ever supersede the official narrative.

Directed by Mike Wallach, The Viral Delusion explains how the purportedly novel coronavirus was generated, how it spread through pseudo-scientific testing and how it persuaded most of the world's population to take a series of improperly tested injections. The vaccine cannot vaccinate against a disease diagnosed by a test unable to distinguish a virus that doesn't exist.

The featured clinical experts, including psychiatrist, Andrew Kaufman, natural physician, Tom Cowan, AIDS researcher, Kevin Corbett and Kiwi doctor, Mark Bailey (husband of Sam, a popular medical myth-buster) have consistently argued that covid-19 is a scam. The authorities have tried to silence them but they have never been proved wrong in their assertions.

According to Kaufman, Cowan and many, SARS-CoV-2 is merely a genetic data sequence. The reported isolation of the virus entailed human nasal samples grown in a culture of monkey kidney cells. The antibiotics added to the mix killed cellular material, causing debris (exosomes). The outcome of this process, a computerised model of strands of RNA, did not need a virus at all.

The film briefly looks back at the origins of germ theory, fast-forwarding to the AIDS epidemic in the 1980s, when Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health warned of a new plague. However, the existence of the disease and its supposedly causative virus HIV was based on dubious evidence. The PCR test was deployed despite its inventor, Kary Mullis, warning against its use for diagnostic screening: with enough amplifications anything could be found. A vast AIDS industry emerged, abetted by mass media.

Officially, the covid-19 outbreak erupted from zoonotic transmission at a food market in Wuhan. As this city is also the site of gain-of-function research on bat coronaviruses, many sceptics suspected a lab leak as the true cause (whether accidental or deliberate).

Cases were redefined from persons displaying symptoms to anybody testing positive on the manipulated 45-cycle PCR test. Exposure of the fraud, such as the Tanzanian president's reporting positive PCR results in samples taken from goats, pawpaw fruit and motor oil was ignored or ridiculed.

Sick until proven healthy was the new doctrine. Government psychological campaigns convinced citizens that they were all potential silent spreaders of a deadly microbe.

Dreadful decisions were made by doctors and health administrators in their covid fugue. Ventilators were hurriedly manufactured to fulfil extra demand, but this apparatus was effectively an instrument of euthanasia, with few patients surviving the ordeal of a machine taking over their breathing. Rather than a last gasp for the severely ill, some ambulant cases were immobilised, to reduce the risk of infecting others.

Destructive lockdowns and deprivations of liberty were imposed for a respiratory illness clinically indistinguishable from influenza.

When the average age of death in Italy was reported as 83, clearly vulnerable people were succumbing to pneumonia as always. The public was fooled into fearing a distinct syndrome, with the hallmark loss of taste and smell.

As I wrote in The Light (January 2022), many sceptics were prone to such persuasion, believing that any bad cold or flu they experienced in the last three years was covid-19. In this stupendous marketing success, first the flu was rebranded; then the 'milder Omicron form' replaced the common cold.

How was this elaborate hoax, with such devastating consequences, possible? A frequent challenge to the clinicians featured in the film is the consensus against them. But most doctors know little about genomics, and any doubters were deterred by the sanctioning of dissidents by the medical establishment. Several of the film's contributors have been censured and smeared, evicted from social media and their jobs, and their professional registrations threatened.

The vaccines were approved by regulators funded by Big Pharma, and promoted by the corporate media funded by the Gates Foundation. Doctors knew that the injections were experimental and hazardous, but went along with the regime. The UK paid £26 for each 'vaccinated' patient in a practice.

Jessica Rose, who warned in Cardiology about the risk of myocarditis, told the film that her article, written with Dr. Peter McCullough, was removed by the journal. The Hippocratic oath of 'first do no harm' has been abandoned.

The Viral Delusion is a compelling scientific counter-attack; lengthy at over two hours, but readily accessible in content and tone. This polished production is the first part of a series of correctives to the covid conspiracy and highly recommended.

Help Finla win their fight

by LOUIZE SMALL

THE owners of Finla Coffee in Plymouth caused uproar when they refused to limit their service to takeaway during lockdown, saying it would damage their business and leave vulnerable customers lonely and disconnected in a time of need.

Deanna and Michael took a firm stand against tyrannical, nonsensical guidelines that gave unfair advantage to large corporations and left smaller businesses to bear the brunt of restrictions and economic fallout.

Their defiant position, standing up for what they believed was right, attracted daily visits from the police and resulted in extortionate fines, which they have been fighting for 18 months.

The fines were reduced by half at a recent appeal, but the couple have until May 4 to find £15,000 or face arrest and imprisonment - an outcome they wish to avoid with two small children to look after.

Mark Horn, of peacekeepers.org.uk, has lodged an appeal with a 43-page skeleton argument. Please read his statement on Finla's website.

Finla's future is uncertain due to financial ruin; they are not out of the woods even if the fine is paid. Their landlord has charged full rent for the last two years and the lease is up for renewal in September - will he renew it, given the controversy the case has attracted?

The couple intend to fight all the way - with or without Finla. They are taking a stand for the greater good of humanity and the future of theirs and all of our children.

We should all be equal under the law, but the court system favours those who can afford the astronomical fees and have political influence. Deanna says the system needs changing to a more equitable one - to match reality with the so-called maxims of law.

Their priorities are to first secure £10,000 for the High Court appeal, and then to pay their personal fines (Finla has also been fined as an entity).

A GoFundMe account has been set up to take contributions. Please donate generously to help these two courageous souls; we should be supporting all those who take a peaceful and righteous stand against the corrupt and powerful corporate state.

Lies, statistics and government agencies

IN February, Public Health Scotland (PHS) stated that they will no longer publish data on covid-19 outcomes (cases, hospitalisations and deaths) classified by injection status, a hitherto valuable component of the vaccination surveillance strategy.

They said their decision was based on 'anti-vaxxers' "inappropriate use and misinterpretation of the data when taken in isolation without fully understanding the limitations."

However, PHS themselves are guilty of misinterpreting and misrepresenting the information to the public.

PHS have redefined the booster 'vaccine' population in a way to artificially and misleadingly reduce the rate of deaths of those boosted relative to the unvaccinated population.

PHS's conclusion that individual death rate with covid is significantly lower in the booster than the unvaccinated population covid is false, being based on inappropriate analysis and scientifically-flawed interpretation.

Throughout the past two years, PHS have provided reliable data quantifying the impact of the Scottish government's covid-19 response on the health of the population.

In particular, they have documented the unprecedented excess deaths that occurred last summer and autumn, prompting an official enquiry as to the cause, and uncovering a spike in September in the number of newborn deaths in Scotland that is also under investigation.

However, their latest decision, no longer to publish data on covid outcomes by vaccination status because they are being misinterpreted, has generated considerable adverse comment.

Claims have indeed been made about the deleterious effects of covid injections that go well beyond what can be supported by PHS's published figures. However, critical appraisal of these unsubstantiated claims, rather than the blanket withdrawal of valuable information, would seem the best antidote to the spread of such misinformation.

In taking their decision to abandon the reporting of covid outcomes by vaccination status, PHS have effectively claimed the scientific high ground, suggesting they alone are the source of reliable data and sound interpretation - a position justified only if the information provided is above reproach, untainted by bias or misrepresentation.

To investigate if PHS possesses the scientific integrity they claim, I have sought evidence from their final report on covid-19 outcomes by vaccination status. The data I have investigated are found in the table and are shown here for the week 29 January - 04 February 2022.

by PROFESSOR RICHARD ENNOS

It gives for the unvaccinated and boosted populations of Scotland the number of deaths with covid for the week, the estimated sizes of the respective populations, and a statistic to quantify death rates in each population - the Age Standardised Mortality Rate (ASMR) per 100,000.

	No. of Deaths	Population	Age Standardised Mortality Rate per 100,000 with 95% confidence intervals
Unvaccinated	13	1,524,406	10.95 (3.40 - 18.50)
Booster	73	3,229,938	1.50 (1.15 - 1.85)

A superficial inspection of this table would suggest to the casual reader that the death rate with covid-19 for those who have received a booster is far lower than for those unvaccinated.

The only defence that the public has against unchecked vaccine damage is the speedy recognition of dangerous safety signals

Enquiring readers might wonder how one value could be used to quantify death rates in unvaccinated and booster populations, each of which comprises individuals of very different ages and death risks. However, such readers are likely to assume that PHS know what they are doing, have overcome this problem and the solution lies somewhere in the obscure calculation of the ASMR statistic.

Given that PHS are generally regarded as an official, authoritative government body, there is no impediment to the casual reader's accepting the conclusion, explicitly stated by PHS, that "the death rate in individuals that received a booster or third dose of a covid-19 vaccine was between 4.6 and 9.5 times lower than individuals who are unvaccinated or have only received one or two doses of a covid-19 vaccine."

However, there are many reasons to doubt PHS's strong conclusions in favour of receiving a booster injection.

I will describe two of the most serious, although more could be cited.

The first problem concerns the definition of the booster population used by PHS, for which I must seek guidance in Appendix 6 of its report. Here I find that the booster population is not, as I might naively have assumed, the number of individuals who have received a booster injection, but rather the number that have received a booster at least 14 days prior to the reporting of the death with covid.

If an individual suffers a covid-related death within 14 days of receiving their booster, they will not be counted as a death in the booster population, but as a death in the population that received two doses of vaccine.

This misattribution is likely to have significant consequences because deaths from adverse vaccination reactions principally occur shortly after vaccination.

The only possible effect that the PHS's redefinition of the booster population can have is, artificially and misleadingly, to reduce the reported rate of deaths in the PHS booster population.

The second problem I have found with PHS's analysis concerns the methods used to deal with the confounding factor of age. The purpose of any report on death rate by vaccination status should be to allow the reader to judge whether their individual risk of death is lower, the same or higher when vaccinated.

Given that the risk of death with covid depends critically on age, with much higher risk in older than in younger cohorts, meaningful reporting requires comparisons of covid mortality by vaccination status within defined age bands e.g. comparison of unvaccinated and boosted mortality rate within the 40-49 years age range. PHS have failed to provide such information relating to individual risk.

Instead, the statistic that PHS have provided (ASMR per 100,000) is one that simply quantifies the impact of a disease on total mortality in a population. It tells us nothing about the individual risk posed by a disease to a particular member of that population who is of a particular age - the critical information needed.

Despite presumably knowing that the ASMR statistic describes impact on a population, PHS nevertheless calculates this statistic and interprets the values calculated (10.95 and 1.50 for the unvaccinated and booster populations respectively) as measures of individual mortality risk in boosted and unvaccinated populations.

There is no justification for drawing this conclusion. As I have emphasised, the statistic calculated is neither suitable for, nor capable of quantifying, individual risk of death with covid in the unvaccinated and booster populations.

The PHS analysis shows clear evidence of bias and gross misrepresentation of the data - not a firm position from which to attack the scientific integrity of others.

Similar shortcomings in the handling of covid-19 data by another official government body, the Office for National Statistics (ONS), have recently been uncovered through dedicated critical analysis by independent researchers. The revelations indicate that all deaths in the first two weeks following vaccination have been removed from the data published by ONS, rendering it corrupted, and any conclusions drawn from these data worthless.

Raw, anonymised data must be made public to ensure impartial, critical, thorough and innovative analysis by those within and outside these government bodies

These instances highlight a systemic problem with the reporting of public health data by government agencies.

Government agencies are uniquely privy to hugely important and detailed information whose analysis and interpretation affect the lives and livelihoods of literally millions of people. Yet the reports that they produce on these data are not critically filtered and validated by the independent peer review process to which all other science is subject.

Instead, the public are asked to trust the scientific integrity of these agencies, many of whom are now reliant in part on funding from foundations that have vested interests in the results reported.

The solution to the problem would be to make the raw public health data collected by government agencies, once suitably anonymised, publicly available for researchers outside government, ensuring that the agencies' analyses could be openly scrutinised and critically appraised - and was no longer sheltered from justified scepticism behind a wall of data secrecy. It would also allow a far wider range of researchers and analytical techniques to be employed, maximising the benefit that can be derived.

This request for free access to public health data is perfectly reasonable, given that the public pays for its collection in the first place.

Nowhere is the necessity for public sharing of health data more desperately needed than for the dataset collated by the covid-19 vaccine Yellow Card adverse event reporting scheme. This was established to rapidly detect safety signals produced by the experimental covid-19 vaccines used in the UK for which no long-term safety data are available. The only defence that the public has against unchecked vaccine damage is the speedy recognition of dangerous safety signals documented by this passive reporting scheme.

Yet once again, despite the public purse being crucial in collecting and collating data, the government body responsible (MHRA) refuses to release the anonymised data for public analysis. This is indefensible, given that the data are routinely transferred to the vaccine manufacturers who have contributed nothing to their production.

The MHRA claim in each of their reports that there is no safety signal to see, but has failed to provide a single scientific study based on the Yellow Card data to support this claim. The lie to their reassurances is given by nearly 1,000 individuals who are now seeking compensation for severe injury and death resulting from administration of the covid shots.

The only way to hold failing public health bodies like PHS, ONS and MHRA to account is to insist that the dangerous information monopoly they enjoy is broken.

Raw, anonymised data must be made public to ensure impartial, critical, thorough and innovative analysis by those within and outside these government bodies.

Alleged police brutality against peaceful protesters

Smartphone videos record 'brutal assault' on woman having panic attack

I am increasingly aware, in these chaotic and challenging times, that there is a clear choice to be made: to either step up, and be the change I want to see in the world, or let the fascist steamroller roll right over me.

I am already a part of this growing movement to take back our rights and freedoms, through my daily life choices, my community involvement and by taking personal responsibility for what is my 'stuff'.

I am currently committed to bringing a civil action against the Metropolitan Police, for the denial of my human rights, specifically the right to peaceful protest. It is my intent that this will provide the basis for a class action.

On the November 28 2020, I was present at what became known as 'The Hillingdon Siege', when a coachload of approximately 40 people were detained and held against their will by the Metropolitan Police at Hillingdon tube station.

Two coaches had left Bournemouth to participate in a peaceful protest against the lockdowns in London. On stopping at Fleet service station on the M3, a policeman approached the coaches and wanted to know where we were going and why. We were told the coaches had to have vehicle checks and we could not continue on our journey. This was both unsettling and alarming, and we were detained at Fleet for at least an hour.

Once we were allowed to leave, we were told that we could be arrested for breaching the Coronavirus Act, if we chose to continue to London. One coach returned to Bournemouth and I was in the coach that continued to London. We left Fleet, with a local police escort, which was replaced by an escort from the Metropolitan Police on the M25.

The police directed us off the road to Hillingdon tube station, where up to 100 police officers awaited us. At this point it felt like we were living in a police state and that democracy was only an illusion. A senior police officer came onto the coach and told us that we were in breach of the Coronavirus Act, that we had to give our personal details and then we would be allowed to return to Bournemouth. Anyone who refused would be liable to arrest.

by MARK ATKINSON

Emotions were naturally running very high as people were in shock, and frightened by what was unfolding. Many of our number filmed the events on their smartphones, and uploaded the live footage to the internet - there was widespread horror when people saw what we experienced on that coach.

We were not permitted to leave the coach, even for the toilet, and unable to access the toilet on the coach, since the aisle was filled with police officers - with no social distancing! We were held at Hillingdon for around three hours.

They were uninterested in engaging in any dialogue and showed no compassion or respect for our welfare. I am aware of nine people being arrested, including an elderly couple in their 70s and a young woman who was having a panic attack. I was asked only once for my details, which I refused to give, and I was not asked again. We were held on the coach against our will, although

The police's actions opened my eyes fully to the lie that we live in a democracy, and the truth that the state is deliberately trying to take away our rights and freedoms we had not broken any law nor committed any crime. The experience was extremely stressful and designed to frighten and intimidate us.

One particular incident stands out as a clear illustration of how the police in particular, and the state in general, have little or no regard for our rights, freedoms or well-being.

The young woman having the panic attack, in her distress attempted to get off the coach, but because the aisle was full of police she could not avoid pushing past them. One officer then arrested her for assault, and her treatment was brutal. She was bent double over a seat and her hands wrenched up behind her to be cuffed. The whole incident was filmed and shows her, in effect, being violently assaulted by the police. On her release, her body bore multiple bruises, which were recorded photographically by her family. The charges against her were eventually dropped when her lawyer told the police they would have their day in court with their photographic evidence. This young woman was traumatised by her ordeal and all who witnessed it were deeply disturbed and distressed.

The police's actions opened my eyes fully to the lie that we live in a democracy, and the truth that the state is deliberately trying to take away our rights and freedoms. However, it has only served to strengthen my resolve and say: 'no'. It was intended that an action would be taken against the police immediately after the Hillingdon Siege, but for various reasons it didn't happen. I decided independently to take up this fight to hold the police accountable for their actions, and contacted the organisation Liberty, who were able to advise me that there is a clear case to answer. Since the end of last summer, I have been busy gathering witness statements, researching legal representation and media coverage. It has been, and continues to be, a very steep learning curve.

The most important point is that the story is told and reaches as many people as possible. I will not stay silent; I have a voice and I will use it hopefully to inspire and encourage others. I know that the only way we will change what is happening in the world today is to put out a strong vibration, based on love and compassion, and to continue to say 'no'. I don't doubt that powerful forces, maybe beyond our comprehension, are hearing us. We will prevail; truth and justice are on our side.

Street lights have been weaponised

Wireless radiation can make targets feel suicidal

by PAUL GREGORY

The purpose of this article is to create greater awareness of the new weaponised LED (Light Emitting Diode) 5G streetlights. People really need to understand what is going on here. Looking on Facebook, there are at least fifty 'Stop 5G groups'; every major town and city has one - they understand how dangerous it is.

I have been personally affected by these new streetlights since Birmingham City Council Lighting Department tested the 5G function of them in December 2019. They are situated in front of my house and in the roads around the estate. I am electrosensitive, which means that I am able to feel and am adversely affected by radiation from mobile phones and masts, as are nearly a million other people in the UK (www.es-uk.info). I immediately felt this radiation when it was turned on.

The effects were instant whenever I answered the front door or went near any windows in my house. The immediate depressed mood, desire to commit suicide was intense. Exposure in line with the streetlight during the day for only a few seconds would produce these effects. When I moved away, they would pass in about ten minutes, and I would be back to normal. This would happen several times a day before I learned to avoid this exposure.

I phoned the Streetlighting Department, and the result was they turned the 5G RF radiation function off for all the streetlights in the vicinity of my house. Wonderful! I was back to normal life until they came on again on January 1, 2020. This time the Department said responsibility had been passed to the firm Amey who had the contract for maintenance with the council. I contacted them but they didn't respond. This situation has continued for the last two years. The effects of the radiation have resulted in my only being comfortable to relax or read in the cloakroom/toilet of my house. Often, I have to take my meals in there as I can suffer in both the lounge and the dining room. I cannot go into the garden for more than 10 to 15 minutes, even while wearing a full protective suit made of anti-5G fabric.

If you have new streetlights in your road, you need to consider when they were turned on and what unexplained symptoms you or your family might have developed

Barrie Trower, former Royal Navy microwave weapons' expert, has stated that radiofrequency radiation (RFR) is the same as the radiation emitted by mobile phone masts and by the 5G-emitting streetlights that have been recently installed across practically every city, town, village and hamlet and many motorways and secondary roads in the UK. 5G involves the use of ever higher radio frequencies - up to 60, 100 and 1,000 GHz, compared to the 2.45 GHz that is used by WiFi routers.

Britain's 5G network is to include new equipment installed on road signs, bus shelters and traffic lights according to the Daily Mail Online on February 9 2022.

It was when reading the statements below, made by experts in microwave weapons about what can be done with them, that I recognised my own symptoms.

Says Barrie Trower, British military, retired, expert in microwave weapons: "If you are targeting demonstrators (with Radio Frequency radiation), you make them suicidally depressed. They don't care about demonstrating any more because they are too upset. With one pulse frequency you can make people so suicidal they cannot be bothered to act like a demonstrator anymore. All they want to do is sleep or lay in bed all day."

If you have new streetlights in your road, you need to consider when they were turned on and what unexplained symptoms you or your family might have developed as a consequence. If you do have symptoms, you must reduce the radiation that is under your control, i.e., turn off phones, smart meters, ditch smart watches, wireless personal alarms, cordless phones and wifi routers, and unplug all new electrical appliances when not using them. Get everything switched to ethernet cable to get on the internet. Any computer shop can help you do this. In fact, many are going further, getting rid of 'smart' phones.

These new weaponised streetlights have been fitted in the area where I live, and unsurprisingly I am suffering the very same symptoms described by Barrie Trower including sudden onset depression and the desire to commit suicide, upset stomach, itching skin, painful joints and muscles, extra systole heart beats, heart arrhythmia, tinnitus, profound lack of motivation, etc.

The 'Global Smart Street Lighting & Smart Cities' market forecast (2019-2028) indicates that 'streetlighting was previously viewed as a major cost - up to 40% of a city's energy budget - streetlights are now viewed as a "revenue opportunity".'

Nearly 200,000 scientists, doctors, engineers, citizens and organisations have signed an international appeal to stop 5G. A copy of the petition was handed to Downing Street on January 22 2020.

The best article to explain the dangers of EMF/RFR (Electromagnetic Fields/ RadioFrequency Radiation) to date is, 'Are You Swimming in an Invisible Sea of EMFs? Here's What to Do' by Dr Joseph Mercola. He says, "the telecommunication industry has manipulated federal regulatory agencies, public health authorities and professionals through powerful and sophisticated lobbying efforts leaving consumers confused and unaware of the health risks associated with EMFs."

A brief history of the technocracy

In 1919, the Technical Alliance of North America was formed in New York, with a reputable multidisciplinary membership from science, education, architecture, mathematics and medicine. The group drew on the principles of scientific management of FW Taylor (initiator of the production line at Ford Motor Company).

In 1932, its leader Howard Scott met, and soon after joined M King Hubbert at Columbia University, New York. Under the new name of Technocracy Incorporated, Scott and Hubbert presented a blueprint for a North American Technate, a highly regulated society with control of energy, based on constant monitoring of citizens. The main objectives were organisation of all industry into a few centrally-planned corporations, equal state income for all (now known as universal basic income), with bureaucracy and scientific experts replacing political government.

Bankrolled by the Rockefeller Foundation, Technocracy Inc. had a large membership in North America in the 1930s. Members distinguished themselves by their coats and suits of a particular shade of grey; they also bought cars in that colour, with orange hub caps. However, the heyday was brief, partly because the radical plan was a bridge too far for technology of the time, and also due to the overshadowing New Deal interventionism of Franklin D Roosevelt. Technocracy Inc. was riven with opposing factions, some supporting the government, but others frustrated by its slow progress and missed opportunities. As war broke out in Europe, leading members urged Roosevelt to declare himself as dictator.

Three decades later, David Rockefeller wanted the best brains on his pet project to solve global problems of the present and future, including relations between capitalist and communist countries and the impact of population growth in the developing world. Like Technocracy Inc., many of these minds were from Columbia University (also the seat of cultural Marxist Herbert Marcuse). On 23 and 24 July 1972, seventeen chosen experts in finance, international relations and political science met at the Rockefeller estate in Pocantico Hills, upstate New York, to create the Trilateral Commission. At a final planning meeting in Tokyo in January 1973, chairmen were appointed for the three regions of trilateralism: Western Europe, Japan and North America, with Zbigniew Brzezinski as director. Headquarters were sited in Manhattan.

In October 1973 the executive committee of the Trilateral Commission warned that while the threat of nuclear war had diminished, 'new problems have emerged to heighten the vulnerability of the planet', and that 'humanity is faced with serious risks to the global environment'. Following in the footsteps of Technocracy Inc, the Trilateral Commission espoused supranational control of resources and population. Energy would be the currency. Cash, private ownership, elections, free speech and protests would be abolished, enabling a coterie of experts to reign unhindered by individual rights or elections.

Artificial intelligence, a cashless society and digital passports for everyday activities are being introduced with little resistance, as people are duped into accepting encroachments on privacy and freedom for convenience and safety

In a 1974 article in Foreign Affairs, a publication of the Council on Foreign Relations, economist and Trilateral Commission member, Richard Gardner, described the 'hard road to world order'. The strategy would ensue not by sudden shock but by stealth; a frog would immediately jump out of hot water, but would not react to slowly boiling water until too late. A gradual globalist coup would thrive on episodes of disorder, exploiting a 'booming, buzzing confusion'.

An important objective was control of the media. Heads of national television networks and prestigious newspapers such as the Washington Post and New York Times were invited to join the Trilateral Commission, on condition that proceedings remain private. This ethically dubious practice has corrupted the mainstream media; journalists know on which side their bread is buttered. Approaching the 1976 presidential election, the Trilateral Commission exerted its considerable media influence in its determination to get the right man in the White House.

Public awareness of this shadowy but highly influential organisation was minimal but for the investigative work of Anthony Sutton and Patrick M. Wood, who produced the twin-volume Trilaterals over Washington (1979, 1981). However, the Trilateral Commission has successfully stayed out of the limelight. To most ordinary people, its role in American politics is an untold story; neither the organisation nor Brzezinski are mentioned in standard texts on modern US history, despite their seminal role.

In the UK, the Trilateral Commission worked behind the scenes on foreign policy, hastening the transition of Rhodesia to independent Zimbabwe under Robert Mugabe. Prime Minister Jim Callaghan was a member, as became his foreign secretary David Owen, and so too was his counterpart in Margaret Thatcher's government, Lord Carrington. Several Tory ministers have contributed to the Trilateral Commission's pursuit of an 'international rules-based order'. Of particular interest is Sir Keir Starmer, Rothschild lineage, the WEF is less shy of publicity, holding annual conferences at Davos in Switzerland attended by the media.

Like the Trilateral Commission, the WEF is tightly engaged with the United Nations, promoting Agenda 21/2030 and calling for urgent action against 'anthropogenic climate change'. The World Health Organisation, a previously unremarkable UN agency, suddenly became powerful in response to the covid-19 pandemic, directing national governments in imposing unprecedented 'lockdowns' and mass vaccination with digital passes. Draconian restrictions on livelihood and liberty were fully supported by opposition parties; indeed, Keir Starmer regularly urged stricter measures, despite disproportionately affecting the socio-economically disadvantaged constituency that Labour is supposed to represent.

Exploiting the emergency, the WEF has called for a 'great reset', as described by Schwab and Thierry Malleret in a book of that title. The abrupt 'new normal' envisaged by the globalists consolidates gains for the 'fourth industrial revolution', a concept promoted for many years by Schwab with striking similarities to the tentative plans of Technocracy Inc. almost a hundred years ago. Indeed, technocracy - the replacement of elected government by social engineering - is being realised by stealth. Artificial intelligence, a cashless society and digital passports for everyday activities are being introduced with little resistance, as people are duped of its social credit system.

In the West, the UN network of Smart Cities is redesigning urban life, restricting our freedom to gather socially, to speak freely or to protest, while obliterating privacy. Development of a central digital currency, proposed 'online safety' laws and the permanence of some covid-19 regulations demonstrate further progress.

At best, the technocrats are the town planners of the mid-twentieth century, on a grander scale. Concrete housing estates were meant to shape a new society, in defiance of individualist traditions ('an Englishman's home is his castle' and 'good fences make good neighbours'), but these schemes failed miserably.

There is nothing inherently wrong with collectivisation, but the social engineering of technocrats eschews the time-honoured identities of faith, flag and family. At worst, they are forging an almighty superstate that brings to life Brave New World, how Aldous Huxley imagined technocracy. In the 1940s, with the internet a distant dream, Orwell's Nineteen Eighty-Four presciently described a society controlled by video surveillance, while The Abolition of Man by CS Lewis warned:

"What we call Man's power over Nature turns out to be a power exercised by some men over other men with Nature as their instrument."

Whatever the origins of the outbreak (some suspect it was planned), covid-19 has certainly been exploited by globalists. Back in 2017, Klaus Schwab boasted of how the World Economic Forum was infiltrating governments around the world with its leadership programme. He specifically mentioned Canadian prime minister Justin Trudeau, adding that 'we penetrate the cabinet'; indeed, 'more than half of his cabinet are actually Young Global Leaders'.

Indeed, Trudeau imposed one of the strictest covid-19 regimes in the world, and when a truckers' protest against vaccine mandates camped outside the parliament in Ottawa, he invoked a state of emergency. His deputy, Chrystia Freeland (whose grandfather was a prominent Nazi), declared the freezing of protestors' bank accounts without trial. After riot police and army were deployed to brutally quash the peaceful protest, member of parliament Colin Carrie asked whether the WEF had too much influence on Canada, the speaker of the House of Commons said that he couldn't hear the question, before a minister stood up and accused the questioner of peddling conspiracy theory. Both of these appointees are members of the World Economic Forum, for whom there is apparently a conspiracy of silence.

The Trilateral Commission has had considerable influence on the United Nations by pushing the doctrine of sustainable development, which really means control of food, fuel and other resources. However, while members continue to occupy positions in the Washington 'deep state', the Trilateral Commission has been overshadowed by the World Economic Forum (WEF). Led by Klaus Schwab, a German financier of into accepting encroachments on privacy and freedom for convenience and safety.

A command-and-control system, technocracy is easily confused with either communism or mega-capitalism. But it has no interest in political ideology or a free market. China, under its notionally communist regime, is at an advanced stage of technocracy. Klaus Schwab speaks positively of China despite the obvious human rights abuses

The arrogance of modern day medicine

Can medics who promote the narrative really be unaware?

WHILE the cheerleading majorettes trumpeted the development and arrival of covid-19 vaccines in late 2020, a significant proportion of all populations in the firing-line, from all walks of life, instinctively exercised caution.

As the zeal for injecting people on an industrial scale with an experimental product against a virus which was manifestly in decline, escalated to fanfare pitch, that caution turned to suspicion, and they started searching for scientific data that emanated from independent sources outside of government and pharmaceutical-funded institutions.

Early on, groups of independent specialists, like Doctors for Covid Ethics, formed to give the public an alternative perspective. They sought to explain the basic nature of diseases, how our natural immune system responds to them in a myriad of health sustaining ways, and what they had unearthed to date about these novel spike protein-inducing mRNA injections and their potential effects on the human body.

This they did through video presentations, open letters sent to regulatory agencies in which they raised their concerns, and expert witness testimony analysis prepared for court cases challenging early mandates in Europe. In July of 2021, they brought together an international multi-disciplinary panel of professionals to present their first symposium, run over two days.

by SERENA WYLDE

Two further symposiums have since been held by them. In the USA and Canada, many organisations of highly credentialed scientists from across the spectrum of specialities did likewise - America's Frontline Doctors and the Canadian Covid Care Alliance to name a few - giving generously of their time and energy to explain, inform and educate as the data emerged.

By late Summer 2021 there was a veritable flood of data coming forth, not only on the nature of the mRNA injections themselves, but of multiple harms of injury, life-changing disability and death following inoculation. And so I keep asking why, if so many lay people have applied themselves to absorb, understand and analyse medical and scientific data which raise alarm bells from Notre Dame to York Minster, are a seeming majority of medical practitioners so intent on burying their heads in the sand?

There are of course some notable and heroic exceptions to this paradigm in the form of principled and dedicated GPs and hospital physicians ready to lose their livelihoods rather than be coerced into having an unwanted and unwarranted medical intervention, and they continue to be straight-jacketed in an increasingly weaponised NHS.

It's worth reminding ourselves that the medical-industrial-complex had its genesis in the U.S. in the early 20th century as a result of the invention of hospitals, set up the General Education Board in 1903, hijacked the curriculum of medical training to teach students that modern medicine amounted to allopathy (the reversing of symptoms), which involved exclusively using patented drugs whilst demonising petrochemicals, which enabled John D. Rockefeller to create a monopoly of the oil, chemical and medical industries.

At the time, homeopathic medicine was widely practised in America, using ancient knowledge developed over centuries by Native Americans, of readily available herbs and plants as natural remedies for ailments, and holistic medicine was taught in colleges. Rockefeller 'gave' over $100 million dollars to colleges and and outlawing natural medicine, establishing the pill for an ill culture. The teaching of pharmacology overtook that of physiology.

More recently, Children's Health Defense conducted interviews of doctors across America asking what they had been taught at medical school about the various childhood vaccines and how they interacted with growing immune systems, and 100 per cent of those interviewed responded that they had been taught zero about the vaccines themselves; all that had been drummed into them were the schedules of when they should be administered.

In 2002, Dr. David Sackett, considered to be the father of evidence-based medicine, wrote in a paper entitled The Arrogance of Preventive Medicine:

"Preventive medicine displays all three elements of arrogance. First it is aggressively assertive, pursuing symptomless individuals and telling them what they must do to remain healthy. Occasionally, invoking the force of law (immunisations, seatbelts), it prescribes and proscribes both individual and the general citizenry of every age and stage. Second, preventive medicine is presumptuous, confident that the interventions it espouses will on average do more good than harm to those who accept and adhere to them. Finally, preventive medicine is overbearing, attacking those who question the value of its recommendations."

On August 13 2020, John Keiger wrote an article in The Spectator entitled 'Why are so many dictators former doctors?' He references an in-depth piece of research published in The Lancet in 2017 and suggests: 'It should be made compulsory reading for members of the "doctocracy" who, with their new-found covid powers, are dictating policy across the world with little consideration for the wider implications of their edicts.'

Suppression of truth keeps the cows on the farm

TOGETHER we are strong enough to highlight and destroy the evil structures that cause suffering.

I had a conventional upbringing in a middle class setting on the outskirts of London. My education was the state standard and included religious indoctrination. I studied George Orwell's 1984 at school but its importance didn't sink in, despite my English teacher's efforts.

Fast forward 40 years to today and I see the message George Orwell tried to convey. Truth is precious but elusive; it is very well hidden away by those who have the power and desire to profit from ordinary people. Truth is essential; it is the key to freedom. Without the truth we cannot truly succeed.

Watching some cows in a field for a while, I noticed how they calmly got on with their day's grazing within the herd, quite oblivious to the border fence of their enclosure. Their minds told them they were living free, contented lives. They had no idea of the farm on which they were being processed, nor what their inescapable future would be. The truth of their situation, to them, did not exist.

I thought of the farmer and how he ensured the cows were fed, watered and had somewhere nice to live. How he ensured they were safe and unworried, not chased by dogs or bothered by people. How he provided healthcare and veterinary treatment when necessary. How all these things were done with one aim - to maximise productivity and profit.

I imagined myself as a human 'cow' and noticed similarities. Farms were countries and farmers were leaders. Farm workers were governments and corporations. Populations were livestock being farmed for profit. Fed, watered, housed, provided with healthcare but also bought and sold, slaughtered for meat, milked until the last drop and then disposed of easily. Each individual believing their own welfare was the aim and that they were free to live their lives. That their leaders loved them and wanted the best for them.

The truth must be kept hidden. If the truth becomes known, the farm cannot function. It would be destroyed. The cows would panic, trample over the farmer and farm workers in their desperate efforts to escape. The farm buildings and offices would collapse as the stampede crashed through.

This would only happen however, if the truth became known to all or most of the cows. If only one cow discovered the truth, that cow would be removed and destroyed by the farmer in case it upset the rest of the herd and reduced productivity. Just as humans who try to tell the truth are silenced, ridiculed or imprisoned.

I thought then how important it is to stand united in the name of the truth. I have discovered that the truth exists and although hidden, it is there and can be found by those who look for it. I've learned a lesson. I can trust myself to be truthful and with that, I unite with others in the name of the truth.

If we stand together, the farmers cannot profit from our suffering. They will not be able to deceive and their lies will be easily seen. I trust myself and unite with those who trust the truth.

It's time to build economic resilience

Seeing beyond the covid coup

FOR some, the covid coup came as a complete surprise. The failure of the intellectual class to provide any kind of meaningful resistance to the outrageous measures imposed by the ruling oligarchy has revealed a shocking truth to many.

As has the almost total subordination of 'our' institutions (NHS, police, parliament, judiciary, media etc.) to the diktats of unelected, unaccountable international bodies - aided and abetted by a seemingly lobotomised population of unthinking, unfeeling, masked-up zombies.

For others, who had already been following the schemes of the bankers network that planned and executed the coup across virtually the entire world, the agenda imposed was depressingly predictable.

The suspension of civil liberties, further growth of the state's power, the attempt to rush through digital ID cards, and increased national subservience to international banker organisations were all expected - the fact that they seized upon a disease (rather than their usual favourites, terrorism and war) to achieve their aims is almost besides the point.

We know what this group's ultimate aim is - they themselves have publicised it openly via favoured mouthpieces like the World Economic Forum's Klaus Schwab and Bill Gates. They desire a society ruled by an 'enlightened' elite (themselves naturally!) in which traditional property rights and freedoms are no longer honoured - for the masses at least. Everyone and everything will be monitored and controlled via a worldwide technotronic surveillance grid, backed up first by the brute force of traitorous 'national' police forces, mercenary militaries and corrupt intelligence agencies, and eventually by drones and robot dogs.

Beyond the devastating health impacts and the unknown long-term political impacts of the covid coup, the economic damage is already clear. Countless small businesses went under as a result of ruinous measures dictated by the puppets in government whilst the same billionaires who supported the draconian economic shutdown saw their own wealth and economic muscle massively increase as a result.

Inflation is rising rapidly, alongside spiking energy costs and higher interest rates, all of which leaves those outside of state or corporate establishment jobs in an ever weaker and more dependent position, less able to devote time and money to fighting for their rights or to looking after their own interests.

At the same time, in the UK as in most other major Western nations, the covid coup has been used as an excuse to rush through a brace of highly draconian legislation and statutes. These unprecedented measures provide the regime with all the powers it needs to brutally suppress dissent or render it impotent through blackmail and sabotage, should the population ever get wind of the wilful damage it has done to their livelihoods, health and rights, all based on a long-term agenda that they were never consulted on in the first place.

The Policing and Crime Bill, for instance, virtually removes the right to peaceful protest with the threat of lengthy terms of incarceration for such vague offences as causing 'nuisance'. At the same time, a recent court ruling confirmed that all of the fundamental protections of the citizen against the state can be wilfully ignored by the state's own intelligence agents so long as they themselves deem it to be 'proportional' (CHIS Act 2021).

The creation of an independent economic backbone for our movement will involve sharing the knowledge and expertise that exists within it... as well as mentoring the many young people who have been denied a stable, long-term career

All of these developments, combined with the sweeping powers the ruling class granted itself under the Coronavirus Act, effectively moves the UK into a lawless state as far as the regime is concerned - allowing it to act as it will towards its citizens provided it mumbles the words 'national security' or 'public health' at the appropriate intervals.

As the covid coup continues on at pace in most Western countries, we are likely to see it used as the excuse to take away remaining freedoms - both formal and unwritten - whilst undertaking even more economic plundering of the middle and working classes on behalf of the ruling oligarchy. But even if the ruling class chooses to abandon covid as their main vector of attack, the damage has already been done and we must prepare ourselves to confront the new reality whose foundations have already been laid down for us all.

In the long run, the movement that has arisen across the world in opposition to tyrannical covid measures must adapt itself to best fight the worldwide network that lay behind these measures in the first place.

We must create robust sources of independent income for those who refuse to sell out to banker front-organisations in return for an inflated paycheck stolen from their fellow citizens.

This must be done as a matter of urgency, as our national governments will continue to pass more and more regulations that limit the freedom of action of private citizens and the profits of small businesses, whilst they hand more of our wealth and national resources to large international conglomerates, behind which lurks the all-devouring spectre of global finance.

The creation of an independent economic backbone for our movement will involve sharing the knowledge and expertise that exists within it (whether in the fields of small business management, trades, IT development, craftsmanship or similar), as well as mentoring the many young people who have been denied a stable, long-term career on account of their opposition to the inhuman ideology of the ruling class and its society-wrecking policies.

At the same time, we must continue to study and understand the system that is acting against us so that we can fight it as effectively as possible: using a portion of the money that our businesses generate to support effective activism and outreach initiatives, with the ultimate goal of removing corruption entirely.

Ultimately the covid coup has proved beyond doubt that, from the point of view of anyone not in the self-proclaimed 'elite' class, there are only two 'sides' to the conflict that is now developing - the worldwide banker oligarchy that thinks it has the right to rule over, steal from and manipulate mankind for the rest of its earthly existence, and every one else who desires freedom and independence.

It is this knowledge that our movement needs to focus on disseminating above all else.

Consent of the governed

by CLAIRE MCGRATH

MY name is Claire and I am running as an independent candidate for Member of Parliament (MP) Poole Dorset at the next general election. I am not a politician; I am a single mum of two grown up children.

I am building a grassroots local political movement to put power back in the hands of the people of Poole. The only way we can change parliament is by changing the people we send there. I have chosen to run as an independent as it's time to put aside polarising political parties so we can liberate and focus on our uniquely different local communities. I am replacing a traditional manifesto (a public declaration of policy and aims) with an 'Agreement of the People of Poole' created by me with the local electorate.

I made the decision to stand on the 25th February 2022 as I realised that community outreach, public protests on important issues, and even a prominent social media presence were not enough. Traditional political parties just aren't serving the public - they are serving themselves and their short-term goals of money, power and prestige. I could not and cannot stop thinking that sovereignty resides with 'We the People' and not parliament or the monarchy. I have self-funded the campaign, grappled with the Electoral Commission's confusing regulations, and been interviewed by new media outlets, with more interviews in the pipeline. I have no media or rhetoric training or a university degree, but I have common sense and a strong purpose in life. I know right from wrong; a truth from a lie; integrity from corruption.

Why did I make this decision? Very simply, I want to stand as a candidate to ensure the people of Poole take back their control. In doing so, I strive to help everyone - not just those who would vote left or right; not just those who are for or against vaccines or vaccine passports. MPs are publicly paid servants of the people, and they govern by consent. They have blatantly disregarded the Seven Principles of Public Life (www.gov.uk/government/publications/the-7-principles-of-public-life).

MPs consistently put their own personal interests before ours, they consistently fail to uphold the law of the land or respect common law liberties and rights. The proposed 'reform' of the so-called Human Rights Act 1998 is just one of many shams that will not serve the people of Poole or our once great nation.

I want to help you, the electorate, the people. But I cannot do this alone. I need local support to raise awareness of the failures of our incumbent MP and Bournemouth, Christchurch and Poole Council (BCP). Nationally, if you're not in Poole but agree with my aims, you can help too by raising awareness of my campaign to empower the people.

During a local Community Assemblies Wessex - a forum for groups/assemblies in Wessex - I explained that BCP is a limited company and a unitary local authority. In 2019/20 the CEO earned £209,616.22 and the remaining seven directors collectively earned £1,162,724. This is in stark contrast to the average BCP resident's full-time worker's median salary of £28,755 in 2021. This is neither fair nor equitable and, sadly, one of many wrongs. It is time for the people of Poole - and indeed the nation - to say: "No! We do not consent to this abuse of power and arbitrary rules that do not serve us."

The time is now to vote in a true and honest resident of Poole rather than just a career politician. I endeavour to do everything within my capability to champion and campaign for truth, honesty, integrity, sovereignty, freedom and real democracy. I will continue to inform the local electorate on important local and national issues and do everything in my power to make sure the voice of the people is heard, as it should be in a system like ours.

My campaign is 100 per cent people powered! No large corporations are funding me to help me put the power back into our local communities - why would they?

I invite people of goodwill to align with me and reverse the current descent into authoritarian control that is happening around us. I propose a concrete alternative with a political purpose inspired by the common sense of ordinary citizens and residents of Poole and the United Kingdom. Let's stand together, united, and move away from old political parties with self-serving agendas and liberate our communities NOW!

From protestor to candidate - 'I had to be proactive'

POLITICS is a dirty word within the truth movement, as people have understandably lost faith in such a corrupt system, and I for one didn't realise quite how deep and far that corruption was entrenched.

Two years ago, the world was plunged into a lockdown in order to flatten the curve for a supposedly deadly virus which everyone should fear without fail. If we didn't do as we were told and obey their ridiculous measures then surely it would wipe out humanity.

Within a week I had come to the conclusion that none of it made any sense whatsoever. I realised that the politicians and media were blatantly lying to the people about what was going on, but unfortunately the vast majority of the public bought the 24/7 propaganda without question.

I felt I had to be proactive - to reach out to the people in my area and spread the actual truth, so found myself delivering 50 copies of The Light paper each month to local shops and takeaways. Two years on and I now receive 30,000 copies a month into the Leeds Hub which are distributed across Yorkshire and the North-East. By doing this, and travelling to London many times with millions of others, I have made connections across the north of England, and together we have facilitated the Worldwide Freedom Marches in Leeds, as well as The North Unites rallies in York and Manchester.

Jonathan Tilt, leader of The

by NICK COTTLE

Freedom Alliance party, enquired about speaking at our event in York, but the consensus of opinion was that politics should be kept away from the rallies, so unfortunately we couldn't provide him a platform. With that being said, the Freedom Alliance party was developed out of the protest movement in 2020 by a small group of activists who recognised the need to use the political system to provide a real opposition to the state's covid narrative.

Over the past two years, I have been in constant communication with my local councillor, attempting to enlighten him to the real agenda at play, but his blatant refusal to accept the evidence provided to him, along with his continual push of the covid jabs made me think, 'why don't I stand myself?'

So on May 5 this year, I will be standing in the Hunslet & Riverside ward in Leeds. This will provide me a great platform to really get amongst the local population who are still sleepwalking into dystopia, and have conversations about what is really going on in our world and explain how 'We The People' can change things for the better.

I'd like to call upon everyone reading this who has a local Freedom Alliance candidate to make sure their vote counts. It's time to make a stand on the political landscape and usher in some real change.

I would like to thank my good friend Suzanne who has been instrumental in the ongoing West Yorkshire police investigation into the covid jab crimes; for her support and encouragement in getting me here, and I wish her all the success in Killingbeck & Seacroft where she is standing too.

The Freedom Alliance party wants to see a society in which individuals, families and communities are freed from state and world corporate control. Excessive debt has been used to trap people, businesses and now nations in a system that works only for the world banks and large corporations who seek total control.

Revolution is not a resolution

Avoid the traps being laid by the agents of the New World Order

WE should resist those tempting us with instant solutions to our seemingly never-ending nightmare by having organisational structure removed with a single event. They are not promoting a sound solution - they promote destruction, yet offer more globalist control through an undermining of the supporting societal infrastructure.

This chaotic offering is an opportunity for government-sponsored brutality. It often ends with the political void being filled by the installing of a pre-prepared false prophet who claims to be able to resolve the ensuing chaos. This is not a rational solution.

Freemason Albert Pike, who outlined the plan for creating a New World Order, wrote: "Whenever people need a hero, we shall supply him."

There are many historical examples of political uprisings which were sold as a potential way forward, but were carefully laid NWO traps. A cleverly laid trap easily seduces those seeking change into believing that a temporary destruction is a small price to pay for a longer-term promised 'utopia'.

It is the general population who often pay a severe price during these 'temporary' destructions, whilst those supporting the agenda enjoy financial or egotistical reward. History has shown that when an awakening is wanted, but only then happens with a sudden shock, it often precedes the rise of a more brutal regime. This great snare must be avoided.

A solution that ensures longer-term stability is to take back control of the existing flawed administration and change it from within. Doing this quickly and justly would be essential whilst ensuring involvement of the wider population within those migrations. This so they may be quickly adapted to ensure maximum benefit is available as soon as possible.

The early involvement of the general population is essential to encourage relevance with these renewed public services. The administration could then be managed closer to the location of those people who finance the services. This may also avoid another potential NWO trap - the retention of their status quo through indifference or by cynical procedural blockading.

A change of the current monolithic taxation system which guarantees central financial control, into a more localised form where the wishes of the local people can more easily resonate surrender and submit to the existing parasitic and faceless bureaucratic monster which currently drains our spirits and pockets.

A detailed manifesto of proposed changes which need to be made to the existing political infrastructure, should be prepared and fully explained. This to avoid misery for the public that the revolutionaries and their noisy sidekicks promote. This to allow for with those newly formed operations.

Encouraging public interaction could result in people being more inclined to become fully active participants. Additionally, such a localised system would mean that elected representatives would be fully accountable for their actions and decisions; also, locally elected representatives would not have to that yearned-for inclusiveness that involves as many of the participating public as possible. Essential to this better future is the complete ending of the financial power base now being held by a shadowy gang that profits by concealing its plundering. It also avoids the NWO installation of a complicit false prophet to continue their fiscal throttling of We The People.

Ukraine crisis accelerating rise of Central Bank Digital Currencies

A JOINT project between the Central Bank of Canada and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will be researching the possibility of an entirely digital Canadian dollar, it has been announced.

The digital dollar would be a state-issued cryptocurrency, or Central Bank Digital Currency (CBDC).

It's not just Canada - countries from all around the world appear to be accelerating the research and implementation of CBDCs as we enter the second quarter of 2022.

In our New Year's post, Off-Guardian anticipated that the introduction of Central Bank Digital Currencies would be a major news thread of 2022, and that prediction looks to be coming true already.

CBDC pilot schemes were already being conducted in the Bahamas, Nigeria and Jamaica before the end of 2021, with the latter planning a full rollout later this year.

Dozens of others are not far

by KIT KNIGHTLY

behind, including the U.S., UK and the entire Eurozone. Sweden's 'e-Krona' is currently in the testing phase. Joe Biden has called research into CBDCs a matter of 'highest urgency'.

Ukraine is right at the forefront of CBDC research and has been preparing for such since 2016. There were plans to implement one later this year, though it's possible the war has changed them.

The Russian central bank was developing a "digital ruble" before the invasion of Ukraine, and it is now being suggested as a way to circumvent Western sanctions.

China was already leading the race to total digitalisation of their currency, and have used the 'vulnerability to Western sanctions' as an excuse to push ahead even harder.

India, South Africa, Malaysia... the list goes on and on.

In short, pretty much the whole world has been at least considering the move to entirely digital money.

Why should this concern you?

Well, because a digital currency would mean every single transaction you make can be monitored and recorded by the state, as well as your bank. The implications for the right to privacy are obvious, but privacy is the least of it.

Much of the research being done on CBDCs concerns making them programmable - meaning either the state issuing the money, or the company paying it as wages, could put controls on when, how or where it is spent.

To quote a Telegraph article from last autumn:

"Digital cash could be programmed to ensure it is only spent on essentials or goods which an employer or government deems to be sensible."

As I wrote in October last year:

"Governments and employers making sure the money they issue can only be used on 'sensible' things, and not be used in 'socially harmful' ways? It doesn't take much imagination to see just how this system could evolve and re-shape society into a truly dystopian nightmare. It wasn't hard to imagine then, now we don't need to imagine. They have shown us exactly how they would use that power."

Just a month ago, the Government of Canada was tracking down Freedom Convoy protesters - and even those who just donated money to the protests - and ordered banks to freeze their accounts. Consider how much easier an entirely digital currency would make that process.

Not only would it be easier to seize people's assets, but you could stop people donating to the 'wrong' causes in the first place by changing the 'programming' of your digital money.

Reader-funded alternate news sites - very much including Off-Guardian - could find themselves branded 'harmful misinformation', and placed on the 'funding blacklist'.

People who refused the vaccines, or don't publicly denounce Russia (or any passing enemy of the moment), could have sanctions placed on their bank accounts.

Western governments are currently declaring financial war on dozens of private citizens who have not been charged - let alone convicted - of any crime, just because of their nationality. It's being done under the guise of "punishing dirty Russians" - but what can be done to an oligarch can be done to anyone.

Essentially, anyone who doesn't support the current thing would be living under the threat of financial ruin.

The possibilities are as endless as they are terrible. Central Bank Digital Currencies are a death knell for the very idea of individual freedom.

It's almost impossible to overstate the importance of this.

As I said in my recent interview on Perspective with Jesse Zurawell, if you're only concerned about one thing this year, it should be this.

‘We will all die of a total lie’: Bishops condemn artificial pandemic and Vatican stance

THE early months of 2020 were marked by an outbreak of an infection which caused less deaths than ordinary seasonal flu.

An artificial pandemic not only affected healthcare, but also paralysed the economy, education, private life, and undermined morale. The Vatican has taken an active part in this artificial pandemic. Through his unGodly activities, Pope Bergoglio has consciously brought a curse on the Church and humanity. This Pope has cynically boycotted the urgent warnings from experts against the mRNA vaccination, and forced the whole Vatican to get vaccinated - all except three guards have succumbed.

The Byzantine Catholic Patriarchate (BCP), on the other hand, has supported the true stance of scientists with integrity, who have stood in defence of truth against the system of lies.

They include top U.S. scientists such as Dr. Judy Mikovits and Dr. David Martin, Czech microbiologist Soňa Peková, and Prof. Alexander Redko from Russia. Let us briefly mention the scientific conference in St. Petersburg held on October 20-21, 2021 and the summit of physicians in Rome on September 12-14, 2021 where over 12,700 doctors and scientists signed the Rome Declaration. They referred to the forced experimental vaccination as a crime against humanity as defined by the Nuremberg Code.

Dr. David Martin: “This is not a vaccine. This is an mRNA packaged in a fat envelope that is delivered to a cell. It is a medical device designed to stimulate the human cell into becoming a pathogen creator. It is not a vaccine... Vaccines actually are a legally defined term. They are a legally defined term under public health law and under CDC and FDA standards.

“You are getting injected with a chemical substance to induce illness, not to induce an immuno-transmissible response. In other words: nothing about this is going to stop you from transmitting anything. This is about getting you sick and having your own cells be the thing that gets you sick.”

Dr. Judy Mikovits: “It is a synthetic pathogen. They have literally injected the very pathogenic part of the virus into the body... it can directly cause multiple sclerosis, Lou Gehrig’s disease, Alzheimer’s disease - because that’s what the expression of that pathogenic envelope is; it can cause accelerated cancer... That’s what the expression of that piece of virus has been known to do for decades. You are injecting the disease - literally.”

Immunology expert, Professor Alexander Redko from St. Petersburg, said: “I spend time in the hospitals where they treat covid patients. I am well informed; I follow the development and I know what is going on there... and it is mostly those that had been vaccinated that get sick. They develop all the obvious coronavirus symptoms. According to the data from pathoanatomists, more than 62% of those who are hospitalised at the inpatient departments for covid patients are fully vaccinated.”

QR codes designate those who are good and those who are bad. The healthy ones are the bad ones, the sick and vaccinated ones are the good ones. That is what QR codes indicate; nothing more.

There is no pandemic. To qualify for a pandemic, epidemics must be present in all countries. But there are no epidemics here. To qualify, it is necessary for 5% of the population to be sick at the same time.

The PCR test is made for viruses with a long chain, and this is a virus with a short chain. It means that it is from a completely different area. It is not possible to use it to identify the coronavirus.

We will all die of a total lie. Because no matter where you go, you will find a lie.

To give antivirals, ones that aren’t specifically against SARS-CoV-2 - is a crime. And that can be found in the protocols of the Department of Health! What should be done with the Department of Health? You need to answer that yourselves.

Now you make isolated weirdos of us all. You will lock us down and transfer the children to remote learning to destroy our immune health.

This is not a pandemic, but an infodemic, and all that is going on is politics and a socio-economic experiment on the population.

Sputnik V - that is not Sputnik ‘Vee’, but ‘Five’, because it is only the fifth vaccine which they have worked on in the entire history of their company. And they have not managed to do one successfully.

I think that it is necessary to get vaccinated if a) there is a vaccine, b) if the virus does not mutate, or in other words, if the vaccine can help fight against what is present in the environment.

The virus that used to be here a while ago is no longer here. The thing they want to develop a vaccine against - and which usually takes six years to make - that virus is no longer here. There are some delta variants, they can call them whatever they want, but that is something already completely different. And you are saying that you are getting vaccinated against something that was here two years ago? They say that the vaccine does not help any more, because we have a new mutation here. So why do you keep vaccinating? If you really care that much, make a vaccine against the current mutation - but you can’t!

That is why what they are offering us is not a vaccine. It is adenovirus 26, adenovirus 5, on which they put spike protein - and why? That is not clear. Because SARS-CoV-2 has never been isolated. A reward of 1.5 million Euros was offered for someone to isolate it. And if no one had ever isolated it, what are you actually vaccinating against? Why are you deceiving people? This is a commercial project.

And I insist that it is not possible to even discuss it, since a) the virus has not been isolated, b) there is no vaccine against it, c) clinical trials will be completed on December 31, 2022. The trials have not been completed, the results of the first phase when all the rats died have not been published. The results of the third phase likewise are not published as the trials have not been completed. Antibodies titer has not been determined, anti-epidemic impact has not been identified, the immune response has not been specified - what kind of results are these? The project must be shut down instead of continuing the mass ‘vaccination’.

But people don’t know it. They say: “I was vaccinated. I am fine.” 25% of people are injected with a placebo, that is what makes them feel good and that is why they get sick again. But those who got really vaccinated get more seriously sick. And they get a full-blown coronavirus with all the post-covid symptoms - lung damage, central nervous system damage, Guillain-Barré syndrome and all other issues.

Everything that accompanies covid, the same is present with the vaccine reactions. And I have many acquaintances and acquaintances of my acquaintances, who a) got sick and b) are no longer alive - after the shot.

Sweden justified in implementing only minimal lockdown rules

SWEDEN’S well publicised covid policy of no lockdowns during the past two years has been deemed ‘fundamentally correct’ according to a government-approved safety commission.

was fundamentally correct. It meant that citizens retained more of their personal freedom than in many other countries.”

Despite praising the overall covid response, the panel reported, “In February-March 2020, Sweden should have opted for more rigorous and intrusive disease prevention and control measures.”

Sweden unfairly received criticism from many Western nations for its stance on covid. The Scandinavian country opted against implementing harsh lockdowns and closing schools. Instead, the Swedish Government and health officials recommended to its citizens a voluntary approach in managing covid, with a strong emphasis on personal responsibility.

A panel of eight experts including professors of economics and political science examined Sweden’s unique covid response. The commission stated in its final report: “In comparison with the rest of Europe, Sweden has come through the pandemic relatively well and is among the countries with the lowest excess mortality over the period 2020-2021.” The report added, “Focusing on advice and recommendations which people were expected to follow voluntarily

Health Minister Lena Hallengren responded to the report’s findings by saying: “The non-lockdown policy has been much debated. I’ve had to answer a lot of questions during the pandemic about the “Swedish strategy”. The fact that the commission concluded that the overall strategy, based on non-invasive recommendations... was the right choice. I think that’s good.”

The report highlighted the worldwide issue of handing too many powers and responsibilities to government-approved health agencies. “In a crisis, there must be no uncertainty about who is in charge,” the commission reported.

South African doctor told to stop labelling the omicron variant as mild

ONE of the first doctors in the world to assess and treat the omicron variant was told to stop playing down the mild features of the variant. Dr Angelique Coetzee, a South African GP was one of the first doctors to discover the new variant in November 2021.

by PAUL BENNETT

In an interview with the Australian Daily Telegraph, Dr Coetzee reported, “Because of all of covid’s mutations, all of these scientists and politicians who aren’t from South Africa were contacting me telling me I was wrong when I spoke out, that it was a serious disease... they were telling me I had no idea what I was talking about, they kept attacking me. In South Africa, it is a lighter disease, but in Europe it has been a serious, serious illness, which is what the politicians want me to say. There has been a lot of pressure from European scientists and politicians who have said ‘Please don’t say it is a mild illness’.”

Dr Coetzee told German newspaper Die Welt, “I was told not to publicly state that it was a mild illness. I have been asked to refrain from making such statements and to say that it is a serious illness. I declined.”

She added, “In the Netherlands, in the UK, scientists asked: “How can you explain that it’s a mild disease? It’s a serious illness. Look at the mutations.” My reports have thrown them off track. In a pandemic, you also have to look at what is happening at the grassroots level. The general practitioners who treat the sick every day must be asked what they experience, how the clinical picture presents itself.”

Many countries will never admit their part in whipping up mass hysteria, especially regarding the mild omicron variant. One hopes that more doctors like Dr Coetzee will bravely speak out on what they see or don’t see in their work health settings.

Russian scientists facing witch hunt

by WILL BURNS

Scientific interactions between nations are needed for peace and harmony

WHEN the West goes full throttle into condemning and sanctioning Russia's invasion of Ukraine, do they really consider the consequences? It is generally understood that gas and oil prices will go up like a rocket (scare mongering intended). But something the sanctimonious may not consider is how the 'war' will impact on science.

Now, you may develop a bad taste in your mouth when I use the term 'science', due to the past two years of 'follow the science' rhetoric from the British Government - which was tantamount to 'follow the complete lack of science', because post-truth science is more about feelings and politics, right?

But hear me out. There has been a long history of Russian scientist collaboration with the West. The Royal Society, the world's oldest independent scientific academy, date their alliances with Russian scholars back more than 350 years. An article looking into their history states that after the outbreak of WW2, the USSR proclaimed the importance of strengthening scientific collaboration with Western countries including Great Britain. There was even collaboration during most of the Cold War.

Vladimir Putin (AKA the Devil, if you have grown up in the West) was even a peddler for international science collaboration. Isak Froumin, Professor of Higher Education at the Higher School of Economics in Moscow, said that until 2018 (didn't something happen in 2019?), the Russian regime was pushing universities hard to play more of a role in global science. Froumin went on to say, "International collaboration in science was considered absolutely necessary and prestigious."

Yet here we are, in 2022, ready to denounce all collaboration with

Artwork: bobmoran.co.uk

Russia and science. Germany have already done it. The German Ministry of Education and Research ran a statement saying 'existing, long-standing cooperation in science and research as well as in vocational education and training is being halted immediately'. They even admitted that this would be to the detriment of tackling things like climate change.

Now most of the EU has followed suit, like a bunch of lemmings jumping off a cliff. The European Commission has suspended payments to Russian institutions involved in EU-funded research and innovation projects. EU commissioner, Mariya Gabriel said, "I have asked my services to suspend any payment to Russian entities under existing contracts."

But don't worry, we're not quite ready in the UK to cut off our nose to spite our face. Universities UK, which represents the nation's vice chancellors, advised its members to review collaborations with Russia on a case-by-case basis. The British Medical Journal follows a similar vein: "Science and health have the potential to bring people together in common purpose to improve understanding, cooperation, and relationships. By boycotting Russian research, for example, we risk further marginalising Russian scientists already speaking for peace."

However, Simon Marginson of Oxford University has said that most academics would support a research boycott from Russia. All because of a geopolitical proxy war.

Oxford University now have a blue and yellow banner across their war response webpage. Their official stance states that they are "appalled by Russia's actions" because their "unprovoked" invasion would lead to a humanitarian catastrophe. Excuse my cynicism, but I don't recall seeing the Iraq, Afghanistan, etc. flag on their website with the same sanctimony after we invaded them.

Is virtue signalling now the only way people can appease their conscience after looking at hours of fear porn? Covid doesn't do it for you any more? You've had to move onto the hardcore stuff - total annihilation.

Chucking the Russians out is all so childish, stubborn and self-defeating. Like throwing Russian football teams out of competitions as punishment for their country's behaviour. Half the teams and coaches probably aren't even Russian and most of them probably couldn't spell 'invasion'.

Do people really think that we don't need their botanists, mathematicians, astrophysicists or nuclear physicists (maybe not that one), to help us with things like energy, food security, disease? No, we're fine, sling your hook.

The bottom line is, why should politics get in the way of excellence in science? Interactions between various national academics and scientists are an important indicator of international harmony. It's a chance to bring different scientific cultures and political systems together to benefit our very existence.

Just think about the hypocrisy of people taking in Ukrainian refugees across Britain like they're long lost cousins. Never mind the fact they wouldn't even see their own family for the past two years, and what about the thousands of homeless already here?

Oh well, next time you see a Russian biophysicist begging on the streets, please give generously.

U.S. media in U-turn over Hunter Biden laptop

by DARREN SMITH

AFTER calling it 'Russian disinformation' before the 2020 presidential election and helping to effectively cover it up, the corporate media machine is now admitting the laptop which revealed criminal behaviour by the President's son is genuine.

Twitter blocked the New York Post's revelations in October 2020, contained within a trove of emails, text messages, photographs and financial documents that were found on a laptop which Hunter abandoned at a Delaware computer repair shop in April 2019.

Headlines which the media failed to print just before the election in 2020 could have presented stories about Hunter Biden's illegal business dealings with, among others, China and Ukraine.

Further, videos of the U.S. President's son appeared to show him smoking crack cocaine, but were wiped from all but the darkest parts of the internet.

Such revelations would have damaged then candidate Biden's chances, and with a four-year history of smearing then sitting U.S. President Trump in any way they could (including a 2-year investigation into 'Russian collusion' which came to nothing), it is no surprise that the corporate media would then cover up for his rival in order to help get him elected.

But on March 16, the New York Times confirmed several previously reported aspects of the story, including correspondence between Hunter and his business partner Devon Archer, both of whom served on the board of Ukrainian energy giant Burisma.

On March 30, the Washington Post and CNN piled on - with the Post confirming yet more details of the laptop contents, and CNN running a segment and reporting that the federal investigation into Hunter is 'heating up'. The Washington Post reported on Hunter's "multimillion-dollar deals with a Chinese energy company".

Glenn Greenwald tweeted: "Most of these details were reported and confirmed in several outlets before the 2020 election - as opposed to now when it's safe to say it - but they were censored by Twitter based on the CIA lie spread by most corporate outlets that it was 'Russian disinformation'."

European Medicines Agency investigate menstrual problems after covid jabs

THE European Medicines Agency (EMA) is currently reviewing a possible link between menstrual irregularities and covid shots after thousands of women reported changes post-injection.

On the 11th of February, the EMA issued a statement on their official EU website: "The Pharmacovigilance Risk Assessment Committee (PRAC) is assessing reported cases of heavy menstrual bleeding (heavy periods) and absence of menstruation (Amenorrhoea) with the covid-19 vaccines Comirnaty and Spikevax. "The Committee had previously analysed reports of menstrual disorders in the context of safety summary reports for covid-19 vaccines approved in the EU and concluded at the time that the evidence did not support a causal link between the vaccines and menstrual disorders.

"In view of spontaneous reports of menstrual disorders with both vaccines and/or findings from the literature, the PRAC decided to further assess occurrences of heavy periods or

by PAUL BENNETT

Amenorrhoea following vaccination. "Menstrual disorders are very common and can occur with a wide range of underlying medical conditions as well as from stress and tiredness. Cases of these disorders have also been reported following covid-19 infection.

"Heavy periods may be defined as bleeding characteristics by a volume, which may interfere with the woman's physical, social, emotional, and material quality of life. Amenorrhoea may be defined as the absence of menstrual bleeding for three or more months in a row.

"After reviewing the available evidence, the PRAC decided to request an in-depth evaluation of all available data, including reports from spontaneous reporting systems, clinical trials, and the published literature.

"At this stage, it is not yet clear whether there is a causal link between covid-19 vaccines and the reports of heavy periods or Amenorrhoea. There is also no evidence to suggest that covid-19 vaccines affect fertility.

EMA will communicate further when more information becomes available."

A major study from the Norwegian Institute of Public Health examined the link between covid vaccines and menstrual changes. Results from the study found that there was a high incidence of menstrual changes after inoculation. The study collected data from over 6,000 women aged 18-30.

Project Leader at the Norwegian Institute of Public Health, Dr Lill Trogstad reported: "Menstrual changes are very common, and even before vaccination, almost four out of ten young women reported that they had experienced such changes. However, in this study we see that more women experienced changes after the first or second vaccine doses."

Government and health officials who coerced millions to get jabbed under the guise of 'safe and effective' vaccines need to be answerable to the public as adverse reactions keep emerging all the time.

Switzerland rejects funding for state media corporations

SWITZERLAND has voted strongly to reject government plans to increase state funding for media organisations. The referendum was directly related to a Bill approved by the Swiss government in Bern to grant aid for media companies in the region of 151 million Swiss francs a year.

Switzerland utilised its direct democratic political decision-making process by holding a referendum on the issue. Opponents of the Bill gathered thousands of signatures in a petition to set up the vote using the unique system of democracy in Switzerland called 'direct democracy'.

Swiss French language newspaper Le Temps reacted to the referendum results by saying: "Whatever else one says, Sunday, February 13 will force editorial offices to question themselves. The results show that the media are seen as complacent and subject to external influence... The only possible answer is to work even harder, to constantly search for opinions that contradict one's own,

by PAUL BENNETT

to continue investigative journalism and field work, and to be innovative. The Swiss media will have no choice but to prove that they are indispensable even in a society dominated by Google, Facebook, and Co."

Zurich based newspaper Neue Zürcher also posted: "The rejection of additional financial aid could also be a reaction to reporting in coronavirus times. The media's credibility has been put to the test in these last two unusual years. Their conspicuous closeness to the state and the -as we now know- loyalty to the government of certain outlets imposed by their management must have shaken the confidence of many citizens in the fourth estate of democracy."

The full results from the Swiss referendum showed 54.6% voting against the financial package for the 'already bought' media corporations.

In a time of media mass control and hypnosis, it is positive to see Switzerland pull the financial reins in on an already compromised industry.

Saudi carries out capital punishment sentences

RIYADH, Mar. 12, 2022:

"The Ministry of Interior has announced that it carried out the sentences of capital punishment against individuals convicted of terrorism and capital crimes.

"These 81 individuals were convicted of various crimes including murdering innocent men, women and children.

"Crimes committed by these individuals also include pledging allegiance to foreign terrorist organizations, such as ISIS, Al Qaeda, and the Houthis, targeting residents in the Kingdom and travelling to regional conflict zones to join terrorist organisations.

"They also include convictions for targeting government personnel and vital economic sites, the killing and maiming of law enforcement officers and planting land mines to target police vehicles. Moreover, the convictions include crimes of kidnapping, torture, rape, smuggling arms and bombs into the Kingdom.

"The aforementioned individuals were arrested, tried in Saudi courts, through trials overseen by a total of 13 judges over 3 separate stages of trial for each individual.

"The accused were provided with the right to an attorney and were guaranteed their full rights under Saudi law during the judicial process, which found them guilty of committing multiple heinous crimes that left a large number of civilians and law enforcement officers dead.

"The Kingdom will continue to take a strict and unwavering stance against terrorism and extremist ideologies that threaten the stability of the entire world."

Overcoming addiction

by CLIVE DE CARLE

IT would appear that thirty per cent of the population worldwide has addictive tendencies. This is partly to do with the fact that not all of us have a fully functioning dopamine system and a lack of dopamine is a problem for the addict.

The problem with dopamine is that we have in our brain a regulatory mechanism that endeavours to keep our dopamine levels stable. When this happens, the addict compensates by increasing the level of intake of the stimulant. In response, the brain down-regulates dopamine absorption and a vicious cycle of addiction can begin. Getting that dopamine rush becomes increasingly elusive, and people find themselves checking their phone constantly to see notifications, or smoking, drinking, overeating, gambling - whatever somebody's addiction is, often leading to excess.

This dopamine rush is what we know as pleasure. Happiness, on the other hand, releases serotonin, and the only mechanism that reduces serotonin in the body - as you can't have too much happiness - is dopamine. This means that the more pleasure you seek, the more happiness you lose.

What turns off our addictive tendencies? Amino acids can be very good at this, particularly the essential amino acids in high doses for 3 days. An alcoholic came to see me several years ago, and he explained that he didn't really need to eat food as such because four bottles of white wine a day gave him all the calories he needed! Within one day of taking the amino acids in a significantly high dose, he was happily off the booze for the first time in 20 years.

There is a second supplement which is even more powerful, and this is a special kind of selenium in liquid form. The results that I've seen using this material have been extraordinary. One of my clients who had been on ADHD medication for almost 20 years, used this selenium and found that they were able to come off the medication with an ease which had never happened before. Research was done in the 1980s in New York where they showed the ability of this particular type of selenium to help people come off methadone and heroin. Selenium is also famous for helping with hair and the scalp. I had a client just recently who found that their hair colour returned after supplementing with selenium. Unfortunately this result does not happen for everybody and it didn't happen for me!

The most recent supplement I've been recommending is not an essential mineral, but rather an extract from sugar cane. I find it ironic that sugar, which is doing so much harm health-wise, can in this particular form, be the trigger for the body to return to its natural, self-repairing state. This type of nutritional supplement is called an adaptogen because it helps the body to adapt to whatever situation it is exposed to.

Policosanol has been used as a supplement for anti-aging for some 25 years, but this version is made in an extraordinary way and has been given the name Nano Policosanol. Some testimonials have reported improvements to their hormonal health. This includes women who have had their menopause symptoms stop. One knew this result was caused by the Nano Policosanol because the lady stopped taking it for a month and the symptoms came back. When she resumed taking the supplement, her menopausal symptoms disappeared again.

Others have reported their asthma disappearing; better sleep; more energy; better mood; skin improvements; elimination of, or a reduction in pain, aching and stiffness; relaxation; increased calmness; finding they are no longer pre-diabetic; clarity of thought, strengthened immunity for the whole family; appetite changing (as in not eating too much anymore); weight correcting itself, whether too high or too low and improved digestion, to name but a few.

Some people found benefit on day one, others found the benefits occurred after a few months. I would recommend using the product for six months which would give enough time for most issues to be impacted, but conversely some people have noticed their blood pressure balance out in just days.

It's not that the Nano Policosanol is the remedy for specific issues that one could put into a list, but rather it appears to act as a booster to the body's repair systems, with the body doing the decision-making as to what issue it is going to have a positive benefit on. Other results that people have reported have included more vitality, better mood, skin tone improving, and wrinkles and spots disappearing. It also works particularly well with burns and injuries

This material is made in Switzerland and the quality, as with everything that I like to concern myself with, is second to none. Interestingly, as you may know, it is impossible to patent a natural material. Nano Policosanol was an exception. Because the results were so extraordinary, it was granted several patents. Nobody could have predicted from the ingredients and methodology that such incredible results could occur, thus, the patent was granted incredibly rapidly. The Nano Policosanol works with the vitamin D pathways, and if any of you know about GcMaf, this also worked with the vitamin D pathways.

I would recommend watching my videos on the subjects above, I like BrandNewTube as the best video platform. You can also see the clinical studies on the website nanopolicosanol.com

Legal challenge against injecting 5-11 year-olds

Children's Covid Vaccine Advisory Council (CCVAC) launches major legal challenge

In an unprecedented move, members of the British medical establishment, convened by the CCVAC, are launching a legal challenge against the UK Government's 'offer' of a covid 'vaccine' to healthy 5-to-11 year-olds, on behalf of a British mother and her children.

The action is supported by Beverley Turner, a radio and TV personality and leading campaigner for child protection.

by CHILDRENSUNION.ORG

It also employs the same top legal team that is challenging the government on the 12-15 year-old roll-out, but for official reasons, the team is obliged to open a new case for this younger age group.

This could be the last chance to get answers; in the absence of an independent critical media or political opposition on this issue, this is the only opportunity there will ever be to force the government to account for its decision.

Without the funds to bring this case, officials will get off unchallenged and we will have set a dangerous precedent for healthcare policy in this country.

We have an extremely strong argument, and while this does not necessarily translate into a high

Our legal team will dismantle this grossly irresponsible policy, piece by piece, and show:

- There is no benefit to children or anyone else
- There is demonstrable risk of life-changing injury
- Adverse reactions will be hundreds of thousands
- Some adverse reactions will be extremely serious and some deaths are to be expected probability of winning in court, it is of vital importance that these arguments are made - and the government's response recorded - to form part of an immutable public record.

The government has recently begun to climb down on many covid policies as the evidence becomes too obvious to ignore, but it is stubbornly pushing ahead with the least logical, most reckless policy of all - experimental pharmaceutical interventions on our children.

The complete lack of any risk-benefit case for children is set out in a letter that has been sent to the government, with two 'must-read' annexes that list the facts and evidence in support.

Everything the government has been doing is an insult to free and informed consent. The weakness of the government's position is signalled by the word 'offer' - intended to imply freedom of choice, when parents and children have been denied basic information on the vaccine and its side-effects (on the basis they are unqualified to judge the risk). This is not informed consent, it is a false choice.

Several countries, Norway and Sweden among them, have already refused to give the shots to children on the basis they provide no benefit. The UK must follow!

There is an emergency, but it's not from 'Omicron'. It's from this negligent policy.

Please visit our website for jaw-dropping facts and excellent resources for parents to share. Read the material and see for yourself, then help us make a difference.

Please pledge your support for this case. The costs will be in the six figures and every donation counts.

Covid protocol successful

Over 1,130 covid patients treated with a nutrition-only protocol, with just one death

COVID patients in the UK are being deliberately denied information on the huge success of non-jab approaches to treating the illness, despite widespread reports of the success, for example, of high-dose vitamin D (4,000 IU/day) and ivermectin in other countries (Japan recently licensed the latter across the country, resulting in a significant reduction in cases and deaths).

In the U.S. Dr David Brownstein and his partners, based in Orchard Lake, Michigan, reported on their success with 107 consecutively presenting patients treated with nutrition only, of which all survived, in 2020.¹ That number is now in excess of 1,130 - with only one death!

Using a nutritional and oxidative approach, the report summarised their method, which is continuing to produce success with natural therapies, which work by providing support to the innate and adaptive immune system.

The average age in their group is 55 years and they include many overweight or obese, those with underlying comorbidities and those of Black or Asian origin (BAME). Nearly 20% of this cohort was over 70 years old. All of these four groups also tend to be highly vitamin D deficient.

This is the same approach that they have been using for over 20 years in treating all viral and bacterial infections. This therapy was designed to support the immune system during an infectious time period.

The treatment protocol used was:

At the first sign of illness, such as a cough, fever, sore throat, etc, the

by SIMON BEST

patients were instructed to take orally a four-day course of 100,000 IU of vitamin A (not beta carotene), 1,000 mg of vitamin C every hour to bowel tolerance (loose stools), 50,000 IU of vitamin D3 and 25 mg of iodine.

Furthermore, the patients were advised to nebulise a dilute solution of hydrogen peroxide (0.3%) and iodine (1 drop of 5% Lugol's solution) every waking hour until symptoms improved. If further care was needed, the patients were treated with intravenous doses of vitamin C (2,500 mg, IVC), hydrogen peroxide and intramuscular ozone. No drugs were administered, except steroids occasionally, and no experimental 'vaccines'.

To date, they have had precisely one patient die! And there were just 12 hospitalisations out of over 1,130 patients. They have also had very few patients suffering from long-term effects secondary to covid-19: 15 of the cohort (2.9%). Most of these patients improved on a holistic regimen and no longer suffer from prolonged symptomology. As previously, Dr Brownstein hopes to publish these results in due course, though this is being made increasingly difficult due to journals rejecting such articles because they don't want to upset their drug advertisers!

"Becoming ill with SARS-CoV-2 and developing covid-19 is not a death sentence", says Dr Brownstein. "For most it is a mild-to-moderate, flu-like illness. When treated early with items that nourish and support the immune system, patients suffering from covid-19 can make a full and uneventful recovery."

Making cacao the new coffee

A MAN from Withington, Manchester, is on a mission to make cacao the new coffee. Spiritual healer and founder of Full Power Cacao, Liam Browne has been a pioneer of the South and Central American ceremonial drink ever since discovering its healing properties in Guatemala in 2012, and is now one of the biggest suppliers in the UK.

Liam, known by many as 'The Cacao Guru', is a spiritual healer, yoga teacher, author, podcaster and founder of Stone Cold Sober Retreats and Festivals. When on a visit to Guatemala for the end of the Mayan calendar in 2012, he met the 'Chocolate Shaman' on the majestic Lake Atitlan and after being introduced to the magic of cacao, his life was forever changed.

Liam said: "I cannot recommend cacao and its health benefits enough. I have been enjoying the benefits of cacao since 2012 but first started testing and researching different origins thoroughly in 2019. After searching throughout the Central and South American regions, I ethically sourced the authentic, powerful, magical and heart-opening plant medicine from Venezuela and set out to share it with as many people as possible."

Cacao comes from the edible seed of the cacao tree, which is native to tropical regions such as Central and South America, and has been used by indigenous people for centuries due to its healing properties and health benefits. Its Greek name, Theobroma Cacao, literally means 'Food of the Gods' and is now classed by many as a superfood that can be enjoyed in warm drink form.

Liam explained: "There are so many benefits of cacao. It's a natural anti-depressant due to the magnesium and potassium it contains and it also has beneficial natural compounds such as serotonin, phenylethylamine and anandamide - all of which have been shown to enhance mood. It's also packed with flavonoids that can lower blood pressure, improve the blood flow to the heart and brain, and help reduce the risk of dementia."

He continued: "Cacao contains 23% of natural protein, perfect for those looking to increase their protein intake, and it contains 33% fibre. It has 15 times more antioxidants than blueberries so it's great for the skin and it's also a powerful aphrodisiac. The benefits of cacao are endless and it's becoming more and more popular as a healthy alternative to coffee."

One of the pioneers of cacao in the UK, Liam is an expert in the field. Ever since creating Full Power Cacao, he has been on a mission to share the medicine with as many people as possible - with an online shop and commercial supply to cafes, restaurants and shops. He also hosts Cacao Ceremonies, incorporating sacred shamanic and yogic traditions with his own twist, and offers Cacao Teacher Training Courses.

Liam said: "Cacao is exploding here in the UK, as more and more people learn about its benefits. I cannot state enough how good for you this sacred drink is, and by replacing coffee with cacao you'll feel a huge difference on so many levels. In addition to there being so many health benefits, cacao positively works with the chakras so it has deep spiritual powers too. I genuinely believe cacao can become the new coffee."

Liam's cacao business has gone from strength to strength - educating people on the benefits of cacao and supplying to thousands of people and businesses across the UK. In March 2022 he went on a UK tour, hosting Cacao Ceremonies at venues throughout England, Scotland and Wales, and he has Teacher Training courses scheduled for the rest of the year.

Liam summarised: "Everyone I know who has embraced this sacred medicine has felt its profound powers and never looked back. It can ease anxiety, apathy, depression, headaches, insecurity, irritability and more, and it is good for your mood, blood, the heart - as well as containing magnesium, potassium, protein, flavonoids, fibre, antioxidants and more. Try swapping coffee with cacao - I guarantee you'll feel the difference!"

Liam's business has a website where individuals and businesses can purchase his ethically sourced Venezuelan cacao. The website has more information about the benefits of cacao and details of the cacao ceremonies and training courses available. Ethically sourced from Venezuela, it is blessed in Manchester with the highest vibrational energy.

They are planning to control everything we do

They're not planning a little light tinkering around the edges of our lives

IF we lose this war, and for the first time I now fear that we might, it will not be because of the lies and the deceptions from the billionaire conspirators who control governments, the media and the professions.

It will not be because of the censorship and demonisation of the truth-tellers.

If we lose this war, the most important in our history, it will be because of the collaborators, the trolls and the virtue signallers who obey without thinking, who fuss and whine over trivia and irrelevances, and who fail to understand that we are fighting for our lives and our freedom.

And if we do lose this war, there will never be another war worth fighting. We will be pawns; without any control over our lives or our destiny. Sir Klaus Schwab (knighted by Queen Elizabeth for services to conspiracy) boasted that his Great Reset would ensure that we will 'own nothing but be happy'. I fear the collaborators, the trolls and the virtue signallers don't believe him.

I wonder how many of the so-called journalists working for the BBC realise that the lies they are spreading are helping to lead them to a world where they too will own nothing. Doctors, journalists, judges, lawyers and politicians who support the conspiracy, will not be exempt from the conspirators' blood-thirsty ambition to reduce the world's population by 90%. None of them will be exempt from the billionaires' plan to own everything and rule us as slaves.

If and when the Great Reset takes place we will have no rights, no belongings, no privacy, no freedom, no choices, no family, no health care, no education, no freedom of movement and no opportunity to live where we want to live. We won't even control our own bodies.

If you think that's an exaggeration, look at the new laws being passed and look at the way everything is changing.

The NHS is just a shadow of its former self, with unhappy staff forced to maintain absurd rules about masks and social distancing that were never necessary. Schools are shut if there is a loose leaf blowing around the playground.

This is what they mean when they talk about the Great Reset. They're not planning a little light tinkering around the edges of our lives. They are planning to control everything we do;

by Dr VERNON COLEMAN

to own us.

The digital society doesn't just mean being able to pay for your coffee without having to bother with cash. It means only being able to buy a coffee if they allow you to do so. The digital society means that they control your money and how you spend it.

The social credit system, which Schwab and company have borrowed from the Chinese, means that you will lose your right to catch a bus or rent a house if you question what you are told to do, fail to show proper respect to the system or read or watch material that is forbidden.

Once the Great Reset has been established everyone will receive a universal basic income. And that will be it. No hopes and no ambitions.

I wonder if BBC staff realise that in the New World Order,

The digital society doesn't just mean being able to pay for your coffee without having to bother with cash. It means only being able to buy a coffee if they allow you to do so absurdly overpaid BBC presenters will receive the same income as car park attendants?

The collaborators, the virtue signalling zombies who have been trained to jump at every command, who have happily obeyed the lockdown rules, performed the social distancing two step, worn masks and accepted jabs, should know that however bad things have been during the last two years, they will be far, far worse if the conspirators win the war. Life will never go back to the 'old normal' unless we make it so.

There are some who think everything that has happened recently is just bad luck: the covid hoax; the insane charge towards 'net zero' and the consequences of a manufactured war between Russia and the Ukraine.

That shows a lamentably naive failure to understand how the world is being controlled.

The trolls who live and operate away from the action, but who snipe and moan and whinge and create battles out of nothing, are helping the conspirators. Their selfishness and treachery is being applauded by the World Economic Forum.

Those who think I'm exaggerating might like to ask themselves why anyone who has told the truth about covid or the covid jabs has been immediately silenced, banned, censored, demonised and lied about.

Why does the BBC now ban any honest, open discussion about vaccines or climate change, when the science proves beyond doubt that the covid jabs are unsafe and ineffective and that climate change doesn't exist?

There is no scientific debate any more. Newspapers and journals are corrupt and paid to suppress and sneer at the truth. I've proved that so-called fact checkers exist to suppress real facts and promote lies.

The war between Russia and Ukraine, deliberately triggered by the conspirators, should have made it clear that our governments have declared war on us - it is the war to end all wars.

The sanctions selected as weapons prove that the conspirators are committed to a war which will enable them to control everything we do.

Our governments, doing what they are told to do by the billionaire conspirators, have deliberately created a world where there will be massive fuel and food shortages (with strict food and fuel rationing inevitable), rapidly rising prices and collapsing economies. Hundreds of millions will starve to death.

Governments aren't seeking to suppress or intimidate or punish Russia. They are fighting us.

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security openly states that conspiracy theorists and anyone questioning the covid nonsense are 'extremists'. In Ireland, the Government has stated that the State "shall delimit the right to private property where it is necessary to ensure the common good." The word 'sequestration' now appears often. Oppressive new laws are being

The fake war between Russia and Ukraine, deliberately triggered by the conspirators, should have made it clear that our governments have declared war on us - it is the war to end all wars introduced in the UK. Inconvenient truths are dangerous, say the politicians and the media, and those spreading them must be suppressed.

If the conspirators win this war, we will be left with no history, no culture, no sport, no entertainment, no health care, no family life, no privacy, no self-respect, no dignity, no passion and no possibility of enjoying a sense of achievement.

You will only travel when and where you are allowed to travel. You will not own a car so you will be dependent upon public transport. But you will only be allowed to use public transport when you are given permission to do so.

Do you really think it is a coincidence that statues are being torn down, that cancel culture won't allow debates, that children are allowed to choose their gender, that women are being pushed out of sport and that restrictive new laws are being introduced so quickly that we cannot keep up with what is allowed and what is not allowed?

After the Great Reset the law will be very simple: we will only be allowed to do those things which we are allowed to do.

If you think I am exaggerating then you are, I fear, living in a world as unreal as Charlie's Chocolate Factory.

Everything I have warned about for two years has come to pass. Do Not Resuscitate notices are being used to kill off the elderly, the sick and the disabled. The useless PCR tests can be used to take DNA samples (which are then sold to commercial companies) or to give vaccinations.

When the conspirators say 'You will own nothing and be happy', that is what they mean.

Remember that the conspirators have made no secret of the fact that they consider the world to be vastly overpopulated - and that they intend to reduce the population by removing 90% of the people.

Do you think you're likely to be one of the chosen ones?

If you want to live in a free world, where you can make your own decisions and your own choices, then you have to put all your energy into fighting the conspirators.

Remember: we are living in a world where our governments have declared war on us. We need to remain constantly aware and suspicious. Whenever anything bad happens, ask yourself "What is the most sinister reason for this?" and "What do I need to do to protect myself?"

Eternal paranoia is now the price of freedom.

The incredible "Oxy-Hydrogen Generator" creates structured, energised, exotic water which produces a gas of 30% Hydrogen and 70% Oxygen.

After 30-45 minutes inhaling the gas, the bubbled water is then drunk. "I have not suffered a single day's illness. The musculature of my entire body has firmed up and my strength and vitality have increased. My general mood and libido have improved along with better hair growth and younger looking skin and nails. My considerable and long term joint pains have gone. I feel renewed all over at 64 years of age." – The author

The truth about Tuam

THE idea that women murdered other women's babies and dumped their bodies in a septic tank is a story not based on evidence but is a fanciful fabrication from a tissue of lies, misunderstanding incompetent history and cultural prejudices.

The people of Galway, together with many others, know that the Tuam story is false, but they struggle to have their voice heard because of the poisonous anti-Christian agenda of the Irish media. When one simple question is asked, the whole fabrication reveals itself: what benefit came to the nuns from the abuse and murder of babies?

Many women in Britain and on the continent offered a baby care and sometimes a baby disposal service for a fee. They were known as Baby Farmers or Angel Makers and the governments of all of Europe and beyond struggled for centuries to put them out of business. Despite all efforts, including the death penalty, the problem continued unabated. Rhoda Willis, executed on the 14th of August 1907, became the last woman to be hanged for serial killing associated with Baby Farming in the UK. Ten years later, in Sweden, Hilda Nilsson hanged herself while on death row for the serial murders of babies entrusted to her care.

While baby farming was less of a problem in Ireland, and despite evidence within court records of many convictions for such an offence, no women were executed here. However, the practice was not wiped out and many unfortunate infants continued to suffer and die at their hands. In an effort to stop the carnage, and even before Ireland achieved its independence, a government commission recommended that unmarried mothers and their babies be cared for in institutions run by religious orders or philanthropic organisations. In other words, Mother And Baby homes were a British idea and they went on to establish many such institutions on the island of Britain and elsewhere throughout the empire.

In 1921, members of Galway County Council moved to have a children's home established. The Tuam Children's Home first came into being using an old workhouse building at Glenamaddy, some 28km to the east. Moreover, and in line with the commission's recommendations, the authorities pulled off a master stroke by securing the agreement of the Bon Secours nursing order to run and manage the home.

Eugene Jordan reveals the inconvenient truth about the Tuam 'holocaust' that never happened

The Bon Secours were and remain a highly regarded organisation of women who dedicate their lives in service of the sick and dying. In the past, many of the women were trained nurses who offered the poor a level of healthcare that could only be afforded by the wealthy. Indeed, the wealthy women of Tuam were happy to pay for their maternity care at the Grove Hospital in Tuam which was also run by Bon Secours women.

So why is it that 50 years after the Tuam Children's Home closed do these highly trained and competent women stand accused of neglect abuse and murder?

The pillar on which the whole scandal stands is the issue of higher-than-average infant mortality rates and a buffoonish interpretation of medical terms used on death certificates.

The reality is simply, it is nothing more than a hospital effect on the statistics. Most hospitals, especially those dealing with high-risk patients, have higher mortality rates than the average. In medical research, it is well known that poverty places patients at higher risk of poor health, they have higher mortality rates and also have lower life expectancy, than those who enjoy a more affluent lifestyle.

The mothers who were looked after at the Tuam Home were the in the highest risk category of them all and many were vulnerable, while others were victims of incest. There is nothing unusual in the infant mortality rates at the Tuam home and all maternity hospitals of that era have higher than average mortality rates.

All maternity hospitals have records of babies dying from 'marasmus', a medical term used when a death is due to the gut being unable to absorb nutrients from food. Like obesity, it is classified as malnutrition, and the association with this word has given us excitable headlines of children being starved to death at all mother and baby homes.

This is utterly malicious and totally untrue but serves the mainstream atheistic narrative intent of driving Christianity out of Ireland.

In my book, I publish copies of death certificates showing that deaths from 'marasmus' occurred at Dublin's major maternity and children's hospitals. Why has the Irish media not run with screaming headlines about babies being starved to death at these hospitals?

It is naive in the extreme to suggest that high mortality rates are evidence of neglect and abuse. The women of the Bon Secours order did a marvellous job of caring for the poorest and most destitute individuals in Irish society and during extremely challenging times. They accomplished miracles — taking little or no pay — on a grant of a mere ten shillings per child, per week — about €32.00 in today's money. Today the state pays €24,849.89 per child, per week, to keep a child in an institution, a massive 623 times what it paid to keep children in care in institutions in the 1930s.

The allegations made by Catherine Corless have not been proven by the commission of investigation into mother and baby homes. Remember it was set up to investigate her claims first, at a huge cost to the Irish taxpayer, and later those of others. She freely admits that she is not a historian, nor does she possess the skills to accurately report historical events. She has however, remarkable talent for vagueness and insinuation. She could not contain her anger remarking of the commission's final report; 'this is going down in history and it's a fallacy', while other scandal propagators have been more direct calling for the report to be repudiated.

One day the truth will come out. And those who perpetrated these shameful falsehoods that have done so much harm to our country and its proud Catholic heritage will be held to account.
