IRISH SLAVES AGAIN

ASK the average Irish person why they chose to take the experimental vaccine from a government with a woeful track record in health and a disastrous hospital system, and they will more than likely tell you it had nothing to do with protecting them from a 'deadly virus'.

I wanted to go on holiday.

I needed it to attend a wedding.

I had to get it for my job.

I was blackmailed by my husband.

I needed it for the GAA.

These responses are commonplace when we do random surveys of people, many of whom are now in the most profound state of vaccine regret.

It's a sign of the mass enslavement of the Irish people that they would put their own material comforts ahead of their health and survival and risk being paralysed for life or getting turbo cancer for a fortnight in the sun. When we think of Communist slavery, we think of hardship, poverty, starvation. This is why it's so difficult for many people to conceive that we are diving into full-blown Orwellian totalitarianism in Ireland. If that is so, they ask, why are we so wealthy? Why do we have so many trinkets and possessions, so much apparent material affluence compared to our ancestors? Surely that is not what Communism looks like. Little do they know that is exactly what it is. They are so caught up in their day-to-day existence, trying to pay extortionate bills and bank debt, fund lavish lifestyles, new cars, foreign holidays, divorces and second families, they don't realise that they have been enslaved once again by an insidious system that turns them into consumer drones and bleeds them dry at every opportunity by taxing them to the hilt and gradually chipping away at their most fundamental freedoms.

Deep down, the average Irish person knows they were severely scammed during the Covid hoax, that it was nothing more than a headcold if it existed at all and that the government 'cure' is killing large numbers of healthy young people and active elderly who should have years of life left. They know this because they see the carnage all around, the frequent funerals of local GAA 'stars', the sudden deaths of family members and friends who were in the peak of their health. By now, they should be boiling over with anger - righteous indignation - towards a regime that despises them.

Deep down, the average Irish person now knows they were severely scammed during the Covid hoax and that the government's 'cure' is killing large numbers of young and healthy people. They should be boiling with indignation.

But instead, they stay on the treadmill, in denial, hoping beyond hope that Big Daddy Government would not do that to them, even though they know the same people have been robbing them blind for decades and have left Ireland unrecognisable.

This decision to stay on the hamster wheel rather than taking back control over their lives and out of the hands of the gangsters that run this country is an admission of defeat. And an almost certain guarantee that the Irish people as a race will cease to occupy this island as their own for much longer. No nation has fallen further than the Irish into the depths of consumer slavery and material decadence in recent decades. They have surrendered their noble reputation as warriors for freedom and The Faith and surrendered to a bunch of homosexual goons who would steal the hair from their heads.

The Irish have signed up to the misery destined for them in the coming years because they have become obedient slaves of a corrupt State. They have shown themselves to have no fight in them and no discernment to see through the lies they're being told night and day by the bought-off media and the gangsters in Leinster House. It's going to be a very rough ride for them in the years ahead unless they come out of their brainwashed state and take back control. They say that good times make weak men, weak men make hard times, hard times make strong men, strong men make good times. Let's hope that applies in the case of Ireland. Otherwise it will cease to exist.

Fear Is The Virus

THE only way the government can keep the masses under control is by keeping them in a state of perpetual fear. And with the advent of a new year, that's exactly what they plan to do for the next 12 months using their lapdog media who lied to you night and day during the Covid scam.

Many Irish people have now seen the light and dumped their tell-lie-visions as they come to terms with the extent of the deception all around them. From 9/11 to vaccines, the climate hoax and the Jewish 'Holohoax', the list goes on and on. Once you have accepted that you have been lied to on a mass scale, your life will change significantly for the better.

Many Irish are also waking up to the fact that their government is their worst enemy. Puppeticians who are controlled by powerful international financial demons to destroy Ireland have to keep the people in a state of fear so they obey their suffocating laws and pay illegal taxes. Imagine they have convinced the Irish people to pay more tax on the grounds that it will change the weather. They've persuaded them to give up using turf to heat their homes: our God-given natural resource that does not pollute or change the climate in any way. Haven't you had enough of this mania?

When our ancestors were being persecuted through the centuries by crown forces intent on turning Ireland Protestant, they refused to adopt the Book of Common Prayer and give up Holy Mass and The Eucharist. No matter how much they were targeted and savagely abused, they refused to stop and Cromwell and Henry The 8th eventually gave up trying to corrupt the Irish. Because of this, we inherited a nation with a solid moral bedrock, strong tribal families and a culture of protecting life, unlike the broken atheistic heritage of our nearest neighbours who abandoned Catholicism 500 years ago.

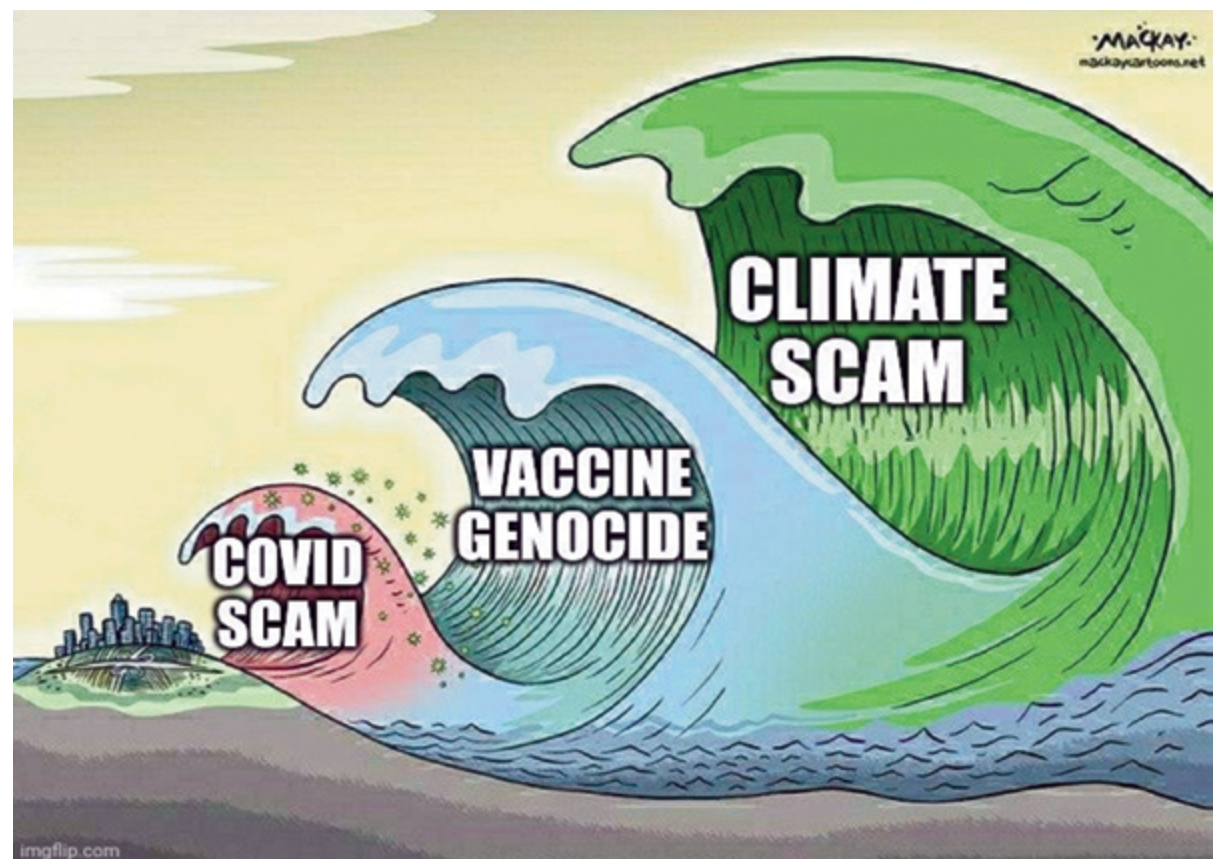

The lesson we should learn from our glorious centuries of defiance against State regimes in favour of God is to SAY NO. That is how we win back all of the freedom we have lost and bring the Police State to its knees. Once the State collapses, which it inevitably will, the illegal invaders who are stealing your children's futures and endangering our safety and very identity, will have no choice but to go back home, including those who claim to be Irish just because their parents came here illegally.

This has to happen because if it doesn't, the Irish people will very soon be a minority in their own homeland. By saying no to government, media and all of the rotten institutions of the State we will get our country back. We will weaken the State into oblivion without having to lift any weapons, a strategy which throughout our bloody past has achieved nothing but more freemasonic control. All violent revolutions are controlled at the top by the enemy because they have the resources to infiltrate and dominate.

All you need to be is An Army Of One. Don't join any organisations or political parties all of which are controlled. In your everyday life, take back control, be courageous and stand up in your own way. This means having conversations with your family, neighbours and friends about what's really going on. Help them to see through the fakery: that there are no deadly viruses on the loose, that mass shootings and stabbings are staged by the State to bring in hate laws and police surveillance, that media is nothing more than a bunch of crisis actors given their scripts on a daily basis and told to read their lines. Everything coming from the mouths of the regime now is a lie.

There is no economy left - just a hyperinflated bubble of multinational corporations who make poison pharma products and steal our free speech. Property is being priced into the stratosphere so that your children will always have to rely on State handouts which will result in zero freedom for them. See our back page for more. You simply have to break away from this system if you are to survive. There's no doubt that we, as a people, have been the most targeted by the international financial cabal. We went from being the most upstanding and abstemious race to an immoral bunch of debt slaves who crave the next pint or purchase without thinking any longer of the big picture. It took our ancestors hundreds of years - from the arrival of St Patrick 1600 years ago - to hone our culture into one of the safest, friendliest, richest and most beautiful in the world. We have thrown all of that away in just forty years, thanks largely to RTE indoctrination. But as quickly as we have wrecked the legacy of our forefathers, we can recreate it. It is in our blood and we know instinctively what the right path is.

We can reclaim our ancient island and make it a secure place for our children where they can have a viable future and are not threatened by outsiders who have come to abuse our generosity. Remember the political villains who have ruined our country are cowards and not used to being challenged.

They're so scared of us, they're trying to silence the words from our mouths because they know everything we say is true and shared by all sane Irish people. They haven't had a media to hold them to account for decades. So lose your fear and take back power. We are the 99% and the 1% who try to dictate to us and steal our wealth and freedom must be reminded of that 1,000 times a day.

Migrant Slums Destroying Ireland

John Waters on the new Ballymun being built for Varadkar's imported slaves

ALL over Ireland now, a building boom is underway. But this is not a boom like any we have known all our lives. It involves not houses but what might loosely be termed 'apartments,' or more accurately 'flats.'

You see them around Dublin and other urban centres and can only wonder at the (large) quantity and (small) scale of them. They can be seen in Cherrywood, south Dublin; in Shanganagh further south (pictured on the right); on Beach Road, Sandymount, in the approach to the toll bridge. They might be termed 'matchbox development,' so small do the individual 'apartments' appear from the grounds, so numerous as to be almost impossible to count, even in a single structure.

These Soviet-style blocks contain the new 'homes' of an utterly changed Ireland, the 'pods' in which the workers of the future will reside, which is to say 'rest' awhile between shifts at the grindstone of the new fascistic economy of Varadkar and Martin, O'Gorman and Donnelly.

And still the ranks of the Irish homeless expand at a steady pace - the official figures 14,000 and counting - without any promise of relief or improvement.

On St Stephen's Day just past, flying back to Ireland after a brief trip to London for Christmas, I noticed that, in a half-full aeroplane cabin, only a handful of passengers - the upper single-digit numbers - could remotely have been Irish people. The rest were evident outsiders, though not 'migrants' in the conventional sense of scammers, spongers and welfare tourists, but more like the kind of people companies like Google and Facebook have brought in to man their surveillance and censorship operations, presumably because Paddy might not take their instructions quite so literally as an alien with no loyalty or affection for Ireland or its people.

There was a time, not so long ago, when a standard element of the RTE Christmas routine was the TV crew dispatched to Dublin or Knock airport to welcome home the returning emigrants and film them bading a tearful farewell by their loved ones. What happened to all of that? No longer an appropriate part of the narrative, one presumes. Now all of our tears are crocodile one. It has long been common knowledge that the transnational corporations who own and control much of what is laughably termed the 'Irish economy' have little interest in employing Irish people. Although that was the understanding upon which they came here in the first place (to dodge tax likely to be levied in their home fiscal jurisdictions) they found that Irish wage and salary expectations were too high and Paddy was less suited to the drone-style occupations that make up the majority of the jobs in the tech and pharma sectors.

On the face of it, it is as if, unable to feed, clothe and house its own people, the government of Ireland switched to solving the whole world's problems. But it has nothing, of course, to do with altruism. The young people on the flight from Heathrow were the slaves of the new Ireland, a literal fascist state, its government comprising a coalition between a uni-voce political establishment and an externally-rooted and directed corporate sector. The 'pod-living' apartments of the new Ireland have nothing to do with the Irish people. They are the dormitories of the new imported serf class which will operate the wealth-generating apparatus that, on the sand bank of our once proud island, will be the sole remaining residue of the Easter Proclamation's commitment to cherish equally all the children of the nation. In the future, all denizens of Ireland will be treated with equal contempt.

Once the homes of Ireland were commissioned by Irish developers and built by Irish builders. The 'pods' of the new 'hive-cities,' however are built to the instructions of foreign vulture funds, appointed by an 'Irish' government as the new absentee landlord class that will own the roof over the heads of - before long - the entire population.

It is not possible for an ordinary citizen, even an immigrant to Ireland, to buy any of these 'apartments.' They are not for sale, except to 'investors,' most of whom will never set foot in Ireland all the days of their lives. A typical operator within this newly-forged marketplace is the Royalton Group, a UK company with offices now in Malahide, north Dublin, which offers 'asset-management' service as well as trading in 'real estate consultancy', student accommodation and hotels. No longer is the property market concerned with providing homes for prospective or existing Irish families, but with tapping into the highly lucrative market of rental to single individuals operating in the 21st century sweatshops of the new allegedly 'progressive' Ireland.

In the summer of 2023, for example, work began on a new development at Beach Road, Sandymount, Dublin 4, by Walls Construction, an Irish company for once, at least. Prospective investors were advised that 'this modern 6-storey development accommodates 112 one and two-bed apartments, each with their own balcony. The scheme also includes shared landscaped gardens, and a large communal space, comprising of a gym, lounge, workspace, bookable room, office and more. This sits above a single-level basement car park with 79 car spaces and 234 bicycle spaces'

This is typical of the new developments: one and two-bed 'apartments'; gyms but no creche facilities; and more than three times as many spaces for bicycles as for cars,

It is clear that this complex is not intended for Irish families, constructed with a view to building a healthy and vibrant nation, but the provision of battery cages for the sweatshop fodder of the next Celtic Tiger. This is the stage of development of the new economics that comes after the people-trafficking stage. Meanwhile, those responsible for constructing these new ghetto slums blather from the other sides of their mouths about 'equality' and the necessity for environmental sustainability and ecological accountability.

Meanwhile, the words of Thomas Davis echo ghostily through our cityscapes, ricocheting off the walls of the nouveau Ballymun of the 21st century:

'This country of ours is no sand bank, thrown up by some recent caprice of earth. It is an ancient land, honoured in its archives of civilisation, traceable into antiquity by its piety, its valour, and its sufferings. Every great European race has sent its stream to the river of Irish mind. Long wars, vast organisations, subtle codes, beacon crimes, leading virtues, and self-mighty men were here. If we live influenced by wind and sun and tree, and not by the passions and deeds of the past, we are a thrifless and a hopeless people.'

Irish Second-Class Citizens Once Again

ONE of the psychopath's favourite tricks is triangulation. This is where they use a third party to undermine, demoralise, and shame their victim by attempting to make them feel jealous and worthless. We all know of personal relationships whereby people use ex-girlfriends or boyfriends to try to trigger their current partner into feeling inadequate and insecure. Only the emotionally dead mind of a narcissist lacking all empathy could concoct such a tactic and it is exactly what the Irish regime led by Dictator Varadkar is doing to the Irish people using illegal migrants as his weapon of choice.

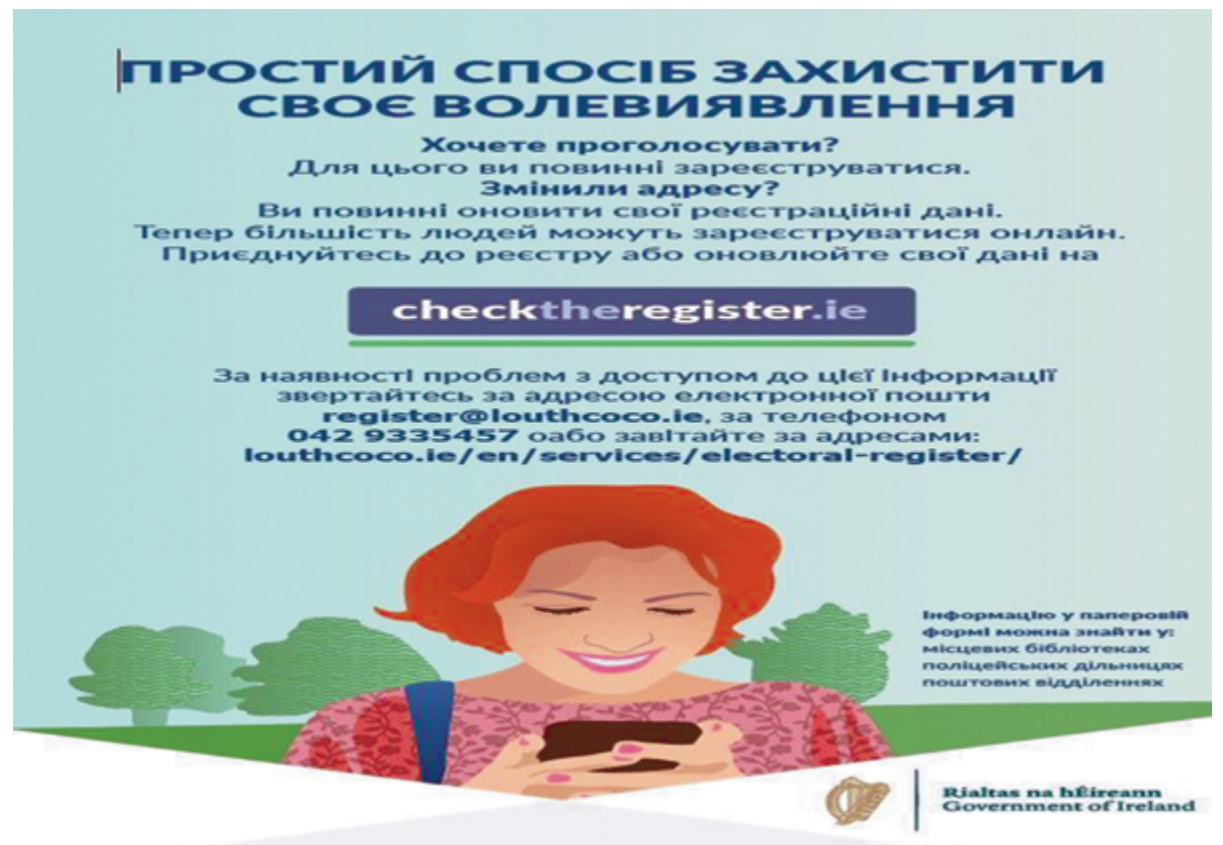

Every day, we hear the puppeticians and their fawning media pontificating about what an asset the invaders are to Ireland, effectively telling the Irish people who pay their wages that they are now a hindrance to the country. That the Irish people have tolerated this gaslighting for so long is terrifying and breathtaking in equal measure. The few people who have stood up against the bullies who are pulverising our country and culture have paid a heavy price but at least they can sleep at night knowing they have played their part when they were called to do so. That is what being Irish is supposed to be about, but clearly the bulk of the population have lost all sense of that characteristic. Every day, the crooks in power abuse them by laying out all sorts of perks and prizes to foreigners based on skin colour. If you're a pasty native, you're not on the list. The whole purpose of mass immigration is to undermine and degrade the local people leaving them vulnerable and frightened because of the hordes of strangers in their midst.

It's understandable that many people feel fearful and worried for their futures in the face of such an obvious invasion of outsiders. Be in no doubt that this conversation is happening in every single household in Ireland that calls itself Irish. And understandably there is a great sense of loss, helplessness, anger and grief at the fact that Ireland as we knew it appears to have been lost, perhaps forever. It's very hard for people to face the reality which is why we see so many people burying their heads in the sand unable to even have the conversation beyond their immediate circle, for fear of being called 'racists.' Step 1 in dealing with this catastrophic situation is to face it and start to speak up. We must never worry about the consequences of telling the truth.

The whole purpose of mass immigration is to undermine and degrade the local people leaving them vulnerable and frightened

Be brave in your righteous indignation towards all the people who have done this to us - most notably the mainstream media, the political parties and the multinational corporations. Disentangle yourselves from any association with them and let them know how you feel. These wicked entities feel more threatened now than at any other time in their existence. We have a very small window of opportunity to save Ireland and ensure that the generations coming after us have a land and a home to call their own.

DETOX SUPPLEMENTS FOR THE VACCINE INJURED

Magnesium plays many crucial roles in the body, such as supporting muscle & nerve function and energy production

NAC (N- Acetyl Cysteine) provides a variety of protective antioxidant effects, blocks damages to DNA, strengthening all organs, including the brain – dissolves mucus, improves breathing & respiratory problems. NAC powers up the immune system, boosting antibodies, increasing glutathione, which fights disease & aging. NAC has been around for decades, and is proven to be very safe

Glutathione is the body's most powerful antioxidant & counteracts the harmful effects of graphene oxide. Human bodies produce glutathione naturally but as we age & absorb toxins, its production slows down. Glutathione is a body-specific antioxidant that cells need to function & survive. When you get sick, glutathione levels can fall

Zinc – essential for binding capacity & optimizing lethality of immune cells. Promotes antiviral enzyme blocking viral replication.

Selenium is a trace element that is naturally present in many foods and available as a dietary supplement. It is nutritionally essential for humans and is a constituent of more than two dozen selenoproteins that play critical roles in reproduction, thyroid hormone metabolism, DNA synthesis and protection from oxidative damage and infection

Zeolite has a strong attraction to many heavy metals including mercury, lead, cadmium and arsenic. It also binds to and removes many chemicals like fluorine and chlorine, eliminating free radicals of all types, and it reverses acute chemical and allergic reactions, all without removing vital nutrients from the body. This makes it a maximum detoxifier.

Pine Needle Tea, Fennel Seed, Star Anise contains shikimic acid, high levels of antioxidants & DNA-protective properties

Black Cumin Seed Oil is a natural alternative to Ivermectin. Nigella sativa has been used as traditional medicine for centuries. The oil from its seeds are effective against many diseases like cardiovascular complications, diabetes, asthma, kidney disease also effective against cancer in blood system, lung, kidney, liver, prostate, breast, cervix and skin.

Fulvic Acid & Shilajit have long been used in traditional medicine & reduce inflammation and boost immunity. Fulvic acid has been well studied for its effects on immune health and inflammation. Improve disease resistance, increase your immune defences, fight inflammation, chronic diseases & enhance antioxidant activity

Vitamin D/C/A promote healthy cells. Take intravenously for best effect. High dose sunshine. Aged garlic extract, ginger, beetroot. A three-day fast will also help to get rid of dysfunctional cells. Fast regularly and see how much your health improves.

Activated Charcoal, Chlorophyll, Chlorella, Spirulina, Irish Sea Moss, C-60, Apple Cider Vinegar, Infrared Sauna, Green Tea, Alkaline Water, Probiotics, Cinnamon & Raw Honey, Avocado, Garlic, Turmeric, Cilantro, Ginger, Cruciferous vegetables & leafy greens are also great detoxes for the body

Government's Goalkeepers

John Waters on Ireland's judges and lawyers who operate as a criminal cartel disguised in wigs and gowns abusing the Constitution and Irish citizens daily

IT is no longer widely appreciated that the Government of Ireland has three elements: the Executive (Taoiseach and cabinet), the Oireachtas (Legislature/parliament) and the Judiciary (essentially the Supreme Court). These three elements are intended to operate on a self-regulating basis, whereby the Government proposes new laws which, once passed, it also enforces; the Oireachtas makes the laws; and the courts interpret these laws.

Each of the three elements is supposed to function as a check on both the others; in particular the Oireachtas on the executive and judiciary, with the judiciary returning the compliment by maintaining oversight on laws passed by the political arms to ensure that these are in accordance with the Irish Constitution, which says that all of the power of the State comes from the Irish people.

The constitutional text is also at pains to keep these governmental uses of powers separate, so as to guarantee that there is no imbalance of power between the three elements of the constitutional government. This principle is known as 'The Separation of Powers.'

In as far as it relates to the relationship between politicians and judges, however, this principle, in its application within the system, has become subject to a degree of slippage and erosion of recent times. Once intended as a safeguard against legislative or administrative overreach, it has come to be interpreted by latter-day judges as decreeing that they ought not step on the toes of the politicians. Since the primary function of the judiciary is to maintain oversight on the legislative and administrative conduct of politicians, this modern interpretation has created a dangerously undemocratic situation whereby the courts nowadays are, almost regardless of the facts, inclined to take the side of the government of the day, whenever a conflict arises with citizens concerning the constitutionality (i.e. lawfulness) of any Act of the Oireachtas, or any action of the Executive arising therefrom. In practice, this tends to mean that a litigant coming before the courts finds himself confronted not by an independent forum of adjudication but a star chamber acting as goalkeeper for Government and State.

This has resulted in a situation whereby it is now almost impossible for an ordinary citizen to succeed in a legal action against any legislative foray of the government. This, however, notably does not apply to applicants who issue claims under the immigration laws, who - this being the latest major cash cow of the legal profession - generally encounter a most accommodating response, especially in the higher courts.

For example, whereas a native Irish applicant is likely to be informed that the apparently absolute or near-absolute language whereby rights are expressed within the Constitution (words like 'inalienable,' 'imprescriptible,' and 'indefeasible') is not to be taken literally, migrants have on a number of occasions been told that, where they are concerned, such words mean exactly what it says in the dictionary.

This is merely yet another tendency to be observed in judicial patterns of behaviour suggesting that the modern judiciary sees its principle function as the upholding of governmental decisions and agendas. This follows in a long pattern of such behaviour, whereby any governmental impatience with residual provisions of the Constitution regarded as upholding or defending rights considered politically inconvenient are set upon by judges in the higher courts until they have been reduced to nothing.

This occurred in a series of moves initiating in 1995, whereby the place of Natural Law within the Constitution - whereas once regarded as essentially the bedrock of all fundamental rights - was diluted and downplayed by a series of facile but plausible judgements which no lawyer had the courage to challenge. The eventual outcome of this was that the 'inalienable' ('not subject to being taken away') rights of the unborn child (the 'alive though not yet born' human person, as per the Irish wording of Bunreacht na hÉireann: 'beo gan breith') were dismantled and finally carted away to the dumpster in April 2018, a month before the electorate was to vote on whether the article acknowledging this most fundamental right of all children (Article 40.3.3, otherwise 'The Eighth Amendment') should be removed or retained. In actual fact, the electorate, while possessing the right to remove the article, had no right to dissolve the rights it recognised, but the courts had already taken care of that little problem.

These actions of the courts are of a piece with other developments over the years which, because of the deference of the media, and the secrecy imposed in respect of key functions of the courts, have not yet been seen in the context of their underlying patterns, which indicate continuous judicial cooperation with the nefarious demands of the political sector. Going back to the late 1980s, for example, family law courts, which are protected from public scrutiny by the in camera rule, have been trampling upon family rights, destroying parent-child relationships and brutalising individuals who come before these courts in a manner that could be a national scandal were it to happen in open court to common recidivist criminals.

For decades, these episodes, leaking anecdotally from multiple court hearings and assorted informed sources, were deemed to be simply abuses of power by individual judges; now, however, it is clear that these tendencies were part of a systematic political agenda of undermining family authority and cohesion, in accordance with a long-term plan to undermine marriage, natural parenthood and the nuclear family. For the most part, these agendas are being pushed on Irish society from outside, though with the assistance of sinister and anti-democratic forces operating within the country.

In retrospect, too, it is clear that the political and judicial systems had forged alliances with radical feminist groups seeking to dispossess fathers of all parental rights in situations where they were unmarried or separated/divorced, while clamouring for the purpose of all this viciousness and arbitrariness became clear.

These agendas have latterly entered a new phase. The phenomenon of recent times, whereby dangerous paedophiles are allowed back on the streets with minimal supervision, even on conviction for the most egregious acts against children, may be seen as part of an agenda which seeks the ultimate decriminalisation and whitewashing of paedophilia, which is now the next major 'progressive' item on the list of the powers-that-shouldn't-be.

In all this we can observe the corruption of the long but crooked arm of the law as its alleged custodians seek to assist in the radical transformation of society in accordance with a deeply anti-human agenda.

The most egregious aspect of this, at the judicial end of this ever-expanding sewer, is that lawyers and judges who stand on the plinth of a bogus independence seek to deceive the public as to their true natures and intentions, usurping their positions within the legal system - and thereby the powers of the legal system itself - in order to override the democratic process and the will of the people.

Thus, the 'learned' personnel of the legal system ('officers of the Court'!) have contrived or permitted themselves to be reduced to a criminal cartel, which, albeit disguised in wigs and gowns, are no better than the brigands and gangsters whom daily they are called upon to prosecute, try, convict and sentence for - in the vast majority of cases - infinitely lesser crimes against the Irish People than those routinely committed by many of those indicting them.

Toddlers Sent For Transitioning

The paedophile regime are intent on destroying your children's innocence

AS amazing and impressive as children can be, all right thinking people recognise that they are not the same as adults. Childhood development is a slow process. It takes time for our brains to properly mature.

There is a reason why your average three-year-old girl will struggle to hop on one foot, draw a picture of herself, tie her shoelaces, catch a bounced ball, speak in sentences of more than five words or remember her last name. There is a reason why children do not generally commence primary school until the age of five.

Equally, because of the long process required for full cognitive development, a child's capacity to understand the implications of certain decisions is significantly limited. This is why, as a society, we have minimum age limits for various activities - to prevent our children from coming to undue harm. There is a reason why a 10-year-old cannot open a bank account. There is a reason why a 12-year-old cannot sign up to Facebook. There is a reason why a 15-year-old cannot consent to having sex. There is a reason why a 17-year-old cannot buy a scratch card or drink alcohol in a pub. This is called child safeguarding.

However, in the name of gender ideology, which has managed to infiltrate all areas of our society, we have seemingly thrown everything we know about both child development and child safeguarding out of the window.

Last month, it emerged that 382 children aged six and below were referred to the now defunct Gender Identity Development Service (GIDS) at the Tavistock clinic in London over the past decade. Even more shocking: over 70 of those children were aged just three or four.

Of course, three-year-olds have no real concept of terms like biological sex or gender identity. Nor are they capable of communicating confusions about their 'gender identity' to those around them. Most likely, these children simply showed an interest in toys or clothing that are more commonly associated with the opposite sex. And this led to them being carted off to the Tavistock.

I thought we had moved past the days of regressive gender

We live in a world where Satan has stopped hiding and the world pretends not to see him stereotyping. It appears not.

Nowadays, a young boy who likes the colour pink or a young girl who enjoys playing with Action Man may find themselves in a gender clinic, on the dubious basis that they are 'trapped in the wrong body'.

How these children came to be there may vary. Were they referred by a GP who believes that everyone has a unique gender identity? Did an activist charity scare the parents into believing their child might commit suicide if they do not transition?

Was it a case of Munchausen syndrome by proxy, with the child's parents seeking the positive attention and affirmation that comes with having a child who identifies as trans?

Even so-called social transitioning, when a child adopts a new name and pronouns or wears the clothes of the opposite sex, is not a neutral act. This was made clear back in 2022 in the interim Cass review, an independent British government review into child gender services which ultimately brought about the closure of the Tavistock. Research shows that if a child begins to live as if they are the opposite sex, their discomfort with their actual sex is more likely to persist.

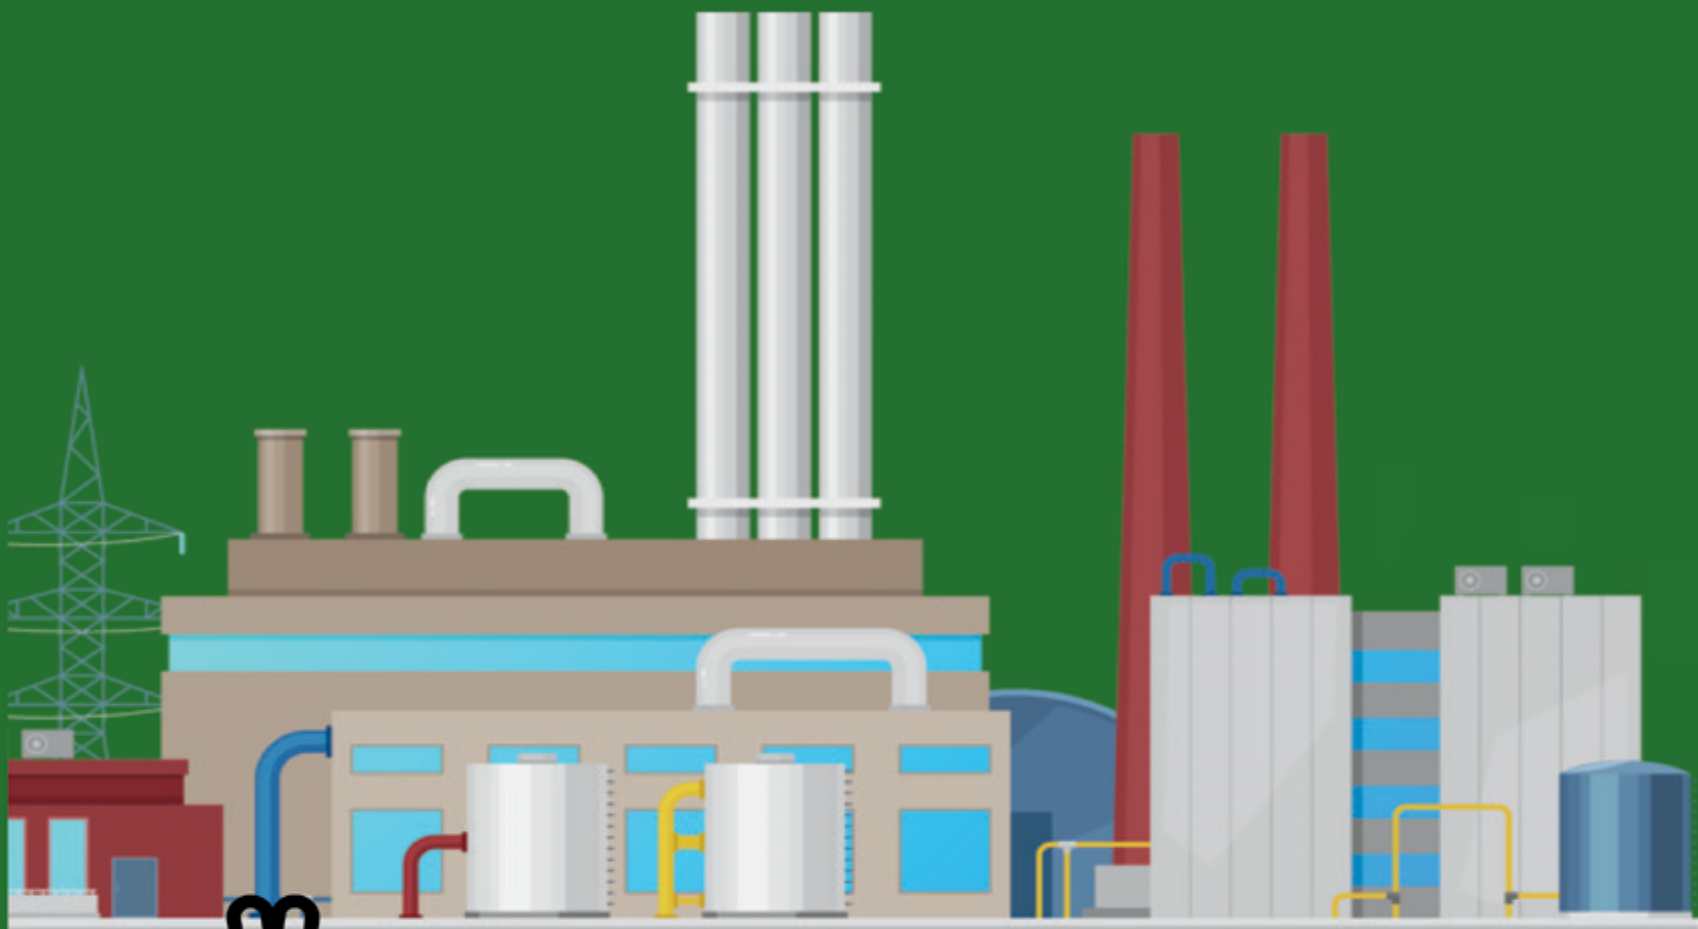

There has been increasing pressure from our institutions to 'affirm' clients, including young children, who are struggling with gender dysphoria and believed themselves to be trapped in the 'wrong body'.

In practice, this means accepting their claims without properly exploring their symptoms. In turn, this means encouraging children who wished to 'medically transition' to take irreversible puberty blockers, cross-sex hormones and to eventually progress to surgical intervention, if that is what they desired.

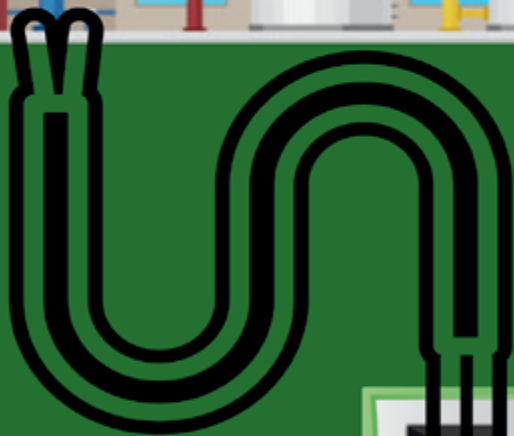

The 'trans' three-year-olds of today could well become the irreversibly damaged teenagers and young adults of tomorrow, their puberty blocked, fertility extinguished and perfectly healthy body parts chopped off. We have seen it all before. A gender clinic is no place for a three-year-old. We are witnessing the worst medical scandal for a generation. We must put a stop to it.

ECO HYPOCRISY

Was Guerin Paid To Silence Truth?

Five-year campaign of defamation and stalking of a journalist who is seeking justice for his sister

FOR five years, Fingal Councillor Jimmy Guerin has been harassing Gemma O'Doherty in a campaign of vicious defamation and slander that began the day after she made her views public about the murder of his sister Veronica Guerin on the Naas Road in June 1996. Like many journalists at the time, Gemma was not convinced that Veronica was murdered by the gangland cronies whose lurid antics she frequently revealed in The Sunday Independent in her role as crime reporter.

For many years, Gemma has written about the 1985 murder of Fr Niall Molloy. Her investigation, which revealed a sordid State cover-up involving gardai, judges, politicians and clergy, led to the 'reopening' of the case. This of course was nothing more than a token gesture designed to assuage the growing public concern about the case brought about by the shocking allegations uncovered by Gemma in her then newspaper The Irish Independent.

Like Gemma, Veronica Guerin worked on that case for several years in the run-up to her murder and both reporters paid a heavy price for doing so.

Veronica revealed that the Gardai had done a deal with 'The General' Martin Cahill to retrieve the stolen Molloy file from him. The Dublin criminal had broken into the offices of the DPP a year after the priest's murder and stole compromised files which he planned to use to embarrass the State. (For more on this, visit gemmaodoherty.com/Investigations). The night before she published details of this lurid deal between guards and criminals in October 1994, Veronica's home in north county Dublin was attacked by gunfire, narrowly missing her young son Cathal. The timing of this was no coincidence. Veronica was being warned to stay away from State, Garda and judicial corruption and focus on Dublin gangland.

Gemma too paid a heavy price for writing about white collar criminality and lost her 20-year career at the Irish Independent, where she was a senior reporter, because she refused to stop writing

The day I found €10m in my shed

THE INDEPENDENT

Police may have tipped off Guerin hitman

A police officer may have collaborated with the crime boss who ordered the killing of the Irish investigative journalist Veronica Guerin, say security sources in the Republic. It is understood detectives believe Guerin's movements were passed from a suspect to two men thought to have shot her On 26 June as she waited at traffic lights on the outskirts of the city. In turn, sources believe information may have come from a police officer in the pay of the crime boss.

about State corruption - which is the primary and most important function of a journalist. She was forced to take a defamation case against INM and Denis O'Brien and was successful in her action, allowing her to continue her work today.

In August 2018, when Gemma announced she was seeking a nomination for the Presidency, she was giving a talk about corruption in a hall in Waterford. Late in the evening, she answered a question about her thoughts on Veronica Guerin, and in less than a minute, explained her honestly held belief that Veronica was murdered with the assistance of agents working for the State/Gardai because she was getting too close to some of the State's dirtiest secrets.

There is nothing particularly original in Gemma's opinion on this matter. The London Independent in the days after Veronica's murder claimed she had been killed as part of a co-ordinated Garda plan. Gemma, having spent her entire career exposing criminality within the force and being threatened by them on countless occasions, did not need much convincing that this may well be the case but did her own independent research on the matter and established it to be a strong possibility.

At the time of her murder, Veronica is believed to have been working on a number of stories regarding judicial wrongdoing including claims that certain judges were on the take from criminals and that they were assisting in the protection of paedophiles.

She was also exposing collusion between Gardai and criminals in the drug trade. She was putting her nose into areas where she risked getting burned and upsetting the higher echelons of the political elite. When she was gunned down after a low-key court date for a speeding offence, it was widely believed in journalistic circles that she had ruffled too many feathers and had to be taken down. But very few reporters were willing or allowed to say that publicly at the time.

After Veronica died, her brother Jimmy took control of the narrative surrounding her death, protecting the Gardai at every turn and attacking anyone who ventured off the official story. The day after Gemma expressed her views on the subject in 2018, he went on the airwaves and into the council chamber in Fingal North Dublin and told the most outrageous and slanderous lies about her. Purely because Gemma had stated her honestly held opinion and was seeking justice for Veronica, he accused her of a stream of vile accusations calling her 'poisonous', 'hurtful' and 'capitalising on his sister's murder.' It was an astonishing outburst from a man who should want to know the truth about Veronica's death and indicated to Gemma that Jimmy Guerin's function was to act as a shield in protecting the State and Gardai from awkward reporters who might venture into unofficial waters. The day after her comments, RTE followed Gemma around demanding she withdraw them and apologise. Apologise for what? Expressing truths that needed to be told? Nobody wanted to know the extent of her evidence or why she had come to her conclusions. The whole operation was designed to intimidate Gemma in the hope of silencing her.

Less than a year later, the Guerin harassment began again in the form of a ludicrous and fabricated legal action against Gemma regarding her coverage of the crimes of Martin Guerin, a well-known paedophile in north Dublin and sibling of Jimmy and Veronica. Martin Guerin was tracked down by Interpol in 2014 in possession of hundreds of the most depraved child abuse images, some of them including babies as young as two. (Continued next page)

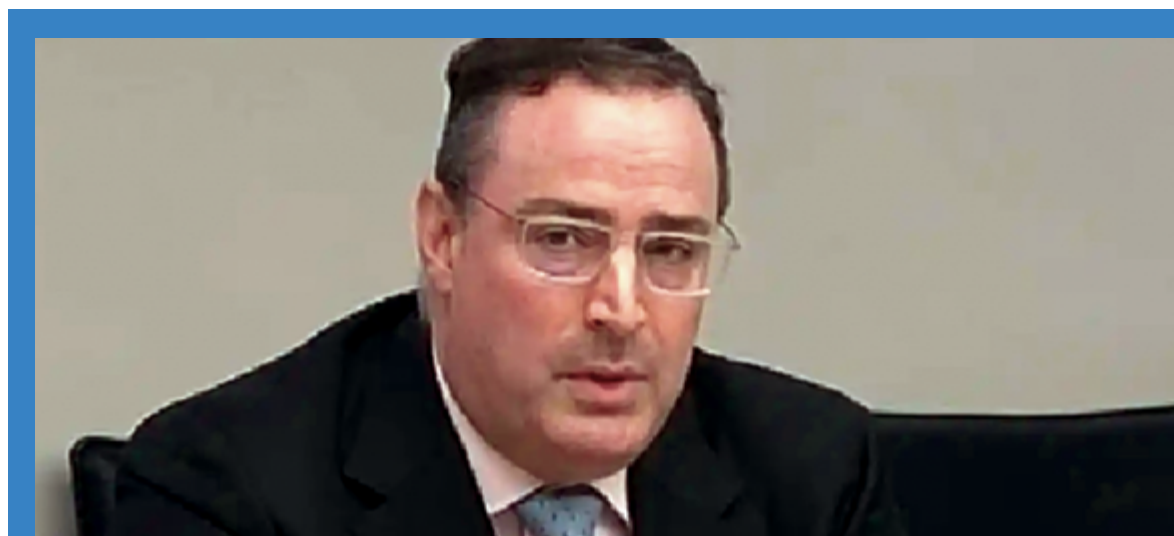

The Rancid Lies Of Ronan Lupton

THE Gardai sat on the information for almost five years, during which time Guerin could have been abusing children. When he was eventually brought before the courts in July 2019, there was public consternation when he was allowed to walk without spending one day in prison. There was widespread coverage across the media, with headlines splashing ‘Guerin Brother Convicted Of Child Abuse Imagery; Walks from court.’

Gemma was one of the many journalists who covered the story that day, as part of her long-established record exposing well-connected child predators who are treated leniently by judges and the Gardai. Her thesis had been proven once again.

Some months later, she read in an online paper, that Jimmy Guerin was taking a defamation action against her. She was perplexed as to what it might be about and even more so at the fact that his lawyers had gone to the media before sending any notification of the proceedings to her. She subsequently discovered that Councillor Guerin was bizarrely claiming that Gemma wanted her large audience to believe that he was a paedophile and not his brother Martin, when it was patently obvious whom Gemma was talking about and it was all over the media that day.

Thus began a long and fabricated character assassination on Gemma, her good name and her investigative journalism which has dragged on now for almost five years. The lawyers who have been gang-stalking Gemma in this harassment case are solicitor Kieran Kelly of Flynn O’Driscoll Solicitors and barrister Ronan Lupton who is a government advisor on matters relating to internet censorship. In 2020, at the height of Covid, they went into court and took part in perjury, fraud and contempt of court when they claimed that Gemma had evaded service of a summons. This was a malicious lie and a gross defamation. Gemma had no idea any summons was being served on her. In fact the particular summons had already been served on her then solicitors - but Lupton fabricated the allegations to blacken Gemma’s good name and ensure the case was tarnished in the eyes of any future

Barrister Ronan Lupton, the government’s internet tsar who wants to control free speech, has been engaged in a five-year campaign of legal gang-stalking and defamation against Gemma O’Doherty following her revelations about garda involvement in Veronica Guerin’s death.

How Veronica was threatened with gunfire at her home in 1994 the very day she wrote about Garda corruption and the theft of the Fr Niall Molloy file by The General Martin Cahill jury. Despite Gemma bringing this outrageous deceit to the attention of the court, it was ignored.

For several years, the phony case was dragged out ad nauseum in an effort to persecute Gemma and publish defamatory headlines about her. It was eventually heard in November 2023 in the High Court and Ronan Lupton SC once again told shameful and fantastical lies about Gemma stating in front of the jury that she had deliberately misled her large audience. At the time, she was the most retweeted journalist in Ireland with a following of 65,000 on Twitter. Lupton claimed that Gemma wanted her readers to believe Jimmy Guerin was the paedophile and not Martin. Never before has such a far-fetched and nefarious fraud been committed in an Irish courtroom against a journalist who has only ever served the truth, justice and the Irish people while taking on the most dangerous and corrupt elements in the State.

Lupton based this outrageous attack on Gemma’s integrity because she, like virtually every other journalist on the day Martin Guerin walked from court, described him as ‘Veronica Guerin’s brother.’ Not one independent witness was brought to court by Lupton claiming they believed Gemma was talking about Jimmy Guerin and not Martin.

Over several days, Lupton attempted to blatantly deceive the jury and Judge Tony O’Connor, and tried to suggest that Gemma knowingly brought a court case of this nature upon herself - despite her impeccable record throughout her career - and potentially risk bankrupting herself. The jury who at times seemed utterly baffled at Lupton’s vicious and hot-headed ramblings threw the case out, unable to reach a unanimous decision. Lupton lost. He failed to convince a jury that Gemma had defamed Jimmy Guerin in any way, shape or form but he was back in court a few days later seeking a retrial on the matter and a gagging order against Gemma from talking publicly about the matter:

This from the same lawyer who utterly breached court rules and prejudiced the case years in advance of it going to trial. Gemma was forced to spend a week in the High Court being abused by Lupton in a manner that can only be described as depraved as he tried to destroy her reputation as a multi award-winning journalist who has had murders reopened and paedophiles exposed and jailed.

Gemma observed the venom and contempt he held for her, all of which was permitted by the trial judge Tony O’Connor who should have thrown the case the case out on Day 1 on the grounds that it was malicious, vexatious, a breach of numerous conventions on journalistic freedom and clearly driven by political motives. It is clear that there are bigger agents at play in the efforts to silence her and The Irish Light. How a local councillor from North Dublin can fund a case of this magnitude over five years is alarming. There is the unresolved matter of the ‘counterfeit’ €10 million Jimmy Guerin found in his shed around the period his brother Martin was exposed in 2014. Councillor Guerin alleges a tenant of his was responsible for printing it but when you delve into the circumstances of that case, you are left with more questions than answers. The tenant was convicted of printing €3.3 million but was allowed to walk from court by the same judge who let Martin Guerin walk - Garda Martin Nolan. What happened to the other €6.7m?

Guerin’s tenant was described in court as having had a ‘daft idea’ when he decided to print money and did not have to serve any prison time. The printing of money is a serious offence and comes with a custodial sentence but where Jimmy Guerin’s friends are concerned favours seems to be available, as they were for his brother Martin who is still on the loose in north Dublin. The investigation into the cash find was also a massive Garda cover-up.

Since Veronica’s murder, Jimmy Guerin has bullied any journalist who puts their head above the parapet and suggests there may have been State involvement. Why does he want to shut down debate about his own sister’s death? Does he not want justice for her? Why does he attack and try to silence those who try to bring her real killers to justice? This is not a normal reaction from a family member.

Either way, Gemma will not be silenced in her work and will continue to expose the facts about Veronica’s death, Martin Guerin and his paedophile crimes and the campaign of stalking carried out against her by Councillor Jimmy Guerin.

Guerin and his lawyers who are trying to extort money from her will never receive one cent from her no matter how many judges are in on this futile mission to take her down. All they are doing is drawing more attention to her journalistic work and showing themselves up as vindictive madmen. On January 19th, they go back to court to try to have Gemma jailed for speaking about the case. Feel free to attend. Obviously the State is driving this charade which will ultimately. In their desperation to silence Gemma, they have illustrated that this newspaper is a vehicle of truth and bringing about massive change in Ireland. The establishment is absolutely terrified of it and rightly so.

All vaccines are inherently

by SERENA WYLDE

SUPPORTERS of vaccination argue that vaccines prevent disease, and cite as evidence a disingenuous correlation between vaccination and the disappearance of diseases such as smallpox, diphtheria, cholera, typhoid, poliomyelitis, tuberculosis and tetanus.

Epidemiological studies repeatedly show that these diseases were already dying out as general sewage networks and treatment stations were built, universal domestic running water and flushing lavatories installed, slums demolished and nutrition improved.

An exhaustive study by CDC (Center for Disease Control and Prevention in the U.S.) and John Hopkins' scientists in 2000, published in Pediatrics, concluded: "Vaccination does not account for the impressive declines in [infectious disease] mortality seen in the first half of the [20th] century... nearly 90 percent of which occurred before 1940 when few antibiotics or vaccines were available."

By the 1960s there was not an epidemic to be found, but the vaccine industry was not to be deterred. It set its sights on the childhood illnesses of measles, mumps and rubella, despite the fact mortality from measles had naturally declined by 95 percent, and a school of physicians believe these illnesses actually serve to help build and strengthen a child's immune system.

Dr. Tom Cowan in his book, The Contagion Myth, writes: "Measles is a process of detoxification, transformation and growth. If thwarted, particularly by an injection that clearly alters our immune response, then only worse things can happen. This is clearly revealed by the many studies showing that children who go through typical childhood illnesses such as measles have fewer chronic diseases throughout the course of their lives."

Vaccine theory is predicated on the assumption that by injecting a trace amount of an attenuated pathogen (an antigen) into the human body, the immune system responds by producing antibodies specific to that pathogen, which will protect the recipient against infection.

However, the presence of antibodies in the bloodstream does not guarantee immunity. These are simply part of the immune system's response to an outside attack, infection or wound, including that inflicted by a needle. Many vaccinated individuals go on to develop the very illness they are supposed to be protected against, and people who die from infection have antibodies in their system.

The scientific body which opposes vaccination believes all vaccines damage the immune system, and therefore mass vaccination is one of the greatest contributors to disease.

They explain that injecting noxious substances directly into the bloodstream is a form of assault, as it immobilises a part of the immune system whilst it temporarily diverts all resources to this artificial stimulation. In the case of babies and children, whose immune systems are just starting to develop, it is reckless because it can permanently derail the formation of a healthy immune system. Multiple vaccinations cripple several parts of the immune system at the same time and do nothing to restore its balance. Each challenge by vaccination has the potential to deregulate the immune system, and we have no idea what happens when multiple antigens are injected simultaneously, which is increasingly the trend.

The consequences, they believe, are weakened immune systems, far less able to fend off disease, borne out by the exponential rise in immunological and neurological disorders, cancers, asthma, allergies, juvenile diabetes and chronic infections, in direct line with ever-expanding mass vaccination programmes.

After Merck developed its chickenpox vaccine in 1995, it was suddenly declared a life-threatening illness. By vaccinating and thereby preventing children from developing natural immunity to chickenpox, we now have a new epidemic of adult shingles, for which the medical Ponzi scheme has another vaccine.

There are three separate and potentially harmful aspects to vaccination. First, as artificially stimulating one part of the immune system to abnormally produce antibodies inhibits the other part of the system, this throws the entire immunological response out of gear. Second, vaccines are laden with adjuvants such as chemicals, metals, and drugs which act as preservatives and turbo-chargers to enhance their performance, some of which are neurotoxins. In infants, the blood-brain barrier, which keeps harmful substances from reaching the brain, is not developed as it is in adults, so they are vulnerable to neurological damage from these ingredients.

Thirdly, they contain contaminants. The former pharmaceutical R&D executive Sasha Latypova explains how traditional vaccines are always contaminated with plant and animal proteins which hyper-sensitise the body, especially in children, causing allergies. And these are all injected directly into the bloodstream.

The biochemist Judy Mikovits

PhD writes in her book, Plague of Corruption: "We've been stimulating the immune system of individuals for a century with virtually no monitoring of how their immune system is responding. Each intervention increases the likelihood of an adverse event. Increase the number of interventions/vaccines, and you dramatically raise the likelihood of adverse reactions. Add to that complexity the fact that vaccines contain multiple ingredients, and you realise what a shaky foundation upon which we've built our current medical system."

Vaccines are the only pharmaceutical or medical product that the FDA (Food and Drug Administration in the U.S.) does not require to be rigorously safety tested. The gold standard for safety testing new pharmaceuticals is randomised control trials (RCTs).

Clinical trial participants are divided at random into two groups of similar size where one group takes the product being tested whilst the other, known as the control arm, takes an inert placebo (saline solution) in order to compare the results at the end of the trial period.

In the case of vaccines, either there is no control arm, or the placebo vials contain the same mix of toxic ingredients that go into the vaccine itself, minus the attenuated virus, or something else, as there is no requirement to disclose the ingredients of placebos.

It is important to remember the immune system is a multi-layered, finely balanced, complex system, much of which remains a mystery.

When we encounter pathogens through the normal channels of the nose, throat, skin and the saliva, the body has various lines of defence through which the attacker must travel to be effectively dealt with. Each filter screens the pathogen and mobilises its forces against it. A pathogen must provoke the complete inflammatory and immune response for the body to acquire natural, real and lasting immunity to a particular germ. Attempting to bypass this sophisticated system is not only ineffective but fraught with risk.

Biochemist Dr Judy Mikovits PhD writes: "We are finding that natural exposure, such as having measles, not only provides lifelong immunity, but also tunes the system to make it less likely you'll have certain cancers when you're older."

ntly unsafe - here's why

As 'vaccine-mania' surged through the 1970s and 80s, so did the lawsuits filed against manufacturers for injuries and deaths caused by them.

A major culprit was the DTaP vaccine (diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus) as studies linked it to sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), seizures and more than a dozen neurological and immunological disorders. The vaccine contained thimerosal, which is almost 50 percent mercury, and in infants can pass through the blood-brain barrier.

Several laboratories were brought close to bankruptcy as insurers withdrew their indemnity cover.

This led Congress in 1986 to pass the National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act which established a special no-blame 'Vaccine Court' to shield vaccine makers from liability, which is funded through a levy on every vaccine dose sold.

The terms of reference of the Vaccine Court are that it only allows parents of vaccine-injured children to bring claims under a specific set of court rules, which are very different from prove their claim, given the onus to establish a causal link between the vaccine and the injury, illness or death of their child lies squarely on their shoulders.

Despite these hurdles, the court has paid out over four billion dollars in compensation to thousands of parents since its inception in 1988. That year, the U.S. childhood immunisation schedule was expanded, and again in 1991. Cases of autism soared. Notwithstanding, the list continues to bloat.

Thimerosal was ultimately banned from use in paediatric vaccines in the early 2000s.

No vaccine has attracted more litigation than the MMR, and thousands of cases of 'regressive autism' were filed in the early 1990s. Regressive autism is when a child that is meeting its normal developmental milestones develops a fever post vaccination and suddenly regresses.

By 2002, there were around 5,000 autism-related cases awaiting adjudication in the U.S.

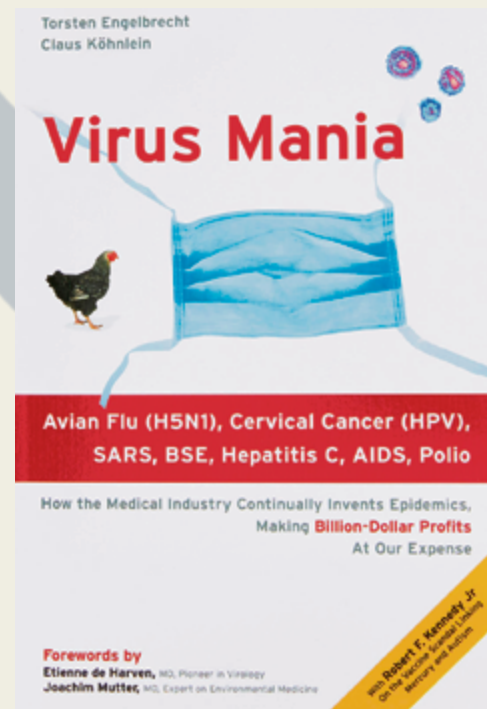

In 2006, the Vaccine Court decided to categorise the cases and select a handful as test cases, where evidence of causation could be presented based on three separate hypotheses:

1. That a combination of the MMR vaccine and thimerosal caused autism.
2. That thimerosal alone caused autism.
3. That the MMR vaccine itself caused autism.

The hearings known as the 'Omnibus Autism Proceedings' began in 2007.

Paediatric neurologist Dr Andrew Zimmerman acted for Health & Human Services (HHS) as its primary autism expert. He issued a written opinion in the first test case, Cedillo v. HHS (Health and Human Services), that he did not believe the vaccine had contributed to Michelle Cedillo's autism. This opinion was then applied to other cases.

However, it recently came to light in 2019, through a sworn affidavit issued by Dr Zimmerman, that whilst attending proceedings on June 15, 2007, he had taken the DoJ's lead attorney, Vincent Matanoski, aside to clarify that his written expert opinion in the Cedillo case was case-specific, and not intended to be a blanket statement for all the cases, and that in some children, specifically those with mitochondria dysfunction, vaccination could cause autism.

Dr Zimmerman had been due to testify in the next test case, Hazlehurst v. HHS, on Monday, June 18 but, according to his sworn affidavit, shortly after he clarified his opinions to the DoJ attorneys, he was informed that he would no longer be needed as an expert witness on behalf of HHS.

A former senior vaccine-safety scientist at the CDC, Dr William Thompson told a member of Congress, Bill Posey, under sworn deposition that he had been strong-armed into destroying data showing a link between vaccines and autism, and ordered by CDC bigwigs to publish a fraudulent study dismissing the link. Dr Thompson told Robert F Kennedy Jr. (RFK Jr.) he feels a profound sense of shame.

It was estimated in 2007 that the lifetime care cost for a child with autism was around three million dollars. It was also estimated that the subset of children with vaccine-induced autism based on mitochondrial dysfunction was between 25 and 40 per cent.

RFK Jr. tells us that in his youth, one child in 10,000 had autism in the U.S. In 1986, it was around one in 2,500, and today it is one in 36.

A peer-reviewed study published on July 20 in Cureus Journal of Medical Science found that developed nations requiring the most neonatal vaccine doses have the worst childhood mortality rates. Lead author Neil Miller has been researching the topic since the early 2000s.

We entrust our health, well-being and lives to others at our peril. The insatiable quest for quick-fixes through the myth of chemical 'preventive' medicine will damage the future of our biological integrity.

As Henry Lindlahr MD (1862-1924) said: "Never was humanity cursed by a blacker superstition than that disease can be cured and health maintained by the absorption of virulent poisons." those which prevail in normal civil liability actions, and their lawyers have to argue against the might of the Department of Justice attorneys (DoJ).

The odds are stacked heavily against parents as the vaccine-makers are allowed to keep their formulations and methods secret even while the lawsuit is being contested. In other words, there is no normal discovery process whereby the pharmaceutical companies are required to hand over their documents. This considerably hampers the plaintiff's ability to

The War On The Car

It's time to resist Orwellian State interference on the roads before it's too late

IF Net Zero is about control, then car makers are fully on board with legislators. Reducing emissions through the use of technology, such as sophisticated engine management systems, is certainly part of their remit. However, controlling the way drivers make decisions should be regarded as a step too far.

The General Safety Regulation applies to cars made to be sold in the EU from 2022, and ordains that they now come with many extra exciting features, a speed limiter being just one of them. Others include automated emergency braking, electronic data recorders and all-round cameras. The important point is that while these systems are fitted, or capable of being fitted, to all brand new cars from 2022, there is no obligation to activate or use them. The trouble may occur with an automatic speed limiter which prevents exceeding a legal limit.

However, an inability to accelerate and exceed the speed limit in an emergency could be a problem. Especially if the driver is unaware that 'hard-acceleration' may get them out of trouble.

These regulations are not just about speed devices. Manufacturers will also need to equip their vehicles with a 'driver drowsiness and attention loss warning' system, a souped-up version of the existing lane-departure warning features, which beep and shake the steering wheel at you. Drivers will soon be looking for a way to permanently turn them off, but this is difficult, as so many are default settings when the vehicle is started. Distinguishing between the irritating and the dangerous is sometimes tricky. Emergency Brake Assist is supposed to know better when to slam the anchors on than the driver. Whereas beeping at you because something is ajar or left on is something many can just about cope with.

Rather more controversial is the 'event data recorder' effectively a black box. In theory, it is there to log all the relevant circumstances

2024 will be the year when motorists wake up to the electric car scam and take back control on the roads of an accident. It is sold to motorists as making their lives simpler, and maybe the insurance cheaper. However, this has already been called out by the 'Ligue de Défense des Conducteurs', a French pro-car action group, who have said that once these devices are installed, the authorities can check driver data in real time, or retrospectively and quite possibly punish them for motoring offences.

The EU clearly can't stop interfering with the way cars are made, operated and used.

There has been little physical resistance to Net Zero. Ordinary people, who will be most affected by the policy, usually continue going about their daily routine to earn a living and look after their families. Nevertheless, it is possible to fight back in this war against the motorist, and the French have shown us the way, donning their high visibility jackets to become the Gilets Jaunes ('Yellow Vests'). Their origins were rooted in principle and rebellion. It all began with a proposed fuel tax rise, again justified by the decarbonisation agenda. The revenue was apparently to be used to finance renewable-energy projects and discourage the use of diesel and petrol cars. Incredibly, the price of diesel had already risen by 23 per cent in the space of a year. Firstly, the price of crude oil rose in October 2018 to just over €80 a barrel, with the cost quickly passed on to consumers. Fuel tax also went up in 2018: diesel by 7.60 cents and petrol by 3.90 cents per litre. Then there was the dreaded Carbon Tax. These measures all hit hard at rural dwellers, who rely heavily on their cars. They also hated the cut in the speed limit on rural roads from 90 km/h to 80 km/h. Many believed the policy was just a way to make money from speeding tickets. No wonder then that the Gilets Jaunes targeted the country's speed cameras, taping them up, burning them, and knocking them over. As many as 60% may have been 'retired' in this way. This was the French working class versus their intellectual elite.

More recently, the British caught on. After all the logical arguments against London's ULEZ (Ultra Low Emission Zones) failed and the scheme was implemented, the direct actions of the so-called 'Blade Runners', a group who took to cutting the cables on ANPR (Automatic number plate recognition) cameras, seemed to be more effective.

The loony 'green' regime in Ireland is intent on bringing our cars to a snail's pace with new restrictions in place all over the country which must be resisted and ignored. It is well and truly proven that reducing speed limits to dangerously slow levels does not impact in any way on emissions - if anything it increases them - and has no impact on collisions. This is all about control over where you go, what you do and your freedom to travel whenever you want. These absurd rules must be broken at every turn.

‘Eco’ Heat Pumps Nightmare

Think twice before buying a new build with ‘eco’ gimmicks that will make life a misery

YOUNG Irish couples foolish enough to buy in this drastically overheated property market are falling for the green delusion and purchasing ‘low energy’ new builds. Then they discover these properties are anything but low energy and involve very high costs and stress.

Sadly many of them, in their 30s and 40s have been heavily indoctrinated by the climate scam and think they are doing the weather a favour by living in a house without an open fire. Anyone who buys a home in Ireland without a chimney really does deserve to freeze. And this is what will happen to them soon when they realise the government spiel they were sold about saving the planet was nothing more than a pile of horse manure.

Heat pumps are proving disastrous for homeowners who are naïve enough to think the electricity required to make them function does not come from gas, coal or oil. A secondary school in the UK has been told to remove its pumps after residents complained the system is so loud they are unable to open windows or go outside without being disturbed. Residents who live nearby said the electrical devices used to heat classrooms are a 24-hour noise nuisance. The pumps which work by absorbing heat from the air are creating such noise pollution they are unable to go into their gardens without disturbance. They also claimed they were assured the pumps would be switched off on bank holidays and during the school holidays, but that they were left running.

Many owners of heat pumps have complained that they are incapable of producing high temperatures and hot water on very cold days. Buyer beware when it comes to everything ‘eco’!

MORE CLIMATE FRAUD

Just about all of the media have been peddling the claim that 2023 was the ‘Hottest for 125,000 years’, which suggests a very concerted effort by the climate establishment to brainwash the masses. The claim is self evident and baseless nonsense for a number of good reasons: There is no such thing as “a global average temperature.” Even now we have very sparse coverage of temperature measurements. Prior to satellites, we had virtually no data outside of the US, Europe and a few other built up areas. The temperature record we do have is thoroughly corrupted by UHI (Urban Heat Island) and only dates back to the late 19th century. Natural variations, including volcanic activity can easily cause temperature swings of a degree Celsius from year to year, and decade to decade. But historical proxies don’t have the fine resolution to pick these up, they merely give an idea of average temperatures over decades and even centuries. Consequently you cannot compare one year now with the general climate of, say, 2000 years ago.

But forget about all of these theoretical objections, because the climatic evidence we do have is overwhelming, and it tells us that the climate has been much warmer than now for most of the last 10000 years, since the end of the ice age. Temperatures in Greenland have been much higher than now for most of the last 8000 years. Many other studies confirm that the temperature trends found in Greenland ice cores also exist elsewhere around the Arctic.

A wide selection of proxies in the Canadian Arctic and Greenland identify a long running decline in temperatures over the last 3000 years. The ice sheet has also grown since that time. Summer temperatures were between 2.5 and 7.0C warmer 7000 years ago in northern Russia: Temperatures in the Baltic were between 1.0 and 3.5C higher 4500 years ago.

And it is equally apparent that this warmer climate was worldwide. Even where there are no proxies, there is still evidence in places like the Sahara, where the lush climate there a few thousands of years ago is indicative of an expansion of the Tropics resulting from a warmer world. Large scale retreats and advances of glaciers don’t happen as a result of a few years of weather. Neither do advances of tree lines hundreds of feet up mountainsides. The evidence from these events and the likes of ice cores is irrefutable and clearcut. Throughout, the overall climate was still warmer than the current one. Anybody who claims that last year was the hottest for 125,000 years is a fraud.

Wind farms killing eagles

A French court has ordered the dismantling of a wind farm due to the threat it poses to local ecology including golden eagles in the area.

In a ruling published in December 2023, the Nîmes appeal court upheld a previous decision that demanded the immediate “demolition of all the wind turbines” and restoration of the site within 15 months.

Daily fines of €3,000 are to be paid by developer Energies Renouvelables du Languedoc-Valeco, a subsidiary of German energy company EnBW, if it does not comply with the demolition order.

The onshore wind farm was commissioned in 2016 and is located near the southern town of Lunas in Languedoc, France. It has been the subject of a series of legal proceedings brought by residents and conservation groups, with the latter arguing that it was directly harmful to wildlife in the area, including golden eagles.

French media reported that the body of a golden eagle deemed to have been killed by a wind turbine blade was found at the wind farm last year. The developer was originally ordered to dismantle the wind farm by a court in Montpellier in 2021 but won an appeal against the ruling. However, this was overturned by the French Court of Cassation earlier this year, a decision that was then upheld by the appeal court in Nîmes on 7 December. A study had found that the wind farm had led to the deaths of more than 1,000 birds and bats.

An earlier judgement also pointed out that the impact assessment submitted in 2013 during the development process for the wind farm was “insufficient”, which resulted in its construction in an area where golden eagles were nesting.

It’s amazing what can be achieved when neighbours come together to fight these environmental atrocities in our midst. Every single parish in Ireland should be battling to have them removed. They are the greatest crime ever committed against our precious rural landscape.

Mass Stabbings Usually Staged

Crisis actors rolled out to usher in hate laws and police state

IT was only a matter of time before the regime that runs Ireland put on a staged mass stabbing event here, followed by fake 'far right' riots. We warned the Gardai countless times in advance that they did not have the competence to pull this well-known Communist tactic off effectively but they went ahead with the charade regardless. Ireland has to be top of the class when it comes to pleasing its puppetmasters.

Needless to say it was destined to go wrong. Two months on from the Parnell Staged Riots, only the most dumbed-down sheep believe there was anything remotely factual about what transpired on November 24th in Dublin. Anything that has emerged since in relation to the affair from the lying media or Gardai is a sign of desperation and even if they rolled out the four alleged victims now, with names, faces, injuries, interviews, the lot, the whole incident is not worthy of being given as much credibility as the fake fire at the Freemason lodge a couple of years back.

It was from the very start an obvious 'Problem, Reaction, Solution' event designed to justify in the public mind the need for tighter restrictions on our freedom and speech and more illegal police powers.

Everybody knows there is no 'far right' operating in Ireland except MI5 operatives and rogue gardai who set fire to migrant centres and politicians' cars every few months to give an impression that there is. In order to bring in the final phase of their UN One World Police State by 2030, the regime have to keep planting in the minds of the docile population that there is a real threat out there and they have to take action to do something about it.

So in order to create the pretence of this 'far right' mob and their very real danger to society, an event inciting their provocation was required.

From the outset, there were problems with the story of the crazed Algerian who had gone on a stabbing spree outside the inner city school taking a knife to three children and their carer. The man was allegedly in the vicinity of the school for several hours before the mini massacre took place but nobody thought to act upon his presence and enquire why he was hanging around outside the school. That is simply not believable. Even more incredulous are the official media photographs of the street on Parnell Square where the event is said to have taken place. Obviously four stab victims being attacked within close proximity to each other would produce a lot of blood, but not a drop was seen on either the pavement or the steps of the Georgian houses where they were allegedly treated.

The photograph above which was one of the very few of the 'scene' released by the regime reveals countless errors in the official narrative which give the game away and prompt serious questions as to whether it happened at all. The lack of blood anywhere is an obvious problem. The placing in the forefront of the picture a Helen McEntee lookalike in a tie-dye dress may have been used to give an impression of blood splatters - it is certainly a very unusual dress to be wearing on a freezing November day. It's unusual too that the 'ambulance men' are in their summer uniforms wearing short-sleeve shirts. As for the pair in the window on the left making freemasonic symbols, who knows what they were up to?

It is astonishing too how every image and video taken on the day shows no victims - just crowds of emergency staff standing around them almost as if to hide them at all times. Was this because there was nothing to show? This type of shielding operation is common in staged government mass injury events. Dozens of ambulance personnel and police surround the scene who in turn are surrounded by emergency vehicles, fire brigades and police cars to completely block from public view an event which is of obvious public importance. The Dublin incident was very revealing in this regard. Even though there were hundreds of people around that part of town on the day and obviously dozens took out their phones to record what was going on, not one of them was able to clearly produce one shot of any blood or any injured victim. The official witnesses that were produced by the media in the days that followed were laughable. Their testimonies ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous. Siobhan Kearney, who happened upon the event as she was attending the Stardust Inquest across the road in The Rotunda Hospital, summed up the fiasco when she described it as a 'hubbabaluvva' - a new Dublin expression which has since been adopted to describe all farce events carried out by the Gardai to influence and mislead the Irish people. Her sidekick Anto Boyle - another joker who just happened to be at the scene spreading Chinese whispers that a mass stabbing of little children had taken place produced not a shred of real evidence to illustrate what he had actually seen, and once again, his video footage is proof of nothing.

When 'Anto' was challenged about this, he started to mess up his lines and mix up his stories. As for Mr Brazil - hero of the day - who attacked the stabber with his motorbike helmet (no footage however) - numerous tales were produced around his chivalrous antics which were in the realm of Alice In Wonderland. But he got his big pay-off (why?) and headed back to Brazil to the family he had abandoned when he migrated to Dublin. (Continued p21)

Dublin Riots Were Faked

They create the problem in order to provide the solution: more State control

IN the immediate aftermath of the bloodless stabbing 'massacre', an organised gang of thugs appeared out of nowhere in the streets around Parnell. Conveniently placed cardboard boxes with flames rising out of them appeared beside equally conveniently placed Garda cars whose doors just happened to be wide open - just another coincidence. The gang - acting as if immune from prosecution in full sight of video cameras - proceeded to set the Garda cars on fire and then move onto Luas trains and buses which again appeared like stage props on a movie set, and imploded with such precision it's almost as if they had been laden with explosives. They probably were.

It was as if the orchestrators of the riot were operating on a shift because, by the early hours of the morning, they had all gone home. Not much commitment from what the State calls a 'far right' movement which is more of a threat than even the IRA. Ludicrous but revealing all the same. The maniacs who blew up British landmarks in the name of so-called Irish freedom were exactly the same people involved in the staged Dublin riots: MI5 agents working hand in glove with the Irish State to bring about the next stage of lockdowns and restrictions on privacy and speech.

In the same way there were no terrorists in the ranks of Irish nationalism willing to go to jail for life by murdering of innocents and thereby destroying the good name of their cause (they were all agents of the British crown including obviously the current bunch who call themselves Sinn Fein), there are no 'far right' dissidents in Ireland who want to smash shop windows and set Garda cars on fire. What would be in it for them only jail and public contempt for their actions? In the same way 'suicide bombers' in the Middle East are nothing more than fictional terrorists designed by Israeli intelligence services to justify more wars and US dollars into its coffers.

Back to the Parnell riots. As the Gardai always do when they stage 'far right' events, they ruined the charade by getting caught smashing shop windows to assist their hired masked looters who always feature in these acts of theatre. Many concluded that the officers must have been out of their minds on cocaine or other illegal substances. Who knows? But they made a mess of the whole pantomime. Ireland became an international embarrassment for the guts of a week before most people with an average IQ started to see the whole operation was choreographed to give Irish patriotism a bad name and introduce unprecedented surveillance laws on the Irish people while giving the Gardai more freedom to behave like the bullies and thugs they have become. In the coming year, prepare for more of these staged events in Ireland - regular 'arson' attacks on migrant centres, 'far right' graffiti, media reports of 'racial attacks' on migrants and assaults on all the tedious crybaby groups especially the LGBTPs but console yourself in the knowledge that these events are nothing more than the actions of a desperate dictatorship in its final days trying to play with the minds of the Irish people.

From Sandy Hook to the World Trade Centre, the Manchester Arena Bombing and the London terror attacks, there is now irrefutable proof that these events were fabricated by State actors to justify foreign wars and the loss of freedom as we know it in the West, the place where up to now it has been most sacred and respected. Just look at what the controlled demolition of the Twin Towers achieved for the Jewish-run globalist cabal? (See panel) And all they used was CGI (computer-generated images) of planes to fool the masses and give away their right to privacy. Once you start to understand the masterplan they use to keep you under their control, you will see it everywhere - in their fake scandemics, the climate scam and all of the other agendas they force upon us. Once they discover we are on to them, they lose their power and will no longer be able to carry out their insane hoaxes for much longer because only fools will believe them.

Same-sex marriage serves one purpose only: to ridicule, obscure and annihilate Christ's relationship with his Bride, the Catholic Church

THE message given is: what the Catholic Church has condemned in the past as being mortally sinful, now they're encouraging priests to bless those relationships.'

Father Gerald Murray, a priest and canonist of the Archdiocese of New York, has denounced the newest document of the Vatican, Fiducia Supplicans, for allowing priests to bless the mortal sins of sodomy and adultery. He has been joined by thousands of priests and bishops all over the world in condemning and rejecting Rome's latest bizarre instruction.

Asked whether the proposed 'blessing' of same-sex couples could truly be called a development of the Church's teaching on marriage and blessings, the priest emphatically rejected this, saying the novel practice is a contradiction of the Church's perennial teachings on the matter.

"No, that's a misuse of the word development," he said. "It's accurate to call it innovative because it's an innovation, meaning it's something new that hasn't happened before. And the reason it hasn't happened before is it's a contradiction of the Church's teaching."

Murray explained that, as St. John-Henry Newman, true development requires continuity, not corruption. "A thing becomes more fully itself as an acorn becomes a tree over time with nourishment and sunlight

Likewise, the understanding of the Church – for instance on the papacy, the Holy Eucharist, the other sacraments—it develops over time, because... until someone asks a question an answer's basically implicit, not explicit. So to make explicit what a thing is, is not to change its nature or to corrupt it." Murray denounced the much-touted attempt to distinguish between liturgical and non-liturgical blessings as nothing less than casuistry seeking to endorse sodomy and adultery.

"The major problem with this document is its casuistry. Casuistry is basically a deceptive and unfair use of Revelation to try and arrive at a predetermined conclusion. And this basically says there's a difference between a liturgical blessing and a non-liturgical blessing. This is ridiculous. Every blessing in the Church comes from the fact that God blessed us in Jesus Christ, and we primarily, in the Church, as a hierarchical organization, bring those blessings through public ministries. So to say there's something like an unofficial blessing – they compare it to a parent blessing his children, you know, at the dinner table; wait a minute, this has nothing to do with a mum and a dad saying, 'I bless you Tommy, I bless you Sally' – this is a relationship."

"When two people come forward and say, we just got married at City Hall, two men, and we'd like to bless our relationship, well, what's the relationship? It's a promise to commit immoral acts. Same with people in the second adulterous marriage: we're going to commit adultery even though our former wife or husband, you know, is still living in the same town."

"So it's a dodge to say we bless people without asking questions. Therefore, we shouldn't ask questions the next time two people who are involved in an incestuous relationship come in and say, 'Father, would you bless us? You know, we're brother and sister but we think sex is beyond the restrictions that used to be.' Is a priest supposed to say, well, if you feel it's important maybe I should bless you? Of course not!

Everybody would know that's endorsing incest."

"This really for me is one of the most shocking things about this, all of this casuistic reasoning. This is casuistry on the very people who condemn true moral reasoning as being casuistry. So for me the scandal here is that the Pope, and all those who agree with him – they are telling people who are engaging in sodomy and adultery, no problem, the Church agrees that your behavior, while not up to perfection, is something that we can bless. This is unreal.

Meanwhile, a former homosexual has slammed Pope Francis and says he is inviting humanity to join Satan in mocking Christ and His Church. Catholic convert Doug Mainwaring says: "It was just a little over a dozen years ago that Argentine Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio said: Let's not be naive, we're not talking about a simple political battle. It's a destructive pretension against the plan of God. We are talking about a machination of the Father of Lies that seeks to confuse and deceive the children of God.

At the 2014 Colloquium on The Complementarity of Man and Woman, hosted by the Vatican, Bergoglio, by then known as Pope Francis, again spoke a timeless truth

"To reflect upon 'complementarity' is nothing less than to ponder the dynamic harmonies at the heart of all Creation."

His words seemed to be in harmony not only with the totality of Scripture and the Magisterium of the Church but also with those of Fatima visionary, Sister Lucia:

A time will come when the decisive battle between the kingdom of Christ and Satan will be over marriage and the family.

Yet with the publication of Fiducia Supplicans by the Congregation (now Dicastery) for the Doctrine of the Faith, the Pope seems to have opened the door for priests to provide blessings for homosexual couples, an intermediate step that will undoubtedly lead to same-sex “marriages” treated as a sacrament.

The evolution of Pope Francis’ messaging charts a descent into darkness, dangerously toying with lies from the father of lies, exposing the Church and countless individuals to grave harm. We are now engaged in an epic spiritual conflict like never before in our lifetimes. The history of the Western World over the last several decades is a compendium of Satan’s intentions and aggressive tactics: easy divorce, cohabitation, premarital sex, extramarital sex, recreational sex, homosexuality, bisexuality, polygyny, polyandry, pansexuality, gender dysphoria in all its manifestations, non-marital childbearing, contraception, abortion, pedophilia, pederasty, pornography, surrogacy, and more.

Beginning in the middle of the last century, the world moved toward rejecting marriage altogether.

Now the battle has escalated beyond all this to what used to be easy-to-answer questions: What is man? What is woman? What is marriage? What is family? What are children, boys, and girls? Foundational truths, once unquestioned and held firmly by all, are crumbling before our eyes. By perverting the meanings of marriage, family, and sexuality, potential for understanding the Gospel is being eviscerated.

Marriage can’t be “redefined” because it is one thing and one thing only: The union of a man and a woman as a great foreshadowing of Christ and his Bride, the Church.

To allow this massive global effort to un-define both marriage and human sexuality to continue its march forward is to cooperate with Satan - the Father of Lies, the Accuser, the Prince of Darkness, the Ancient Tempter - in his titanic effort to enlist the whole world in mocking and obscuring the eternal, heavenly reality of Christ and his Bride.

This has been Satan’s quest from the beginning of time. And now forces within the Church - powerful western prelates, celebrity priests, and those within the vast bureaucracy of the Roman Catholic Church - increasingly seek to normalize homosexuality and consecrate same-sex couples as “married.” They act as allies of the Evil One as they display more faith in modern secular political correctness than they do in Jesus Christ, the Incarnate Word of God. Their lack of faith - their disbelief - is the fissure, the structural crack in the foundation of the Church now creeping up its brittle walls allowing the smoke of Satan to pour into the Church.

Same-sex marriage serves one purpose only: to ridicule, obscure, and annihilate Christ’s relationship with his Bride, the Church. It is Satan’s very public expression of his contempt for Christ and his Bride, representing his disdain and loathing for God’s plan since before the beginning of time. And Pope Francis has now, through garbled messaging, invited his shepherds and flock to align themselves with what will prove to be Satan’s greatest coup.

Tampons for men in crazy Canada

Canada has once again earned the title ‘world’s largest open-air asylum’ with the inmates in full control of the entire landmass now, headed up by the most unhinged politician on the planet Justin Trudeau.

In a huge step forward for humanity and all dirty old men who wear women’s clothing, the Crime Minister recently announced that all men’s bathrooms in federal buildings must stock free (taxpayer-funded) tampons. Banks, airports, military bases and train stations will also be required to stock the sanitary products in gents facilities.

At a time when Trudeau’s ultra liberal government is being blamed for record housing unaffordability, food bank usage, mass immigration, debt and legions of tent cities, the demented despot has laid out his moronic priorities against a backdrop of global ridicule.

“Back in the day, when only women menstruated, we had to pay for our own products,” Conservative Senator Linda Frum said.

“But now that men menstruate too, these products, as of this week, are mandated to be free in all men’s washrooms in all federal workplaces, including Parliament Hill.

The new federal mandate that came into effect on December 15 forces all Canadian federal workplaces to provide what are termed “menstruation kits” in men’s bathrooms to promote “inclusivity.”

The directive was issued by Employment and Social Development Canada, which claims giving out free pads and tampons in men’s bathrooms enables “menstruating persons to take part fully in the workforce and society at large.”

Trudeau continues to make Canada the laughing stock of the world. How a great country has fallen. But that’s the price of liberalism. What’s next? Urinals in ladies’ bathrooms? And if you don’t go along with it, expect to be thrown in a Soviet-style gulag and never seen again. With the appalling Varadcreep at the helm, Ireland is on the same slippery slope. We did try to warn you!

The Female Slavery Referendum

John Waters on the latest attempt by the regime to shred the Constitution

THE forthcoming ‘homemaker referendum, to be held in March, which canvasses the changing of the provision in Article 41 of the Irish Constitution guaranteeing to protect the right of women to work in the home, if they so wish, is set to become the occasion of non-stop misinformation by the Olympic-standard liars of the Irish Government, as they try to pass off an attempt to confiscate even more of the fundamental rights of Irish people as some kind of demonstration of their progressive and egalitarian instincts.

‘We will push back strongly against misinformation [in the coming referendum debates],’ the appalling Varadkar told reporters in December, added that those who engage in misinformation or disinformation concerning the referendum are going to be ‘called out.’

Perhaps he will begin by ceasing and desisting from trying to mislead the electorate in his presentation of the issues, thus obviating the need for his own lies to be ‘called out’ in the coming weeks and months? While it is never wise to rule out imbecility in considering any statement or action of an Irish politician, it is hard to believe that no mature person in the Department of Justice has pointed out to those involved that, legally speaking, they are uttering nonsense when they bleat on about the ‘outmoded’ and ‘sexist’ tenor of Article 41.2.

Article 41.2 does not, as they imply, confine women to a domestic role. It recognises the significant role played by wives and mothers in the home, which in no way excludes women and mothers from other roles and activities, or restricts them in any way. it offers them ‘choice’—a word that should awaken memories of another recent referendum. It is a recognition of the work performed by women in the home, on the basis that it has immense benefit for society.

Announcing the referendum in December, Education Minister Norma Foley spoke about the ‘wonderful carers in homes around Ireland include both men and women,’ as if she was saying something no-one had ever said before.

‘There are families where it is the dad who stays home,’ she said, as if she had ever before expressed concern for fathers or their treatment in law or otherwise by the Irish State.’

This is a Government with such contempt for the Irish population that it imagines a scatter of Woke verbiage will be sufficient to cloak every form of deceit and criminality.

Article 41.2 already contains implicit recognition of fathers and other categories of carers in the home. In DT v CT (2002) Murray J. specified that the Article could be interpreted as covering fathers’ roles in caring for their children and the home: It is also likely that, had the political thinking of the time not become so ideologically poisonous, this rumination would long since have become hard law, and would have been extended in its interpretation to people of both sexes working in the home to care for the elderly, the sick and the disabled. In a system which was overwhelmingly anti-father, Murray J. was an exceptionally pro-father judge. But had the political system not already been bought off by George Soros, it is likely that, over the past nearly three decades since the introduction of divorce, many more such unenumerated rights would have been identified in judgements of the High Court and Supreme Court.

Another reason why politicians did not favour such interpretations was their fear that they might lead to home carers becoming entitled, in time, to contributory pensions and the like. Indeed, if such a principle were to be established in court, it would stand in the way of the unannounced but already determined plan to introduce euthanasia for the purposes of population reduction and financial savings.

The homemaker has the ultimate career.

All other careers exist for one sole purpose only and that is to support the ultimate career.

C. S. Lewis.

Even a cursory reading of the present Article 41.2, and its proposed replacement, ought to raise loud alarm bells for any sentient person. The existing Article 41, reading from the top, reads:

1. The State recognises the Family as the natural primary and fundamental unit group of Society, and as a moral institution possessing inalienable and imprescriptible rights, antecedent and superior to a positive law.
2. The State, therefore, guarantees to protect the Family in its constitution and authority, as the necessary basis of social order and as indispensable to the welfare of the Nation and the State.
3. In particular, the State recognises that by her life within the home, woman gives to the State a support without which the common good cannot be achieved.
4. The State shall, therefore, endeavour to ensure that mothers shall not be obliged by economic necessity to engage in labour to the neglect of their duties in the home.

The change being proposed is the deletion of the last two paragraphs, referring explicitly to ‘woman’ and ‘mothers.’ A key phrase to be noted here is ‘shall not be obliged,’ which any half-literate nine year-old could read as indicating a non-compulsory principle.

The point of the article, taken on its face, is to give women the option to work in the home, if she so desires, and thereby not be required, by material or other circumstances, to work outside the home. Although no case has ever been taken to establish the point in case law, this in time might well have led to a requirement that women working in the home be entitled to some form of explicit payment on account of the support they provide, and ‘without which the common good cannot be achieved.’ It is possible that, as we are about to enter an era in which the concept of the ‘common good’ will in other contexts be employed a great deal to remove other kinds of rights, some sharp legal adviser to the political system recognised here a potential source of future bother. In any event, the Fortieth Amendment of the Constitution (Care) Bill 2023 proposes to delete Article 41.2 from the Constitution and insert an Article 42B with the following wording:

The State recognises that the provision of care, by members of a family to one another by reason of the bonds that exist among them, gives to Society a support without which the common good cannot be achieved, and shall strive to support such provision.

It does not require a legal expert to observe that the specific responsibility placed on the State by virtue of the requirement in the existing wording to ‘endeavour to ensure that mothers shall not be obliged by economic necessity to engage in (external) labour . . .’ is considerably more burdensome than simply requiring the State to ‘strive to support’ the provision of care ‘by members of a family to one another by reason of the bonds that exist among them.’ What, here, does ‘support’ mean?

Does this not imply that any raggle-taggle group of people declaring as a ‘family’ would be entitled to State support without requirement of any biological or formalised connection? Quite clearly, this would be the easiest thing in the world for a court to throw out, and thrown out it would be. It is, in short, a clownish proposal which burlesques the very idea of a constitution.

It is clear that, in the existing wording, a mother who is struggling to rear her family by virtue of remaining working exclusively in the home, would have standing to seek additional financial support from the State, whereas the revised guarantee might at best be interpreted as requiring the provision of occasional home assistance or respite to families struggling to care for their elderly or disabled relatives, which already happens in many cases, and without any requirement of a constitutional provision. This is the true situation that resides behind all the Woke untruths about the necessity to catch up with ‘modern social norms’ by dispensing with the ‘outdated’ and ‘sexist’ language of the present Article 41. The politicians seek to save money, presumably so they can spend it on foreign invaders, and are also anxious to ensure that no constitutional obstacles remain to their future plans for euthanasia, and other ‘progressive’ developments.

‘The current wording seeks to contain women in a very singular role, a role that’s completely divorced from the reality of women’s lives, of women’s careers across our state today,’ the appalling Varadkar claimed on announcing the referendum in December. All lies. The best approach in all such matters is to regard with suspicion anything offered by the type of purchased politician we deal with nowadays.

As Virgil had it: Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. We fear the Greeks when they bring gifts.

CANCER IS YOUR BODY HEALING

If you are caught up in the corrupt anti-health HSE industry, it is likely you will get a cancer diagnosis soon even though you may not have it at all. You more than likely will after you sign up to their poisonous chemotherapy and radiation regime which will probably kill you but is a great profit boost for Big PHarma who controls Irish hospitals.

The best way to avoid 'cancer' is to stay away from the Irish 'hell' system which has just culled and disabled a large segment of the Irish people with their killer jabs. Give up going for bloods, PSA screening, scans, mammograms and tubes up and down your orifices. It's one big racket designed to keep doctors rich and your nerves in a state of perpetual fear which will definitely make you sick in the long run.

We've been trained by the industrial medical regime to be terrified of the word cancer when in fact it is a sign that your body is trying to clean itself of toxins within - aka 'dis-ease' - and parcel them up for elimination. These toxins are likely to be parasites or caused by something you put into your system through the years - alcohol, tobacco, chemicals, vaccines, Pharma drugs, heavy metals and other poisons. A tumour is a sac of toxins contaminating the bloodstream that the body seals together in a tight parcel. Cutting it open is a recipe for disaster.

'The medical profession would have abolished the slash, burn and poison (surgery, radiation and chemotherapy) treatment long ago because the record of success simply isn't there. But the profits are and they are too alluring for those in the cancer industry to turn down.'

Burton Goldberg, An Alternative Medicine
Definitive Guide to Cancer

'To discover and understand the physical causes of cancer you will first need to let go of the idea that cancer is a powerful disease that must be fought. You never fight a symptom. You heal the carrier of the symptom. You get what you focus on. Focus on cancer and you get more cancer. Focus on health and that is what you get.'

Dr Leonard Coldwell

Follow these simple tips to keep your body toxin (cancer) free: Stay hydrated, alkaline and slim. Walk daily. Fast regularly to clean out residual debris which is broken down when you are hungry. Sweat through regular saunas, exercise and hot salt baths.

Swim in the sea. Eat plenty of raw greens, meat and fish. Juice with organic fruit. Bed two hours before midnight. Avoid all chemicals. Soak up the sun. Castor oil poultice. Practise your Catholic faith.

God is the eternal healer and medicine.

Without sugar, cancer cannot survive. Stop eating sugar and you starve cancer cells to death. This is why fasting is so healing.
Dr Otto Warburg won a Nobel Prize for proving that cancer cannot live in a high oxygen alkaline environment.
Increase circulation and you increase oxygen to the cells killing off toxins

The greatest threat to your health are Irish doctors and the poison pharma pills they push to maintain their wealthy lifestyles. How many did they kill with their deadly masks and vaccines during the Covid fraud? Did you know that several Pharma companies have criminal records for lying about their drugs including Pfizer who paid the biggest fine in criminal history: $2.3 billion. Irish doctors and hospitals are nothing more than drug pushers used by corrupt pharmaceuticals and puppeticians to keep you sick and in the money-grabbing pill-popping system. If you want to be healthy, stay a million miles away from them in 2024

Israel Craves Enmity

It's the latest psyop from Israel designed to fill its coffers and dupe the West

EVEN if what the mainstream media is pumping into the minds of its dumbed-down audiences right now is real - that is, the annihilation of what's left of Palestine - there's absolutely nothing anybody in Ireland can do about it and we should stay firmly out of the matter. We have enough problems of our own to deal with not least a vaccine genocide and the mass invasion of our country by illegal scammers.

But it's clear by now that many of the images of alleged Palestinian suffering coming out of Gaza are dubious to say the least, when examined in closer detail.

We know the Palestinian people have suffered hugely throughout the decades since the Jews were handed their homeland on a plate by the British. They have been genocided by the Israeli regime throughout its 80-year history. But the current turmoil is more of a psychological operation designed specifically to usher in widescale conflict in the region, create more global division and give the Israeli industrial terror complex more cash to continue its plague on the world. Hamas is nothing more than a wing of the Jewish terrorist state used to maintain Israeli victimhood and bully the international community into pouring more dollars into its coffers.

If you have given money to a Palestinian cause, well done! It's gone straight into the avaricious pockets of the Israeli government. The Jews who run Israel operate the most sophisticated surveillance state in the world. Not one ant crosses into Gaza or out without them knowing. There is nothing they do not know about what is happening there but in order to hold onto their victim status which brings in all the shekels, they have to have an enemy and that's where the Palestinians come in.

It's now emerging that Adolf Hitler was the worst exterminator in history and that the Jewish population actually grew during WWII, that he operated no gas chambers, did not kill six million and only wanted to drive Jewish usurious lending practices and sexual depravity out of Germany and preferably Western Europe. Holocaust denial is going mainstream, and in 2024, Hitler will be seen as a hero across the world.

This is causing widespread panic among the Jewish elite because it means the money that pours into Israel will start to run dry along with the tears that have been shed for them as Westerners waken up to the reality that they have been badly deceived.

All the anti-Semitic speech laws in the world are not going to stop this awakening

Like all psychopathic regimes, the Jewish elite wants the rest of the world to obsess over it at all times and feed it sympathy. Given the very real persecution of the Irish people through the centuries, we could have played that game but didn't because we adopted the Gospel and decided to focus on the suffering of Jesus for our sins and not wallow in self-pity. That mentality made the Irish a strong, friendly and hospitable nation wanting to take care of others but of course those benevolent traits have been utterly abused by the treasonous government who have used them to their advantage to destroy the country.

For Israel, it's more important to be hated than loved. They are desperate to begin another war (they have funded virtually all of them throughout their bloody history) hence the endless stream of atrocity propaganda coming out of Gaza. It's more than three months since the paraglider attacks on Israel - which were obviously a false flag carried out by the IDF (Israeli Defence Forces). If the bombings were real - and we cannot say they are not - every Palestinian would have evacuated the region by now. There's no shortage of fake photography coming out of Gaza such as the six-fingered child in the picture. AI lacks precision when it comes to fingers and toes.

Would you really risk hanging around waiting for an Israeli missile to drop and having your children bombed to oblivion? The Palestinians, who are an intelligent people, have viable escape routes into Egypt and other Arab nations, and would have left by now if they were in real danger. There is speculation that some of the scenes of rubble emerging from Gaza were produced in film studios, possibly even in Western countries. The sight of babies and small children being pulled from the rubble alive and kicking is simply not credible. Some of the hospital scenes defy logic too, with fake blood clearly being used and film crews always at the ready. Scenes of dry-eyed fathers parading the corpses of their dead babies around the streets are increasingly implausible when scrutinised carefully.

These scenes are being manufactured by Israel to engender more hatred against Jews so they can continue their 2,000-year plus sympathy psyop against the world. Israel has so much control over Gaza at this stage it can effectively use it as a film set and do whatever it wants with it. And it has no shortage of Arabs working for it who sold their souls long ago.

For decades, the Israeli military has been pumping pornography into the homes of Palestinians reducing the men to docile sex slaves who have no understanding of the national cause or how to defend it.

Some of the fake AI imagery coming out of Gaza showing a six-fingered boy

Just like the Irish, they are a shadow of themselves and will sell their souls to keep the Jewish money rolling in and taking on whatever tasks may be at hand. Another giveaway in this massive scam is how all of the Jewish-funded left-leaning organisations that have adopted and pushed every single woke agenda item for the last decade are suddenly turning against their paymaster and defending Palestine.

This has not happened by accident. It is because they are under orders to do so or the party will stop. Israel needs to give an appearance of being under attack in order to get the next big armament package from the White House. The current flattening of Gaza and all of its buildings is being done to force out any remaining Palestinians and create a new supply of immigrants to continue the great replacement of Europeans even though most of those landing will not be Palestinians but Pakistanis and other Muslim nationalities. Remember Ukraine? Many of the 'fleeing refugees' from that alleged warzone had very dark faces and wouldn't know how to spell Ukraine. Life in that country continued as normal for the most part during the so-called Russian invasion which was just another excuse to flood countries like Ireland with migrants. The takedown of Western Europe is at the heart of everything that is happening now and the Jews feel they are close to achieving it. In countries like Ireland, they get great satisfaction at seeing just how fast they have been able to subdue a people and steal their identity from them by sending swarms of migrants in to demoralise them.

Consumed with Jewish revenge over what they perceive to be the sins of the past and their hatred of the stupid goy - gentiles - they relish the prospect of bringing Europe to its knees and the ease with which they have been able to do it by buying off and blackmailing governments Epstein-style. People often ask: 'are you saying all Jews are bad.' Bad isn't the right word. In their rejection of Jesus Christ, they are rejecting the Word Incarnate and the Truth. If you were to ask the average secular Jew if they agree with abortion, LGBTQ, mass immigration, vaccines and all of the other New World Order agendas used to bring in the depopulated UN police state, they would probably say yes, they do.

At least 400 Jewish organisations support the killing of the unborn. Think about that. Their culture has been completely warped since the destruction of their Temple in 70AD when they became nothing more than a debating society based on the Christ-hating Talmud. Until such time as they reject their debased belief system and convert, we can expect their acts of destruction against the world to continue. But the clock is ticking. No Jewish empire has lasted more than 80 years. That means end times for Israel could be approaching in 2028. And that would mean brighter days ahead for the rest of the world.
